The Corporation of Cardiff on Monday unanimously decided to confer the freedom of the borough on Major-General Baden-Powell, in recognition of his gallant defence of Mafeking. Major-General Baden-Powell, writing from Mafeking on June 9, states that he has the greatest pleasure in accepting an invitation to dine at the Liverpool Conservative Club, and though it is impossible to fix a date at present, he hopes it will not be long before he will have the opportunity of visiting Liverpool and availing himself of the invitation.

Brigadier-General W. Hill, C.B., I.S.C., has been appointed to the command of the Derajat District.

Brigadier-General H. B. MacCall, C.B., late King's Royal Rifles, Deputy-Adjutant-General Punjab, has been confirmed in command of a Second Class District in India.

Colonel Sir Simon Lockhart, late 1st Life Guards, has taken over command of the cavalry at the Cnrragh for the drill season, with the temporary rank of Brigadier-General.

Colonel F. F. Ditmas, R.A., who attained the age limit of fifty-seven on the 1st inst., is specially retained, so that the Thames district, in which he commands the Royal Artillery, may have the advantage of his experience during the forthcoming mobilisation. It is hoped, therefore, that this popular officer may be allowed to complete five years in his present command. He had twenty years in the Field and Royal Horse Artillery before he became a garrison gunner.

Colonel F. Cochrane, late Hampshire Regiment, is to retain his appointment as Deputy Judge Advocate at Headquarters until September 30, when he will be placed on the retired list.

Colonel J. C. R. Glasgow, half pay, late of the Suffolk Regiment, has been selected for the command of the Regimental District, Warwick, vice Colonel E. Nesbitt, whose five years expire on the 30th inst.

Colonel F. H. Plowden, 2nd Batn. Oxfordshire Light Infantry, who has been granted an extension of command of his battalion until September 30 is officiating in command of a brigade in India.

Colonel Neville Chamberlain, I.S.C., who has been private secretary to Lord Roberts in South Africa since his lordship's arrival at Cape Town in December last, has accepted the appointment of Inspector-General of the Irish Constabulary, and takes up his duties in Dublin in September.

Colonel Lord Stanley, 2nd V.B. Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, and late of the Grenadier Guards, who has been acting as Press Censor, will succeed Colonel Neville Chamberlain as Lord Roberts' private secretary.

Colonel A. G. Fife, late 6th Dragoon Guards, who has been Adjutant and Clerk of the Cheque of the Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms since July, 1891, has been appointed Standard Bearer, vice Major P. Limbooch, who has retired on half pay, after filling the office since December 18, 1886. Colonel Fife wears the medal with clasp for the Fenian Raid, 1886, and the medal for the Afghan Campaign, 1879-80.

Colonel G. L. R. Richardson, C.I.E., 18th Bengal Cavalry, has been selected for the command of the Cavalry Brigade.

Colonel F. C. Hill, retired list, late commandant of the Royal Hibernian Military School, Dublin, has been granted a Distinguished Service Reward. Owing to a similarity of names, Colonel H. Hall, the present commandant of the school, was mentioned last week as having received the reward.

Lieut.-Colonel C. E. de la P. Beresford has returned to St. Petersburg and resumed his duties as Military Attaché, from a tour of the Russian garrisons in Central Asia. Colonel Beresford is most popular at St. Petersburg, and every endeavour was made, therefore, to ensure his comfort at all the posts he visited.

Lieut.-Colonel J. Hopton, Highland Light Infantry, the officiating commandant at Hythe, won the first prize in the Waldegrave Competition, at Bisley, on Monday, (£10), with a score of 95, the conditions being (M.R.) 800 and 900 yards; ten shots at each distance. He also made top score in the Regulars and Volunteers' Competition, 194, Major T. Lamb, 1st Batn. South Lancashire Regiment, being second with 187.

Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. E. H. Legge, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, late of the Coldstream Guards, fell unconscious in a fit in the Colonnade at the House of Commons shortly before noon on Monday. He was carried to the residence of the Sergeant-at-Arms, and was first attended by Dr. Farquharson, M.P., who happened to be in the vicinity. Medical assistance was also obtained from Westminster Hospital. Colonel Legge subsequently partially recovered consciousness, and was carried to bed. He has been making good progress since and will be moved immediately to his country place at Dorking.

In the list of Civil Service pensions for the year ending June 20, 1900, the sum of £30 a year is stated to have been granted to Emma, Lady Ellis, "in consideration of the public service in West Africa of her late husband, Lieut.-Colonel A. B. Ellis, C.B., West India Regiment, and of her inadequate means of support."

Lieut.-Colonel Eustace Balfour is said to have tendered his resignation of the command of the London Scottish Volunteers. The actual cause of the dispute between him and the War Office is really one of finance. Those who know this able and popular officer are too ready to recognise his zeal and enthusiasm to suppose that he would have taken the step he has done unless he felt that his position had been rendered impossible. He is not an impossible man himself, for he is always on the side of conciliation. Respected by his men, a keen soldier, and a devoted Volunteer, we can only hope that steps may be taken to bring about an understanding, for the loss of an officer of Colonel Balfour's sterling qualities would be much felt, not only in the London Scottish but throughout the Volunteer Service.

Major C. S. O. Monck, 3rd Batn. Coldstream Guards, has joined at Aldershot as Staff Captain.

Major A. F. Mockler-Ferryman, Oxfordshire Light Infantry, has been promoted to a half-pay Lieut.-Colonelcy and has been appointed Professor of Military Topography at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst.

Major F. W. P. Angelo, 9th Bengal Cavalry and Captain V. B. Fane, 1st Punjab Cavalry, have been appointed to the staff of Brigadier-General Richardson, who has been selected for the command of the cavalry of the Indian Contingent in China.

Majors R. W. Sherrard, 5th Bombay Infantry, and R. Southey, 30th Bombay Infantry, have passed the tactical examination qualifying for the command of a Native regiment.

Major Sir John Willoughby, late Royal Horse Guards, who served on Colonel Mahon's staff, with the Mafeking Relief Column, left Cape Town on Wednesday for England.

Brevet-Major T. E. Scott, D.S.O., 3rd Sikhs, has been selected for service in China with the 1st Sikhs; Lieuts. C. D. Duxbury, 17th Madras Infantry, and Torrie, 23rd Madras Infantry, with the 1st Madras Pioneers; Lieuts. A. L. Keble, 14th Madras Infantry, H. F. Shairp, 19th Madras Infantry, and E. F. Harding, 23rd Madras Infantry, with the 3rd Madras Infantry.

Major Lord Farnham, late 4th Batn. Royal Irish Fusiliers, and formerly Lieut. 98th Regt., has been appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Cavan.

Brevet-Major C. W. Gwynn, R.E., having completed his period of special service in the Egyptian Soudan, has returned to England.

Captain A. C. S. Simpson, R.G.A., has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 2nd Cinque Ports Volunteer Artillery.

Major (Captain) A. H. Morris, D.S.O., Royal Irish Regiment, is spoken very highly of by Sir Frederick Hodgson, Governor of the Gold Coast, for the work he has done since his arrival at Kumasi. Sir Frederick, writing from Ekwanta on the 26th ult., said:—"Major Morris arrived at Kumasi on May 15. His services in these anxious and trying times have been invaluable to me. I cannot speak too highly of the way in which he carried out arrangements for leaving Kumasi."

Captain W. H. Dent, Durham Light Infantry and Lieuts. A. H. Johnson, Lincolnshire Regiment, and R. T. Toke, Welsh Regiment, have left Wei-hai-Wei, with the remainder of the trained men of the Chinese Regiment, for Taku.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

INNISKILLINGS.—Apply for information through your commanding officer.

FIELD STATE.—It has only taken the form of suggestion at present.

I. L. S.—Nothing can be said until next Session, as, notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the subject has not yet come up for consideration.

STAFF EMPLOY.—A most useful idea.

INQUIRY.—In all probability.

RELIEFS.—The programme will necessarily be upset to some extent by the difficulty in China.

MILITIA OFFICERS.—It ought to have been foreseen. We quite agree with you, but it is too late now to look for redress, we fear.

R. G. A.—The moment is inopportune.

Army Foreign.

At the beginning of 1894 the Japanese Army on a peace footing consisted of 69,000 officers and men. After the war with China, a programme of Army expansion was laid down, in terms of which the Japanese land forces were ultimately to amount to 145,000 men on a peace footing, and between 530,000 and 540,000 on a war footing.

New regulations have been promulgated by the German War Office for the guidance of officers applying for leave to visit France. They lay down that:—(1) Leave to visit in the immediate neighbourhood of fortified places on the eastern French frontier, such as Verdun, Toul, Nancy, Epinal, Belfort, Rheims, and Langres, shall only be granted in very special circumstances, such as the residence of near relations in the places visited. (2) Having regard to the French law of espionage of April 18, 1886, each officer before going away on leave should be warned to hold himself strictly aloof from anything to which the slightest suspicion could be attached, and on no account to omit to record his correct name, position, and nationality in the visitors' list at the inns and police stations. (3) It is the duty of each officer within twenty-four hours of his arrival in a garrison town to give, personally or in writing, notice of his place of residence to the senior officer, or at the headquarters, and in Paris also to the German Ambassador.

This year, as last, the largest possible number of superior officers of artillery are to take part in the French autumn manoeuvres either as staff-officers or as spectators, irrespective of the troops which they command being engaged in the manoeuvres or not. As a first step towards this, the generals commanding Army corps have been requested to send in a list of superior officers of artillery in their districts whose men are not taking part in the manoeuvres, stating at the same time which officers wish to be present at this year's manoeuvres and which officers attended last year's manoeuvres.

The Russian military authorities have been for some time past carrying out experiments with different quick-firing guns for field artillery. One gun made under the instructions of General Engelhart has given so much satisfaction that 1,000 are being issued for practical experiment. They will be distributed among the Russian troops in Europe, and if they withstand the severe tests of everyday use more will be ordered. If they fail to reach the desired standard they will be handed over to the troops in Asiatic Russia. In the meantime, experiments are being continued with guns imported from other countries. The approximate number of guns required is 6,000. The total cost will be about 120,000,000 roubles, or £12,600,000, to which may be added another £1,000,000 to cover expenses of enlarging the Government workshops and increasing their powers of production. The work and the expense will naturally be spread over a period of four or five years.

The French are active in Tunis, and on the Tripolitan frontier works are now in progress for the construction of a heavy embankment at the mouth of Bizerta harbour. On the embankment heavy guns are to be mounted, so that any hostile warship trying to approach the port would be covered continuously by their fire. In addition to this embankment works are to be constructed on the Island of Gerba. The plans are all ready, and three French generals recently reported in favour of the construction of the works in order to complete the defences intended to render Bizerta an absolutely impregnable naval base.

Captain Cei-Rigotti, of the Italian Army, has produced a new automatic rifle. The chief feature is the employment of a part of the gas generated by the discharge of each cartridge in working a rotatory cylinder, which extracts the empty cartridge case and automatically recharges the weapon from the magazine. The mechanism is said to be very simple.

THE War Office has approved of the adoption by the Artists' Rifles (20th Middlesex) of a C.I.V. pattern hat.

BISLEY MEETING.

The National Rifle Association opened their annual prize meeting at Bisley on Saturday last with the Evelyn Wood Competition. The nine competing companies all marched from Aldershot within the time allowed and without any casualties of any kind. It might have been expected that the shooting this year would be below the average. As it was, the companies who had survived the preliminary competitions were, eight of them, of the 2nd Batn. Highland Light Infantry or of the King's Own Lancaster Regiment. The remaining company was E Co. Royal Home Counties Reserve Regiment, which, it is pleasant to observe, was not last. The results were exceptionally good:—

A Co. 2nd Batn. Highland L.I. (Lieut. Chichester) (Cup and £20) ...	172
E Co. Lancaster Regt. (Capt. Johnson) (£10) ...	141½
D Co. Lancaster Regt. (Lieut. Dobson) (£8) ...	138½
F Co. 2nd Batn. Highland L.I. (Major Somerville) (£5) ...	128
G Co. 2nd Batn. Highland L.I. (Lieut. Pringle) (£5) ...	122½
B Co. Lancaster Regt. (Lieut. Thrapp) (£4) ...	113
C Co. Lancaster Regt. (Lieut. Balfour) ...	113
E Co. Roy. Home Counties Reserve Regt. (Capt. Ford Mellows) ...	109½
A Co. Lancaster Regt. (Lieut. Morrah) ...	106½

SICK AND WOUNDED OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The outbreak of hostilities in China and on the West Coast of Africa must, it is feared, result in the early arrival of many naval, military, and other officers invalided home from the operations now being carried on in those quarters. Would you kindly allow me to make known through your columns that this committee, originally formed to provide medical and surgical aid for those who have suffered in South Africa, will be equally prepared to render assistance to officers returning home from these other theatres of war. Applications should be addressed to the Hon. Arthur Brodrick, at Hampden House.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, July 7.

At midnight the War Office received a despatch from Lord Roberts reporting from Pretoria that Major-Gen. Paget had engaged the enemy at Pleisfontein, and driven him out of a strong position 15 miles north-west of Bethlehem. Ex-President Steyn had taken flight to the mountains. Sir Redvers Buller had reported the line to Heidelberg restored and in working order. The Boers were still face to face with Lieut.-Gen. Pole-Carew, who was entrenched to the north-west of Pretoria. Lieut.-Gen. French was reinforcing him.

Sir Redvers Buller arrived at Pretoria during the morning, being most cordially received by Lord Roberts and staff. He is said to look none the worse for the hard work he has gone through during the last eight months. He left again in the evening after a long consultation.

To-day 800 prisoners of the 4th Batn. Derbyshire Regiment and Imperial Yeomanry were put over the border from Reitz. No officers accompanied them.

Lord Roberts in a report to the War Office to-day stated that in consequence of the efforts of the enemy to get round the right flank of his position, he despatched the mounted forces under Gen. Hutton and Col. Mahon with orders to drive the Boers to the east of Bronkhorst Spruit, which is about forty miles from Pretoria on the Middelburg line. Col. Mahon was attacked to-day by about 3,000 Boers with artillery, but he succeeded in carrying out his instructions with slight loss.

Major Hanbury Tracy, who commands at Rustenburg, was called upon during the morning by a party of Boers under Limmer to surrender the town and garrison. He replied that he held Rustenburg for her Majesty's Government, and intended to continue occupying it. The enemy then opened fire with artillery, and tried to take the heights which command the town. In this they did not succeed, owing to the excellent arrangements made by the British commander and his officers, and were eventually driven off with the assistance of Col. Holdsworth, 7th Hussars, who made a rapid march of 48 miles from the neighbourhood of Zeerust, with Bushmen under Col. Airey, hearing that Rustenburg was likely to be threatened. The enemy suffered heavy loss, and five prisoners were captured. Our casualties were:—Bushmen, two killed; Capt. Mackoltie and three men wounded.

Sunday, July 8.

According to a despatch from Lord Roberts Gen. Hutton was attacked to-day in the position he was holding by a large number of Boers. He beat them off without much difficulty, the 5in. guns with him being found most useful. Our only casualty was Lieut. Young, 1st Batn. Canadian Mounted Rifles, slight wound of scalp. The enemy left several of their wounded on the ground, and sent in a flag of truce with a request that they might be received into our field hospital. The Imperial Light Horse again came prominently under notice. Lord Roberts says:—"One squadron of this distinguished corps pressed a very superior force of the enemy in a gallant attempt to carry off a wounded comrade, to which is attributable the heavy losses it sustained."

Mr. Steyn and Gen. de Wet, with about 3,000 men, stated to have retired to Fouriesberg, a small town about ten miles from the Basuto border, between Bethlehem and Ficksburg.

Tuesday, July 10.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram to the War Office, sent from Pretoria at 12.20 p.m., gave particulars of the fighting near Bethlehem. His lordship said:—

"Clements' and Paget's forces entered Bethlehem on the 7th inst. The former, on nearing the town on the 6th, sent in a flag of truce demanding its surrender. This was refused by C. de Wet, when Paget, making a wide turning movement, succeeded in getting hold of the most important part of the enemy's position covering the town. This was carried before dark by the Munster Fusiliers and the Yorkshire Light Infantry. The following morning the attack was continued, and by noon the town was in our possession, and the enemy in full retreat. Our casualties were four officers wounded: Capt. G. Macpherson, dangerously; Capt. W. Oakes, severely; 2nd Lieut. Conway, severely (all of the Royal Munster Fusiliers); and 2nd Lieut. Boyd-Rochford, 4th Batn. Scottish Rifles, slightly. Thirty-two men of the Munster Fusiliers were wounded, and one man missing. Seven men of the Yorkshire Light Infantry wounded, one man of the 58th Company Imperial Yeomanry was killed, and two men wounded. Paget reports that but for the accurate practice by the 38th Battery Royal Field Artillery and the C.I.V. Battery, under Major McMicking, the casualties would have been many more."

A second despatch sent off at 12.40 p.m. was to this effect:—

"Further information regarding capture of Bethlehem now received from Clements. He states that the country is broken and difficult, and in consequence his and Paget's cavalry were unable to make any wide turning movement. Clements attacked one position while Paget attacked another. The one assailed by Clements was gallantly captured by the Royal Irish Regiment, who captured a gun of 97th Battery which was lost at Stormberg. List of casualties not yet received, but Clements states they are few, considering the strength of the positions assaulted. Hunter's cavalry under Broadwood reach (? reached) Bethlehem on the 8th, and Hunter with the main force was within nine miles of the town when Clements despatched his report."

In another telegram Lord Roberts stated that:—"Baden-Powell reached Rustenburg the evening of the 8th inst., without opposition. He found all quiet, and public confidence entirely satisfactory, thanks to prompt and bold grasp of situation taken by Major Hanbury Tracy. The district west of this is somewhat unsettled, owing to the presence of the small force which attacked Rustenburg being still in that neighbourhood. Measures are being taken to meet this."

Wednesday, July 11.

Our arms met with a serious reverse to-day. A force consisting of five companies of the Lincolnshire Regiment, one squadron of the Royal Scots Greys, with two guns of O Battery Royal Horse Artillery, held a pass on the Rustenburg road to the west of Pretoria. Last night a large force of Boers occupied some hills overlooking and commanding the road, a position of which the British infantry had unaccountably neglected to take possession. At daybreak the Boers attacked the camp. The British force seems to have been taken by surprise. The Boers opened with small arms at a range of 300 yards, while their artillery was also brought into play. The Boer fire did terrible execution among the British force. The survivors took the best cover available, and although for some time they maintained a desperate resistance, they were compelled to surrender, with the exception of some of the Scots Greys, who got away. Simultaneously with this attack on the Rustenburg road a Boer force made an attack on a cavalry outpost at Wonderboom. The post was held by the 7th Dragoon Guards, who, although they had to retire eastward, had few casualties. Gen. Botha also delivered an attack, but was repulsed with loss. From particulars furnished by Reuter's special correspondent, it appears that five companies of the Lincolnshire Regiment were ordered on Tuesday to hold the pass through Magalesberg, in the neighbourhood of Daspoort Fort. They reached the pass in the afternoon. Three companies, with two guns of O Battery, R.H.A., took up a position in the pass and camped the night there, leaving the other companies in the plain some distance south of the pass. The eastern hill presented a rugged, rocky, and inaccessible face, but farther east it was apparently approachable from the main ridge. At daybreak as shots were being fired by the men forming the pickets placed on a small kopje north of the pass, the Boers appeared on the eastern kopje, and opened a heavy fire. Confusion ensued, but the colonel soon made his voice heard, and commanded the men to take up a position on a kopje west of the gap. Thence a hot fire ensued during the whole day. Two guns with an escort of Scots Greys having been placed in advance of the main body were captured after making a heroic resistance. Nearly every man was killed or wounded. The Maxim sergeant brought his gun into action early in the day, but the opposing fire was too hot and he was obliged to retire. This he did successfully, saving the gun with the aid of seven volunteers. Meanwhile the Boers were keeping up a continuous fire all along the line, the Lincolns gallantly replying. About three o'clock the enemy appeared on the left of the British position. One officer and 15 men made a valiant attempt to charge the enemy, and 14 of the little band were killed or wounded. The three companies of the Lincolns were now practically surrounded, but they never wavered. Their firing was a model of steadiness. They had to be as economical as possible with their ammunition, as there was no chance of obtaining further supplies. Towards nightfall all the ammunition was expended.

The latest arrival from the scene of the engagement states that the men were taking good cover with fixed bayonets at the moment of his escape.

The presence of a number of Boers in the neighbourhood of a line of kopjes north of the town—one position of which was held by the 7th Dragoon Guards, whilst the rest had been patrolled—was ascertained to-day. At early dawn yesterday Commandant Grobelaar seized a favourable position, and the Dragoon Guards, after offering a stubborn resistance, were obliged to retire. They were supported by two horse guns, which rendered good service. Commandant Grobelaar subsequently asked for an ambulance, which was sent to him. The scene of the skirmish was 8,000 yards due north of Wonderboom Fort. The British cavalry prevented the enemy from making a turning movement towards the extreme left of Gen. Pole-Carew's position.

Gen. Clery's command at Greylingstad was reunited this afternoon, in view of the fact that two bodies of the enemy were threatening the railway line. One of them, under Commandant Viljoen, shelled a convoy on Saturday on the north-east side of the railway; and the other under Field Cornet Buys, consisting of 100 men, was eight miles to the west of these operations on Saturday night, cutting the telegraph wire, and subsequently destroying a part of the railway track near Waterval, 16 miles to the south. Telegraphic communication with Vlakfontein was restored on Monday night. Gen. Buller, returning from Pretoria, through Vlakfontein and Heidelberg on Sunday, left here for Standerton yesterday.

Thursday, July 12.

A telegram reached the War Office before midnight, having been despatched from Pretoria at 7.52 p.m., giving particulars of yesterday's disaster:

"The enemy, having failed in their attempt to get round our right rear, as mentioned in my telegram of the 9th inst., made a determined attack on our right flank yesterday, and, I regret to say, succeeded in capturing Nital's Nek, garrisoned by one squadron Scots Greys, two guns O Battery, R.H.A., and five companies of the Lincolnshire Regiment. The enemy attacked in superior numbers at dawn, and seizing the hills which commanded the nek, brought a heavy converging fire to bear upon the small garrison. Nital's Nek is about 18 miles from here, near where the road crosses the Crocodile River. It was held by us in order to maintain road and telegraphic communications with Rustenburg. Fighting lasted, more or less, throughout the day, and immediately on receiving information in the early morning of the enemy's strength, I despatched reinforcements from here under Colonel Godfrey, King's Own Scottish Borderers. Before, however, they reached the spot, the garrison was overpowered. The two guns and a greater portion of the squadron of the Greys were captured owing to their horses being shot, as were also about 90 men of the Lincoln Regiment. The list of casualties has not yet reached me, but I fear it is a heavy one. Simultaneously an attack was made on our outposts near Derdepoort, north of the town, in which the 7th Dragoon Guards were engaged. The regiment, which was handled with considerable skill by Lieut.-Col. Lowe, kept the enemy in check until he retired on his supports, and would probably have suffered but slight loss, had not one troop mistaken some Boers in the bushes for our men. Smith-Dorrien had a successful engagement with the enemy yesterday afternoon near Krugersdorp. He inflicted heavy loss on them. Buller reports that the Boers, who were destroying his line of railway near Paardekraal, were driven off yesterday after a short action. Hart reports from Heidelberg that the surrendering of arms and ammunition continues to be made by the Boers in that district."

Col. Mahon, reinforced by one of French's brigades, took with considerable dash all the positions held by the Boers in the neighbourhood of Rietfontein. A number of the enemy's dead were found on the field. The British casualties were trifling.

Lord Roberts's proclamation restricting mining operations in Johannesburg has been rescinded. Where necessity is shown, permits will be granted to resume mining, and facilities to obtain coal and labour will be given. Work has been resumed at several mines.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It was announced in last Friday's London Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to signify her intention of conferring the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers, non-commissioned officer and trooper, whose claims have been submitted for her Majesty's approval for their conspicuous bravery in South Africa, as stated against their names:—

"Capt. Ernest Beckwith Towse, Gordon Highlanders.—On Dec. 11, 1899, at the action of Magersfontein, Capt. Towse was brought to notice by his commanding officer for his gallantry and devotion in assisting the late Col. Downman, when mortally wounded, in the retirement, and endeavouring, when close up to the front of the firing line, to carry Col. Downman on his back; but, finding this not possible, Capt. Towse supported him till joined by Colour-Serjt. Nelson and Lance-Corpl. Hodgson. On April 30, Capt. Towse, with 12 men, took up a position on the top of Mount Thaba, far away from support. A force of about 150 Boers attempted to seize the same plateau, neither party appearing to see the other until they were but 100 yards apart. Some of the Boers then got within 40 yards of Capt. Towse and his party, and called on him to surrender. He at once caused his men to open fire and remained firing himself until severely wounded (both eyes shattered), succeeding in driving off the Boers. The gallantry of this officer in vigorously attacking the enemy (for he not only fired, but charged forward) saved the situation, notwithstanding the numerical superiority of the Boers.

"Capt. Charles FitzClarence, Royal Fusiliers.—On Oct. 14, 1899, Capt. FitzClarence went with his squadron of the Protectorate Regiment, consisting of only partially trained men, who had never been in action, to the assistance of an armoured train which had gone out from Mafeking. The enemy were in greatly superior numbers, and the squadron was for a time surrounded, and it looked as if nothing could save them from being shot down. Capt. FitzClarence, however, by his personal coolness and courage, inspired the greatest confidence in his men, and, by his bold and efficient handling of them, not only succeeded in relieving the armoured train, but inflicted a heavy defeat on the Boers, who lost 60 killed and a large number wounded. His own losses being two killed and 15 wounded. The moral effect of this blow had a very important bearing on subsequent encounters with the Boers. On Oct. 27, 1899, Capt. FitzClarence led his squadron from Mafeking across the open, and made a night attack with the bayonet on one of the enemy's trenches. A hand-to-hand fight took place in the trench, while a heavy fire was concentrated on it from the rear. The enemy was driven out with heavy loss. Capt. FitzClarence was the first man into the position, and accounted for four of the enemy with his sword. The British lost six killed and nine wounded. Capt. FitzClarence was himself slightly wounded. With reference to these two actions, Major-Gen. Baden-Powell states that had this officer not shown an extraordinary spirit and fearlessness, the attacks would have been failures, and we should have suffered heavy loss both in men and prestige. On Dec. 26, 1899, during the action at Game Tree, near Mafeking, Capt. FitzClarence again distinguished himself by his coolness and courage, and was again wounded (severely through both legs).

"Lieut. (now Capt.) Sir John P. Milbanke, Bart., 10th Hussars.—On Jan. 5, during a reconnaissance near Colesberg, Sir John Milbanke, when retiring under fire with a small patrol of the 10th Hussars, notwithstanding the fact that he had just been severely wounded in the thigh, rode back to the assistance of one of the men, whose pony was exhausted, and who was under fire from some Boers who had dismounted. Sir John Milbanke took the man up on his own horse under a most gallant fire and brought him safely back to camp.

"Sergt. H. R. Martineau, Protectorate Regiment.—On Dec. 26, 1899, during the fight at Game Tree, near Mafeking, when the order to retire had been given, Sergt. Martineau stopped and picked up Corpl. Le Camp, who had been struck down about ten yards from the Boer trenches, and half dragged, half carried him towards a bush about 150 yards from the trenches. In doing this Sergt. Martineau was wounded in the side, but paid no attention to it, and proceeded to staunch and bandage the wounds of his comrade, whom he afterwards assisted to retire. The firing while they were retiring was very heavy, and Sergt. Martineau was again wounded. When shot the second time he was absolutely exhausted from supporting his comrade, and sank down, unable to proceed further. He received three wounds, one of which necessitated the amputation of his arm near the shoulder.

"Trpr. H. E. Ramsden, Protectorate Regiment.—On Dec. 26, 1899, during the fight at Game Tree, near Mafeking, after the order to retire was given, Trpr. H. E. Ramsden, picked up his brother, Trpr. A. E. Ramsden, who had been shot in both legs and was lying about ten yards from the Boer trenches, and carried him about 600 or 800 yards under a heavy fire (putting him down from time to time for a rest) till they met some men, who helped to carry him to a place of safety."

THE Weekly Dispatch is making an effort to assist the relatives of deceased soldiers to recover sums of money due to them as next-of-kin. Any relative of a soldier whose name appears in these lists is invited to communicate with the Commissioner appointed by the Dispatch, and on doing so will receive assistance. The action of our contemporary is worthy of all praise, as no expense is to be spared in assisting a friendless class of the community.

COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY.

1. The measures recently adopted having produced a sufficient supply of officers for the infantry of the Line, no more direct commissions in this arm will be issued during the present year, except for distinguished service and as specified in Paragraph 11. Direct commissions in the cavalry and artillery will not be discontinued for the present, but only specially qualified candidates will be selected.

MILITIA COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

2. A competitive examination for Militia candidates for the regular forces will be held on Sept. 28 next, and the following days, in accordance with the "Regulations under which Commissions in the Army may be obtained by Officers of the Militia," published with Army Order 141 of 1899. The "colloquial examination" in languages, laid down in the regulations, will, however, not be held. The marks allotted to it will be distributed over the papers in the language concerned.

3. A competitive examination under the old system will be held at the same time, at which those candidates who hold a certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners exempting them from further literary test, and who are otherwise eligible, may present themselves for examination in fortification (military engineering), military topography, the elements of tactics and military law, only. The number of commissions allotted to this examination will bear the same proportion to that allotted to the examination under the new system that the number of candidates presenting themselves for it bears to the number of those presenting themselves for the new examination.

4. To qualify candidates to attend these examinations, they will be allowed to count one month's continuous service with an embodied Militia corps, or in special employment on military duty with the regular forces, in lieu of one training. They will also be allowed to count four months' continuous service in either position in lieu of two trainings.

5. The examination in London will take place by the permission of the Senate at the London University.

6. One hundred and ten commissions will be awarded, namely:—10 Cavalry, 20 Royal Artillery, 5 Foot Guards, 70 Infantry, 5 West India Regiment.

The cavalry and foot guards will be taken on one list, and no candidate will be accepted for the foot guards unless he is among the first fifteen on the combined cavalry and foot guards list. At least one-half of the successful artillery candidates will receive commissions in the Royal Field Artillery.

MARKS FOR SERVICE.

7. To meet the cases of candidates whose preparation for the competitive examination has suffered through their being called upon to serve with their embodied corps, or through their being employed with regular troops, marks for service will be given as follows:—

Thirty marks will be given for every day's actual service (exclusive of leave of absence or sick leave) with an embodied Militia corps at home, or at a foreign station other than South Africa and St. Helena; also for every day's actual service from Dec. 4, 1899—the date on which the embodiment of the Militia commenced—in military employment with regular troops.

Forty marks will be given for every day's actual service (exclusive of leave of absence or sick leave) with an embodied Militia corps, or in military employment with regular troops, in South Africa and St. Helena.

Thirty marks will be given for every day of passage to or from a foreign station.

8. In order that candidates who served with the Militia last year may reap some benefit from this, thirty marks will be given for every day's actual training (exclusive of leave of absence or sick leave) last year.

9. These marks for service will be added to those made by the candidate in the competitive examination, and his place determined by the total.

10. In order to place all candidates on an equality as regards the marks obtainable by service and those obtainable in the competitive examination, the total number of marks for each of the four military subjects for candidates under the old system (see Paragraph 3) will be raised to 5,000 per subject. This will not in any way affect the competition of these candidates inter se, but will make the relation between service marks and examination marks the same, in their case, as in that of candidates under the new system.

MILITIA BATTALIONS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

11. As, in the event of there being any Militia battalions on service in South Africa, or on passage, at the time the competitive examination is held, it will not be possible for their candidates to attend the examination, commissions will be specially set apart for such battalions, in addition to those enumerated in Paragraph 6. The number of such commissions will bear the same proportion to that allotted for competition that the number of Militia battalions in South Africa, or on passage, on Sept. 28, bears to the number elsewhere. These commissions will be filled by nomination by the military authorities in South Africa.

12. Applications, as laid down in Paragraph 6 of the "Regulations under which Commissions in the Army may be obtained by Officers of the Militia" should be sent in so as to reach the War Office not later than Aug. 15 for candidates at home, and Sept. 15 for candidates abroad. In addition to the particulars given in these applications, commanding officers will forward, so as to reach the War Office by Oct. 15, a return showing the number of days' actual service, in the various categories described in Paragraphs 7 and 8, which candidates have performed by Sept. 28.

13. The successful candidates will be examined by a medical board, and no candidate will be accepted unless recommended by this board as physically fit for her Majesty's service. The recommendation of the board will, in all cases, be absolutely final.

THE ASHANTI RISING.

Telegram from Sir F. Hodgson to Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

"Akwasobu, July 1.

"Crossed Ofin River June 30 and July 1. Following Europeans left Kumasi with force:—Governor of Gold Coast, Lady Hodgson, Commissioner and Commandant Morris, Special Service Officers Marshall (and) Dignan, Insp.-Gen. Aplin, Travelling Commissioner Armitage, Insp. Parmeter, Asst.-Insp. Leggett (and) Berthon, Gold Coast Constabulary (and) Cochrane, (and) Read, Lagos Constabulary; Medical Officers Garland, Chalmers, Tweedy, Graham, Cold Coast Colony, (and) Macfarlane of Lagos; Telegraph Clerk-in-Charge Branch; Members of Basel Mission, namely, Ramseyer, two Jost, two Haasis, Weller, last named dangerously ill; David Grundy, of Ashanti Company. Regret to inform you (of) death from wounds of Marshall, Leggett, former June 28, latter June 29. Passage across Ofin River very difficult owing to floods. Hardships of journey from Kumasi have been very severe. Most of the severely wounded Hausas have since died, others are missing. In addition to officers mentioned in previous telegram as left in charge of fort add name of Hay, medical officer."

Telegram from Col. Willcocks:—

"Kwisa, July 7.

"Arrived to-day without opposition. Despatch received from Lieut.-Colonel Burroughs reports attack on Kokofus with West African Regiment. Attack repulsed with loss of Lieut. Brounlie, 2nd Batn. West India Regiment, attached for duty to West African Regiment, and also several native soldiers, killed in action; total number of casualties, 72. I will advance to Bekwai tomorrow."

"Essian Kwanta, July 8.

"Arrived to-day from Kwisa, being met at Domposi by 300 West African Regiment from Bekwai, in accordance with arrangement. Simultaneous approach of troops frustrated attempt of enemy's forces (to) fight. In the engagement at Kokofu already notified, following British officers slightly wounded; Burroughs, Tighe, Stallard, Ellis, Gibson, St. Hill, all West African Regiment; and also Sergt.-Major Boshier, West African Frontier Force; and also rank and file 30 West African Frontier Force and 30 West African Regiment."

A Reuter's telegram states that Sir Frederic and Lady Hodgson arrived at Cape Coast Castle on Tuesday and were to leave on Wednesday for Accra by H.M.S. Dwarf.

Reuter's correspondent telegraphed from Fumso on Thursday:—

"Colonel Willcocks arrived at Bekwai on the 9th inst., after another smart march. The garrison, Dr. Ashby, and the mining party were well. There are many surmises as to whether the commandant will attack Kumasi. It is impossible to say owing to the secrecy observed."

LORD STRATHCONA has received a telegram from Sir Redvers Buller at Standerton: "Your fine regiment joined my force during the march to Standerton. I am very glad to have them; it is like being with old friends, and they are most useful."

It is intimated from the War Office that the Commander-in-Chief has been greatly disappointed at finding in many instances that the instructions for training the Militia this year have, both in letter and in spirit, been incorrectly interpreted by those responsible for the efficiency of the troops.

Obituary.

Major-Gen. Sir Charles Walters D'Oyly, ninth baronet, retired list Indian Staff Corps, died at his residence, Newlands, Blandford, on the 11th inst. Born in 1822, he was educated at Addiscombe, and succeeded his father, Sir John Hadley D'Oyly, in the title in 1869. He entered the Indian Army in 1842, and served in the Gwalior campaign, including the battle of Punniar on Dec. 29, 1843, obtaining the bronze star, and in the Indian Mutiny campaign, receiving the medal and the thanks of the Government. He obtained his Lieut.'s commission in 1844, and promotion to Captain in 1855. From 1852 to 1856 he served as A.D.C. to Lord Dalhousie, Governor-General of India. In 1862 he was promoted to Major, in 1868 to Lieut.-Colonel, in 1873 to Colonel, and in 1875 to Major-General, when he retired. Sir Charles D'Oyly married first in 1855, Emelie Jane, daughter of Major-Gen. G. Nott, Madras Army (she died in 1857), and, secondly, in 1867, Elinor, daughter of the late Mr. James Winter Scott, M.P., of Rotherfield Park, Hants. He leaves issue by his first marriage a daughter, and he is succeeded in the title by his half-brother, Mr. Warren Hastings D'Oyly, who was born in 1838, was educated at Haileybury, served in the Bengal Civil Service from 1858 to 1891, and married, in 1859, Henrietta Mary, daughter of Sir Frederick Halliday, by whom he has issue several sons and daughters.

Col. Arthur Noel Phillips, late Indian Army, has died at Talgarth, Breconshire, at the age of 59. He entered the Royal Navy as Master's Assistant in 1855, and received the China medal for the operations which ended in the taking of Canton. Having received an Indian Cadetship, he was attached to the 73rd, 14th, and 4th Native Infantry in succession. After passing the interpreter's examination in Urdu, he served in the Assam Commission from May 30, 1862, to June 1880, acting for four years as Officiating Deputy Commissioner. In June 1880 he was posted to Benares as Cantonment Magistrate, and transferred to Roorkee as Cantonment Magistrate in April 1881, remaining in this position till 1886, when a serious illness terminated his Indian career. He became Ensign, Dec. 8, 1858; Lieut., May 15, 1860; Captain, Aug. 9, 1870; Major, Dec. 8, 1878; Lieut.-Colonel, May 1, 1879; Colonel, May 1, 1884. Col. Phillips passed all the language examinations, and he wrote a book "Hindustani Idioms," which was most favourably received.

Lieut.-Col. Edward Willock Chalmers, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, was drowned in the Thames at Maidenhead on Tuesday. At an inquest held on Wednesday a verdict of "Found drowned" was returned. Col. Chalmers was born Nov. 22, 1849. Joining the 16th Foot as Ensign in August, 1867, he was almost immediately transferred to the 11th Foot. In 1871 he obtained his Lieutenant's commission in the Bengal Staff Corps, and was promoted to Captain in 1879. In 1887 he was promoted to Major, and to Lieut.-Colonel in 1893. He served in the expedition against the Jowaki Afridis in 1877 (medal with clasp); also in the Afghan War of 1878-80 (medal), and in the Burmese Expedition of 1886-88 (mentioned in despatches and clasp).

Surg.-Lieut.-Col. James Creagh, 9th King's Royal Rifle Corps (North Cork Militia), died of enteric on the 6th inst., between Viljoen's Drift and Kroonstad. He was educated at the Dublin Catholic University, and qualified as L.R.C.S.I. in 1873 and L.R.C.P. Edin. in 1874. He was medical officer of the Mallo (county Cork) dispensary district, medical officer of the Great Southern and Western Railway and the Kanturk and Newmarket line, Surgeon-Captain 9th King's Royal Rifles, and Surgeon-Lieut.-Colonel Army Medical Reserve.

Major Henry Elliott Oldfield, R.F.A. (38th Battery), died of wounds at Lindley on the 6th inst. Born July 14, 1858, he joined the Royal Artillery Dec. 18, 1878; became Captain Jan. 1, 1887; and Major Dec. 21, 1896.

Captain St. John Arthur Douglas Muter, R.A., died at Mhow, Central India, on the 30th ult. Born Jan. 29, 1863, eldest son of the late Major-Gen. St. J. O'N. Muter, Bombay Staff Corps, he joined the Army Feb. 14, 1883, and became Captain Feb. 15, 1892.

Capt. James Beaumont Standly Alderson, 1st Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, has died at Bethlehem, South Africa, from the effects of wounds received in action. Born July 1, 1869, he joined the Royal Irish Regiment from the Militia June 28, 1890, became Lieut. Aug. 26, 1891, and Captain April 1, 1899. He served in the Tirah Expedition, 1897-98 (medal with clasp).

Capt. George Marshall, Royal West Kent Regiment, who was severely wounded in the fighting at Kumasi, is officially reported to have died of his wounds. Born Nov. 12, 1868, he entered the Army as a 2nd Lieut. in the Royal West Kent Regiment, Jan. 30, 1889, and obtained his Lieutenancy in Jan., 1892. In 1895 he served with the Chitral Field Force under Sir Robert Low (medal with clasp). He became Captain in May, 1896, and since June, 1899, had been employed on the Gold Coast.

Capt. Perceval Henry A. Leggett, 3rd Batn. Worcestershire Regiment, has died of wounds received in action at Kumasi. He obtained his company Feb. 17, 1894, and was appointed an Assistant Inspector Gold Coast Constabulary, Dec. 18, 1897. He had rendered good service to the Colonial Office, and was much beloved by those among whom his lot had been cast on the West Coast.

Lieut. John Bere Grylls, R.F.A. (66th Battery), died at Johannesburg on the 6th inst. of dysentery. Born March 3, 1876, he joined the Army Nov. 2, 1895, and obtained his Lieutenancy Nov. 2, 1898.

Lieut. Lewis Kossuth Brounlie, 3rd Batn. West India Regiment, was killed in action in the attack on Kokofu, Ashanti, under Lieut.-Col. Burroughs on the 3rd inst. Born Oct. 14, 1875, he joined the West India Regiment Sept. 8, 1897, and became Lieut. March 21, 1898.

Lieut. Harry Andrew, 70th Co. Imperial Yeomanry, died of dysentery at Salisbury Hospital, Rhodesia, on the 9th inst. He was formerly a Lieutenant in the Black Watch, but joined the Imperial Yeomanry in March last, in order to proceed on active service.

2nd Lieut. William Greaves Belcher, R.F.A. (38th Battery), was killed in action at Lindley, South Africa, on the 3rd inst. Born July 8, 1878, he joined the Army Feb. 26, 1898.

VOLUNTEERS AND ACTIVE SERVICE.

The regulations under the Volunteer Act, 1900, have been issued this week:—

SPECIAL ENGAGEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF VOLUNTEER CORPS.

1. ENGAGEMENT.

I.—A member of a Volunteer corps may contract to come out for actual military service at specified places in Great Britain, whenever summoned by order of the Secretary of State for War, and to serve for a period not exceeding one month in the absence of a Royal Proclamation calling out the Volunteers generally.

II.—A member of a Volunteer corps may contract to proceed upon active service to any part of the world in a unit or company formed of Volunteers, on such conditions as may be defined by the terms of his contract.

2. ELIGIBILITY.

I.—All members of such Volunteer corps as may be elected by the Secretary of State for War shall be eligible for the special engagement for actual military service at specified places.

II.—Only those members of Volunteer corps who fulfil the following conditions shall be eligible for the special engagement for active service in any part of the world:—

- (a) Age.—Between 21 and 35 years.
- (b) Physical standard.—As in the Regulars of the same arm.
- (c) Medical fitness for service at home or abroad (to be tested annually).
- (d) Service.—Two years' efficient.
- (e) Musketry (for rifle Volunteers).—Marksmen or first-class shots.

A Volunteer officer, entering on the special engagement for active service in any part of the world, shall be required, instead of the above qualifications, to have obtained a certificate from the School of Musketry (if in rifle Volunteers), to have attended a school of instruction, to have passed the examination in tactics, and to have been attached to the Regular Forces for the full period prescribed for his arm of the Service. He must also be medically examined annually and pronounced fit for service at home or abroad.

3. LIABILITY UNDER THE VOLUNTEER ACT.

Members of Volunteer corps summoned for service under their special engagements shall be subject to the same conditions and liabilities as if they were called out by Proclamation under section 17, Volunteer Act, 1863.

6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons.—Lieut. Dixon Johnson is on passage home from the Cape, invalided, in the Britannic, which sailed on the 1st inst. Lieut. Earle has been invalided, and left Cape Town in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

10th Hussars.—Major Hughes-Onslow, who has been seriously ill with enteric fever at Kroonstad, is coming home in the Britannic, which sailed from Cape Town on the 3rd inst. Lieuts. the Hon. D. R. H. Anderson-Pelham and Crichton left Cape Town in the Nubia on the 4th inst., for England, invalided.

11th Hussars.—Lieut.-Col. Lord Edmund Talbot is expected to arrive in England on the 27th inst. from South Africa, in view of his early assumption of command of the regiment in Egypt, on promotion. Major the Hon. H. A. Ormsby-Gore has arrived home on leave from Egypt until the end of August.

14th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. Champion has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

20th Hussars.—Lieut. Lee has been invalided from South Africa, and left in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Field artillery is about to be added to the military establishments of the Belfast District, as the 143rd Field Battery has been ordered to occupy the old cavalry barracks at Belturbet. The barracks, which have accommodation for seven officers, 156 non-commissioned officers, and men, with 101 horses, have been unoccupied since the days of the Land League.

The whole of the young officers recently appointed to the Royal Garrison Artillery are to undergo a three months' course at the various schools of instruction.

C Batt. R.H.A. has been ordered to mobilise in India in view of its early embarkation for active service in China.

Majors Apsley Smith, R.H.A., and G. S. Duffus, R.F.A., Capt. Dawson and Lieut. Radcliffe, R.H.A., and 2nd Lieuts. Mellor, R.F.A., and Brind, R.G.A., are co-passengers home from South Africa in the Britannic, which sailed on the 1st inst.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Majors G. M. Porter and C. E. Baddeley have passed the examination qualifying for promotion to the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Capt. C. F. Close, C.M.G., is on passage home from South Africa in the Britannic, which sailed on the 1st inst.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Lieut. the Hon. B. C. Gordon-Lennox, 3rd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut. the Hon. G. V. Baring, 2nd Batn., sailed from Cape Town for England in the Britannic on the 1st inst., invalided.

Scots Guards.—Lieut.-Col. North Dalrymple-Hamilton, 3rd Batn., is to be presented with a sword of honour and an address by the tenantry on the estate of Barquany and the people of Girven, in recognition of his services in South Africa.

Irish Guards.—Nearly every detail is completed with respect to the formation of the 1st Batn. The battalion exists at present only on paper; but it is about to come into existence as an effective unit, when it will take over quarters at Wellington Barracks.

Royal Scots (1st).—Capt. Stallard-Penoyre, 1st Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Bufs (3rd).—Col. Hickson writes from Kroonstad, under date June 13:—

"I enjoy a command at present which is doubtless unique in the annals of the British Army when in face of the enemy. It includes the 2nd Batn. the Bufs, East Kent Regiment, the 3rd Militia Batn. of the same, and a Volunteer company which is composed of men of the 1st and 2nd V.B.'s of the Bufs. A company of the East Kent Yeomanry is encamped within a few hundred yards of my brigade, though not under my command. The Yeomanry company are at present reconnoitring De Wet's commando. I think this extraordinary coincidence is worthy of record. Needless to say the fraternization is great amongst the Kentish men."

Capt. Knight, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed on the 1st inst. in the Britannic. Capt. Dyne, 2nd Batn., has been invalided home from the Cape in the Mahratta. Lieut. Findlay, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town on the 29th ult. in the Cavour, for England, invalided.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—Lieut. Grover, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Lieut. Stobart, 2nd Batn., left Cape Town in the Britannic on the 1st inst., invalided.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Capt. Hughes, 2nd Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 29th ult. for England, in charge of invalids, on the Cavour.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Major Pinney, 1st Batn., has passed the examination qualifying for promotion to the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

King's Regiment (8th).—The 6th (Militia) Batn. at Kilworth Camp has volunteered for active service in China. Lieut. Prince, 1st Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Lieut. Bernard, 3rd (Militia) Batn., has been invalided home from the Cape, and sailed in the Cavour on the 29th ult.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Capt. Goodwyn and Lieut. Holland, 2nd Batn., have been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Lieut. Temple, 1st Batn., has been invalided home from the Cape on the Mahratta.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Major Godden, D.S.O., Administrator of Suakim, has arrived home from Egypt, on leave until Sept. 18.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Lieut. Haig, 1st Batn., is en route to South Africa in the Dilwara to rejoin headquarters.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Lieut. Lloyd, 4th (Militia) Batn., has been invalided home from the Cape in the Mahratta. Lieut. Vesian-Pic, 4th (Militia) Batn., has been selected for employment with the West African Regiment. 2nd Lieut. Acton, 1st Batn., sailed from Cape Town in the Britannic on the 1st inst., invalided.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—Lieut. Turner, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Headquarters and one more company have been placed under orders to leave for Hong Kong to-day to join the force in China. Lieut.-Col. the Hon. R. H. Bertie will go in command. Major Morris, who recently left Hong Kong in command of the wing of the 2nd Batn., for service in China, has unfortunately been invalided, and has returned to Hong Kong. Capt. Gabbett left England on the 6th inst. in the Dilwara for the Cape.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Lieut. Ovens, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for five months on medical certificate.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—A monument has been erected to the memory of the officers and men who fell on Pieter's Hill on the eve of the relief of Ladysmith. It is a fine obelisk with a tablet bearing the inscription:—

"Near this spot were killed or mortally wounded on 23rd and 24th February, 1900, Lieut.-Col. T. H. C. Thackeray, commanding; Major F. A. Sanders, second in command; Lieut. W. O. Stuart, and sixty-five N.C.O.'s and men of the 27th Inniskillings, whilst advancing to the Relief of Ladysmith."

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Capt. Renger, 3rd (Militia) Batn., left England on Thursday for South Africa in command of troops on board the Ulstermore.

Dorsetshire Regiment (39th).—Lieut. Chetwood Aiken, 3rd (Militia) Batn., is en route to the Cape in the Dilwara, which sailed on the 6th inst.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—2nd Lieut. Kirkpatrick has been invalided home from South Africa, and sailed in the Cavour on the 29th ult. 2nd Lieut. White left Cape Town for England in the Nubia on the 4th inst., invalided.

Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (47th).—Capt. O'Brien has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—Lieut.-Col. Harrison is on passage home from the Cape in charge of invalids in the Britannic, with a view to taking up his command of this battalion at Aden on promotion.

Northamptonshire Regiment (58th).—2nd Lieut. Alston has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—The 6th (Militia) Batn. at Kilworth Camp has volunteered for active service in China. Lieut.-Col. Gore-Browne, 1st Batn., left England on the 6th inst. in the Dilwara for South Africa to take over command from sick leave. Capt. Allgood, 4th Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and left in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—Capt. and Adj. Newbigging has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Capt. Marples (attached from 1st V.B.), and 2nd Lieut. Parkinson and Coston, have been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

East Surrey Regiment (70th).—2nd Lieut. Le Fleming has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Nubia on the 4th inst.

Highland Light Infantry (74th).—Capt. Wolfe-Murray has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—The Daily Graphic gave on Thursday a sketch of the last resting-place of gallant Lieut.-Col. Dick Cunyngnam, V.C., who died of wounds received in the desperate fighting on Jan. 6. A plain cross marks his grave, but the Gordons have erected a cairn to his memory on the spot where he fell mortally wounded. 2nd Lieut. Sworder has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Middlesex Regiment (77th).—Major Lumley left Cape Town for England in the Britannic on the 1st inst. Capt. Burton, who was so seriously wounded at Spion Kop on Jan. 24, had returned to duty at the front when we heard last from the regiment, having particularly desired not to be invalided home whilst there was a prospect of more fighting.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—Lieut. Hay, 1st Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Cavour on the 29th ult.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—It seems that the Royal Irish Fusilier who was invalided from Natal, sent to Netley, and thence to Enniskillen, where he is now chargeable on the rates, has become a lunatic, and as his friends could do nothing for him the law gave the War Office no alternative but to put him in charge of the parish to which he belongs. He was passed as sound when he joined his regiment from the Reserve, and this is a matter on which inquiry will be made, though, as Mr. Wyndham, in the House of Commons on Monday, said, insanity is not like a physical shortcoming, apparent at all times. The War Office in this matter is clearly not to blame in any way.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—2nd Lieuts. Orr-Ewing and Campbell, 4th (Militia) Batn., have been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Britannic on the 1st inst.

Wiltshire Regiment (99th).—Lieut. Wimberley sailed from Cape Town in the Britannic on the 1st inst., invalided.

Rifle Brigade.—Major Wilson left Cape Town for England on the 1st inst. in the Britannic, with a view of joining the 4th Batn. in Ireland on appointment as second in command.

Army Service Corps.—Capt. Grey is on passage home from the Cape in the Britannic, which sailed on the 1st inst.

Army Ordnance Corps.—Capt. Last is on passage home from South Africa in the Britannic, which sailed on the 1st inst.

Army Pay Department.—Changes, &c., in June:—Major Maunsell to unattached list; Major Vigors to retired pay; Capt. Sargeant, Dublin, to Naas; Capt. Murray, Warwick Regiment, on promotion; June 22, Portsmouth. To be Staff-Paymaster:—Major Ditmas, Appointments:—Capt. Payne, North Stafford Regiment, Aug. 1895; Capt. Alexander, Leicester Regiment, Sept. 1895. To be Captains and Paymasters:—Lieut. Dobbin, East Lancashire Regiment, Aug. 1899; Lieut. Hewett, Dorset Regiment, Sept. 1899; Lieut. Butler, Leicester Regiment, Oct. 1899. Capt. Hewlett is en route to the Cape on the Dilwara, which sailed on the 6th inst.

Reviews.

SOCIAL LIFE IN THE BRITISH ARMY.

It is singular, but true, that though there are few Englishmen who have not some connection with the Army, there is very little knowledge among English people of its inner character. We have no cause for surprise, therefore, at the extraordinary notions which prevail on the Continent concerning military life in this country. Those who have gained their knowledge of Army life from the pages of fiction may be advised to read Social Life in the British Army, by "A British Officer" (John Long), to which Mr. Caton Woodville has contributed some excellent illustrations. The author knows his subject thoroughly, and we believe his book has already been a success. Sir George White has expressed the opinion that his book is of great interest, and he considers it a fair representation—an opinion with which no one will quarrel. The writer begins by dealing with the officers of the Army, and, having made the remark that the existence of foolish extravagance is not to be denied, at once plunges into an account of the Guards, because over this branch of the forces a certain glamour has been thrown by the facile pens of lady novelists. The youth who enters the Guards has generally spent his boyhood in the playing fields of Eton or Harrow, and as a cadet his time is usually so well filled that he has not much opportunity for mischief. Within the last dozen years things have vastly improved at Sandhurst, and the rough days are over, though the cadets' life is simple and economical. The officer denies that gambling for high stakes is very prevalent among young Guardsmen, and he is evidently right. Then he touches upon the jealous care with which regiments preserve their social standing, and gives many hints in regard to the provision of outfit. He is within the mark when he says that it will not be an easy matter to get a complete cavalry outfit, exclusive of horses, under at the least £300. An excellent account follows of the messing arrangements and customs of the Army, and the would-be cadet may be warned that actual mess expenses are only a small fraction of those to which he will be subjected. It is, indeed, sufficiently evident in a general way that only those who are well provided for should dream of entering the Army, and upon this point the officer leaves little room for doubt. He does not, however, appear to relish the prospect of a change, which he thinks might depreciate the standard, and says, truly enough, that no one is keener than Tommy Atkins in spotting a "gentleman," whom he will follow as he would follow no one else. The book includes an equally good account of life in the ranks. No volume has appeared dealing so thoroughly and so competently with the inner life of the Army. It is not merely descriptive, but will be welcomed by all those who contemplate putting their sons into the Service, for they will realise better than otherwise they might do what the conditions of military life are.

ANCIENT AND MODERN SHIPS.

We heartily welcome a volume in the series of "Victoria and Albert Museum Science Handbooks" under this title. It is by Mr. G. C. V. Holmes, Secretary of the Institute of Naval Architects, and has been published for the Board of Education by Messrs. Chapman and Hall. A second part is to deal with iron and steel ships, for Mr. Holmes is here only concerned with wooden sailing ships. He has a very great deal to say about ancient vessels in the Mediterranean and Red Seas, and the space devoted to them may be a little out of proportion, but the subject is so extremely interesting that we do not regret this. The early period, moreover, is far better known since the researches of Professor Flinders Petrie and others. The oldest boats concerning which anything has been discovered were constructed in Egypt before the advent of the pyramid-builders, and appear to have had 58 oars or paddles, with two large deck cabins connected by a flying bridge. From that time forward progress in construction was slow but steady, and in the wars between the Greeks and the Persians vessels of large size were employed. Mr. Holmes remarks that the existence of galleys having more than five superimposed banks of oars is very slight. But Theophrastus, who was a botanist, and therefore not a naval expert, speaks of an eleven-banked ship, and Ptolemy Philopater had a vessel, according to report, with forty banks. It is, of course, evident that these could not have been horizontal tiers, and it is suggested that they were the diagonal lines in which the oar-ports were cut. A brief survey of shipping in the Northern Seas brings us up to mediæval ships, which are well treated by Mr. Holmes, who illustrates the influence of maritime enterprise upon ship construction. Some may consider that the book is a little thin in its treatment of the frigates and line of battle ships with which we waged our great naval wars. Mr. Holmes has consulted competent authorities, but we are not sure that he has embodied much fruit of the researches of Mr. Oppenheim into the evidences of naval administration, which throw great light on shipbuilding. But within the 150 pages which the little volume contains there is a vast amount of matter, and it is well written, and illustrated most fully.

SHORT NOTICES.

Sir Walter Gilbey, that well-known authority on horsemanship, has just written another monograph, published by Messrs. Vinton, his subject being Small Horses in Warfare. Without denying the value of large and heavy horses he puts forward facts which go to prove the suitability of small horses for certain campaigning work, like that of mounted infantry. What, he says, is required is an animal between 14 and 14.3 hands, stout and able to carry weight, and to cover long distances at fair speed, and to subsist on coarse food for weeks together without losing condition; and we must look to the ponies of the Welsh hills, Exmoor, the New Forest, the Fell districts, and the west of Ireland, size being obtained by selecting a suitable sire. The little book possesses distinct value at this time, and is a successful contribution to its subject.

The fourth and last volume has appeared of Mr. Fitchett's How England Saved Europe (Smith, Elder, and Co.), being the story of the great war. We shall say no more about the book than that it is written in the admirably graphic style which its author commands, and that it brings to a conclusion an excellent work that many should be glad to possess. The illustrations and portraits are all good.

Many new editions and reprints are upon our table. Among them are Rear-Admiral FitzGerald's Boat Sailing and Racing—a capital little book—and Capt. Eardley-Wilmot's Our Fleet To-Day (Seeley and Co.), being a revised edition of The Development of Navies during the Last Half Century. In order to gain space the chapters on foreign navies have been omitted, and a very excellent account, enlarged and extended, is given of our fleet from 1840 to the present time, and examples of torpedo attack, and an account of the two recent wars are included. The book was welcomed when it appeared, and has now been considerably improved, and the author and publisher have done justice to it.

We have also received Lest We Forget Them (The Fine Art Society), being Lady Glover's admirable contribution to the fund for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of our sailors and soldiers, which is full of pictorial and literary interest, and is all it should be for success; Scarlet and Blue; or, Songs for Soldiers and Sailors, edited by John Farmer (Cassell and Co.)—apparently a re-issue of a well-known and successful volume; The Rifle Shot's Manual and the Simplex Scoring Book, both by Henry Smith. (Clowes and Sons); The Downfall of Prempeh, a sixpenny reprint of Gen. Baden-Powell's narrative (Methuen and Co.), which is sure to be popular; The Pacific and Cape-Australian Cables, a pamphlet reprinted from the Electrical Review; Cicero: In Catilinam in Blackwood's "Classical Texts"; and four volumes in Blackwood's admirable series of English classics, being Goldsmith's Select Poems, Macaulay's Life of Jonson, Milton's Paradise Lost, I-V, and Cowper's Task and minor poems. The form could not be improved, and each volume has a competent editor, whose notes are very helpful.

We have received the second part of A French-English Military Technical Dictionary, by Cornelis de Witt Wilcox, a lieutenant of the United States Artillery (Government Printing Office, Washington.) We do not think that any publication of the kind exists possessing the same completeness of character. The technical details, and their French equivalents, are given with much minuteness, and we believe with great accuracy. Certainly the author has devoted immense pains to the book, and the Adjutant-General of the United States Army has done well to publish it.

There has been issued in St. Petersburg a brochure entitled Gibel Angli (Beresowski), which is of the type of the "Battle of Dorking," and describes how the Russians and the French victoriously invade India and England in the year 1900, conquering all obstacles, and finally march down Ludgate Hill, while immense gratification prevails in Dublin at the liberation of the sister island "from the tyranny of her oppressors." We have had so many publications of this kind in England that apparently people are tired of them, but the fashion seems to have "caught-on" on the Continent, and if it pleases the Russians we have no cause to complain.

To Coomassie and Back, by Capt. W. T. Dooner (London: Cassin, Marshall and Co.) The author of this brochure served with Lord Wolseley in the expedition of 1873-74, and in its pages tells the tale of the war. The story ought to prove interesting at the present moment, when, for the third time in thirty years, we are fighting our way to the Ashanti capital.

WHAT CAN WE DO FOR OUR FRIENDS ON THE BATTLEFIELD? KEEP THEM WELL, AND MAKE THEM WELL IN CONVALESCENCE. Read these official communications and reports:—DRS. TRELUTZ and KAISER, Imperial Hospital, Physician, Hospital Agram, AUSTRIA, writes: "We have employed HOFF'S EXTRACT OF MALT in convalescence, and for Catarrh, ordinary diseases and impaired digestion with very satisfactory results. As a dietetic, nutrient and Tonic, it is beyond doubt the remedy 'par excellence.' My indigestion was cured by this strengthening and palatable MALT EXTRACT. MAJOR BUSHIRE, TWICKENHAM. THE NAVAL MANŒUVRES.

THE official documents in connection with the Naval Manœuvres were issued on Tuesday night, and the scheme foreshadowed gives every promise of most interesting and instructive operations. The principal object, we are told, is to obtain information relative to the working of a fleet which is composed of vessels of all classes and is fighting for the command of the sea. Subsidiary questions to be elucidated are—(1) the most suitable distance at which to establish a temporary base for a squadron watching a hostile fortified port; and (2) the power which cruisers may or may not possess of hunting down and driving torpedo craft into port. The general idea is that a battle fleet, B, is divided into two squadrons, of which one portion, consisting of nine battleships, is stationed at Milford, and the other portion, consisting of four battleships, is stationed at Lamlash. This fleet is also provided with thirteen cruisers, and a flotilla of gunboats and destroyers. A hostile fleet A, inferior in battleships to B, is also divided into two squadrons. One portion, consisting of four battleships, is stationed at Berehaven, and another portion, comprising an equal number of battleships, is stationed at Lough Swilly. A hostile reinforcement, consisting of four more battleships, is stationed at a rendezvous supposed to represent some port in the Mediterranean, and this reinforcement, if it can be added to the two portions of A, will make that force nearly equal to B. The A Fleet is supported by an equal number of cruisers to B, but is supplied with a number of torpedo boats and fast small craft in place of destroyers. The whole of Great Britain, from Cape Wrath to Land's End, with the Isle of Man and the Scilly Islands, belongs to B, while, on the other hand, Ireland is hostile and contains three fortified ports—Berehaven, Queenstown, and Lough Swilly. The only fortified port in Great Britain is Milford Haven. With the exception that the opposed fleets are to be in certain positions when hostilities commence, there are few regulations to trammel the action of the respective commanders. Their instructions are that each fleet will try to obtain command of the sea; that is, to defeat the other and to shut him up in his ports, and especially to clear the sea of his torpedo craft.

We have said that the regulations are reduced to a minimum, an innovation which will meet with general commendation. All battleships are to be considered equal in fighting power to the Majestic, and virtually any engagements between hostile ships which take place are, unless obviously to the advantage of one side or the other, to be referred to the umpires, who will settle the matter out of hand and without giving their reasons. To the three Admirals Domville, Fitzgerald, and Fanshawe, Lieut.-Gen. Owen, R.A., has been added in order that he may determine jointly with the naval umpires claims arising between the land defences and the ships. Each case is to be decided by the umpires on its merits, on the basis of what would be probable in war. This is a common-sense way of regarding the matter and ought to have excellent results. The distribution of the twenty-five battleships among the squadrons will have an important bearing owing to their different rates of speed. Indeed, this seems to be one of the most important points. In the three squadrons of the A fleet we find a curious division. The squadron at Berehaven, known as A1, includes not only the Majestic and Repulse, but the Dreadnought and the Sultan. Similarly, at Lough Swilly, in A2 the Prince George and Resolution are hampered in mobility by the Edinburgh and Conqueror. The four vessels which form the reinforcement A3 are, however, all modern ships, and at first glance it would seem to be the first object of Admiral Rawson to shed his slow craft and bring his eight fast ones together, since it would then be almost impossible for the admiral of the B fleet to catch him. Admiral Noel, who commands the B fleet, has got a very scratch lot under him so far as speed is concerned, and he will have a most difficult task in preventing the various squadrons of A from uniting for this reason. So far the mobilisation has proceeded smoothly, and the Duke of York must have felt highly gratified by the smart appearance of the men at Portsmouth Dockyard who paraded before joining their vessels on Tuesday morning. Doubtless we shall have some mishaps and breakdowns to chronicle, while the performances of the newer vessels provided with water-tube boilers will be scrutinised most closely. The reports that at the close of the operations there will be a review in the presence of the Shah of Persia appear to be entirely without foundation.

SUBMERSIBLE BOATS.

THE time was ripe for the production of a book on this important matter, and it has come from the pen of M. Forest, the well-known French naval constructor, and of M. Noalhat, a civil engineer well versed in the subject. M. Forest has himself been concerned in the design of submarine vessels, and took part in the competition instituted by the Minister of Marine in 1896. It is not, therefore, surprising to find in him an enthusiast in the subject. So far, with his collaborator, he has only dealt in the volume, published by Veuve Dunod, with the history of the subject, and another volume is to be devoted specially to its technical aspects. He begins at the beginning, which he discovers in an apparatus described by Aristotle, as employed at the siege of Tyre. Then he leaps onward to Cornelius Van Drebbel, who was a Dutch physician and a personal friend of James I., and is said to have constructed the first submarine boat, about the year 1620. After notes on Mersenne, 1634, Borelli about 1680, Simons, 1747, and Bushnell, 1773, we are brought up to a useful description of Felton's Nautilus. The proposals of the Marquis de la Feuillade, of Dr. Payerne, Philip, the American, Bauer, the German, James Nasmyth, and other theorists and inventors of this century find their place. It is unnecessary, however, to follow those French writers in their interesting account of the history of marine navigation, for the main value of their work should be in its conclusion as to the position in which the subject stands to-day.

A great deal, of course, is attributed to the late Admiral Aube, concerning whom there is a preface, highly eulogistic. It is from the pen of M. Saissy, to whom the Admiral, a few days before his death, wrote as follows:—"Already the torpedo boat, visible by day, but invisible or almost so by night, has necessarily become the pivot of coast defence, and in sufficient number will assure that defence. Here we are all agreed. What decisive action then will those torpedo boats have which are always invisible?—I mean the submarine boats, the Goubets, the Gymnotes, and the Sirènes; and for this decisive action have they need to realise the Nautilus of Jules Verne?" It will be observed that the admiral spoke only of coast defence, and did not hold the exalted ideas entertained by his modern followers, though it is true that the Gustave Zédé and the Narval had not yet demonstrated their technical success. That last-named resulted from the competition opened at the Ministry of Marine by M. Lookroy, and the boat was built after the designs of M. Laubeuf, who received a gold medal. The characteristics of the Narval are that she can navigate in three positions: on the surface like an ordinary torpedo boat, awash with only the dome and chimney above water—this result being attained by admitting a certain amount of water into the reservoir—or completely submerged. She has been described as a submersible, in order to distinguish her from the submarine type of the Gymnote, Zédé, and Morse, but the authors of this book prefer to regard her as an autonomous submarine boat. She is built with two shells, forming a double cylindro-conical hull, and the space between forms the reservoirs for immersion, the reserve of stability and the compensation reservoirs being placed in the interior of the boat. Immersion in this class differs from that in the Gymnote and Zédé. Instead of employing a single horizontal rudder at the stern to cause the boat to plunge obliquely, there are four rudders, two on each side, worked by the same mechanism, thus giving the same angle, and assuring the descent of the boat in the horizontal position. The motive force for use upon the surface is a water-tube boiler stoked with heavy oil, there being five burners on the system of Adolphe Seigle providing for the development of 250 horse power. "Fulmen" accumulators provide the electric energy for use when the boat is submerged, and when navigating in this way the funnel is withdrawn and the aperture made watertight. The boat is driven wholly by steam when she is upon the surface, while all her submarine movements are executed by electro-motors, the current being supplied from the accumulators, and when the boat is not under way or is navigating at reduced speed, her engines can be used to drive the dynamos and recharge the accumulators. This disposition of machinery is really the speciality of the Narval, which, however, can scarcely be said yet to have passed the stage of experiment.

That it is destined to be a complete success these writers have very little doubt, and they argue that when the infallible arm appears peace will be thereby imposed upon the world. It has been suggested that the approach of submarine boats might be detected by the microphone, but

M. Forest and his friends do not credit this, and they loudly affirm that submarine navigation is no longer Utopian. They do not, indeed, regard the recent trials as anything more than marvellous experiments, but consider them to have been conclusive, nevertheless. Unquestionably immense strides have been made in the matter of submarine navigation, but even if the new boats should prove a complete success, it by no means follows that the British Navy should build the same. As we have more than once said, the submarine and submersible boat are the engine of a weaker Power, and we see no reason yet to believe that they will ever be able to take any place except, as Admiral Aube said, in the domain of coast defence.

Navy Notes.

The Mediterranean Squadron, which left Malta last Saturday, arrived at Trieste on Monday afternoon, in order to return the visit which the Austrian squadron had paid to the British port last winter. The British vessels were met off Pirano by an Austro-Hungarian fleet, which escorted their visitors to the anchorage. Much admiration was expressed at the manner in which the large body of vessels manœuvred to take up their positions in the harbour. As soon as the anchors were down the Austrian Admirals, Count Montecuccoli, Brosch, and von Sachs, visited the Renown to welcome Sir John Fisher, and afterwards the Ramillies, to pay the same courtesy to Lord Charles Beresford. The British Admirals then paid a return visit to the Austrian flag-ship, the Kaiser Karl VI. The British officers, who have been considered the guests of the Emperor during the stay, have been most hospitably entertained, the programme of entertainments including a picnic and banquet to the bluejackets. Visits to the Imperial Palace at Miramar and to the Caves of Adelsberg were arranged, and on Thursday a ball was given on board the Renown, when Lady Fisher and her daughters received the fair visitors.

At the banquet on board the Renown, after Count Montecuccoli had proposed the toast of "Queen Victoria" and Sir John Fisher that of "The Emperor Francis Joseph," the Austrian admiral, in drinking to the "British Mediterranean Squadron," said that he tendered on behalf of his nation "a hearty and sincere welcome. The friendly reception given at Malta lives in the recollection of all of us. We hope and wish that your present visit in Austro-Hungarian waters will make the same impression on you and give fresh evidence of the traditional good relations between our countries and their navies." Sir John Fisher, in replying, referred to the sympathy and friendly sentiments which had been shown by his Austro-Hungarian hosts at a time when things in Africa did not appear to be very favourable to us. He added, "We have a good English proverb, 'A friend in need is a friend indeed.' I wish to assure the admiral that one of the traditions of our British Navy is the warm friendship we feel for your country, and particularly for its gallant and glorious Navy." The reception has on both sides been of a most cordial character, and everything was foreseen and provided for to make the stay of the British squadron at Trieste most agreeable. To-day the fleet will take its departure; sixteen of the ships, under the vice-admiral's command, going to Venice, and the same number, under Lord Charles Beresford, to Fiume. Of the others, some go to Sebenico, some to Spalato, some to Lissa; the entire squadron reassembling at Zara, and returning to Malta during August. The festivities and entertainments prepared for the five days' stay of the squadron at Trieste will be followed by a similar series when that under Lord Charles Beresford visits Fiume.

The Navy Estimates, which were to have been taken last night, have been postponed until next week. It seems likely that the shipbuilding vote will come on either Tuesday or Thursday; the delay is due to the impossibility of getting out Mr. Goschen's memorandum on water-tube boilers in time for discussion yesterday. It is to be hoped that this matter of the water-tube boilers, important as it is, will not be allowed to overshadow the more momentous question of whether the authorities are pushing on their shipbuilding operations with all needful celerity. Some difference of opinion exists as to whether the shortage in expenditure during the last three years is four millions or two, but even if the latter be the case it is obvious that we have a lot to make up. It must, however, depend upon the Admiralty whether more money is asked for, as if they find it impossible to spend it it is useless to have a supplementary vote. In this connection, however, we notice that the Elswick firm has succeeded in building an armour-plate which has stood the tests, and it would appear, therefore, that our resources in this direction have been augmented. If the authorities now find themselves in the position to proceed with more ships or to hasten the completion of those in hand they ought to take the necessary steps for doing so.

Exposure by sandwich board does seem to have influenced the Admiralty to some extent, for a Portsmouth correspondent announces that at least two of the "death traps," the Iron Duke and Swiftsure, are to be dismantled after the mobilisation and consigned to "rotten row." It is therefore quite probable that a few more of the sixteen obsolete battleships, armed primarily with M.L. guns, will shortly be scratched off the effective list, and be included no more in Parliamentary returns. The two old battleships in question are said to be as sound in their hulls as ever, and this we can credit, since they were splendidly built. Still, it is impossible to believe that vessels so completely obsolete in speed, structure, and armament could ever be commissioned for active service in war, and, if so, no useful purpose can be served by their retention on the effective list. The corvette Boadicea is another old ship which is to be consigned to "rotten row." She has done three or four commissions as flag-ship in her day, and is a sister ship to the old Bacchante, in which H.R.H. the Duke of York and the late Prince Albert Victor took their first cruise. The Boadicea and Bacchante were the only two corvettes of the class built for the Navy, and were considered roomy and seaworthy vessels. The Boadicea was the flag-ship of Commodore (now Admiral of the Fleet) Sir F. W. Richards on the Cape station during the Zulu War and the first Boer War, officers and men being landed from her in both campaigns. Three officers, who were midshipmen of the Boadicea at that time, are now rising captains, and practically certain to reach the flag-list. These officers are Captain G. Warrender, Hon. S. Colville, and W. W. Hewett. The last named hoists his pennant for the first time this week as captain of the Retribution; Captain Warrender is doing good service in China as flag-captain to Rear-Admiral Bruce; and Captain Colville, it will be remembered, was specially promoted for war services on the Nile. The old Boadicea has thus been the training-ship of some of our smartest officers.

The Chinese rebellion has already had its victims, a Marine officer and two midshipmen, with several bluejackets and Marines of the landing party, having been killed or succumbed to their wounds. It is to be feared that there will be more casualties before the matter is settled. From some of the telegrams from the front, it would appear that as the military forces arrive on the scene of action, the seamen are being sent back to their ships. But, if the rebellion spreads, as seems not unlikely, there will probably be other brigades landed from the ships now stationed at the various treaty ports. Happily at present things are quiet in the southern provinces and up the Yangtse. But the Admiralty are acting with commendable promptitude in reinforcing the squadron, particularly by small vessels which can navigate the inland waters of China. It is noteworthy that the British squadron is far and away ahead of others in regard to the number and usefulness of the small craft at Sir Edward Seymour's disposal. The five river-boats, Sandpiper, Snipe, Robin, Woodcock, and Woodlark, should be particularly effective at this juncture. The Eske, Firebrand and Tweed may be utilised for a similar purpose, and the boats of the Peacock class, of which there are several on the station. The destroyers have already been of use on the Peiho. Several other small craft are being hastened to China from Australia and the Pacific, while the Bramble and Britomart have left England on the same errand.

Mr. Goschen was asked in Parliament this week if the Criminal Evidence Act had been applied to naval courts-martial, so that at the trial of men of the fleet they would be able to give evidence in their own behalf. In reply, the First Lord stated that great objections existed to change well-established customs in regard to procedure at naval courts-martial. No steps had been taken to apply to them the rules of the Criminal Evidence Act, but he would consult his naval colleagues. The contention is that the Admiralty should follow the War Office in granting an offender the privilege that falls to any person in a civil court.

The statement made in some of the newspapers last week that the Admiralty had ordered the utilisation of non-flammable wood to be suspended, as the result of the Belleisle experiment, can safely be accepted as true. Professor J. H. Biles, a well-known authority in chemistry, displays needless apprehension (in a letter to the Times) lest the results of this experiment should mislead our naval architects, and lead to the additional use of woodwork in the construction of warships. It is not at all likely that the Admiralty will be in haste to add to the amount of wood, or, indeed, that we shall modify our efforts to guard against the dangers of ignition from shell-fire. Admiral Sir J. O. Hopkins is of opinion, rightly or wrongly, that the woodwork of the Belleisle was prevented from ignition by the asphyxiation of the flames by the lyddite fumes. This theory will at least command the attention it deserves, and would amply justify further experiments. In a sufficiently vitiated atmosphere fire is impossible, and so, too, of course, is human life. Fortunately, lyddite shells do not penetrate thin steel armour, and it should be possible to avert the suffocation of guns' crews by the principles of construction already adopted in our modern cruisers. The effects of lyddite fumes and of flammable wood are separate issues, although these interesting discussions on the Belleisle experiment has led to the consideration of both. There is nothing to prevent us from combining all-round steel armour with non-flammable woodwork fittings (when we can get the latter), but so far experience has not shown our naval officers by which means the crews of warships may be safeguarded effectually. The possibility of suffocation by poisonous gases certainly adds a new horror to sea warfare.

It is not quite easy to understand what purpose Sir E. Ashmead Bartlett intended to serve by his question to the First Lord of the Admiralty on the subject of promotions. So far, apparently, only those officers who have left the station have been rewarded for their services in South Africa, and it may be taken for granted that this rule will be followed, and that it will not be until the general recognition of services takes place at the expiration of the war that other rewards and promotions will be notified. For China Lieut. Wright of the Orlando has been promoted for his services. It will be remembered that he was dangerously wounded at Tient-sin, in the same affair, on June 23, as Mr. Donaldson sustained the injury to which he has since succumbed. Lieuts. Stirling and Powell were also wounded on that occasion. We have every confidence that the Admiralty will be just in this matter of promotions, and that the course taken is only that which is rendered necessary by the fact that the operations are by combined naval and military forces.

THE CHINA CRISIS.

Monday, July 9.

A telegram from Acting Consul-General Warren at Shanghai, dated Saturday, 7.30 p.m., was received at the Foreign Office:—

"I received from a thoroughly trustworthy source the following message to-day:—A messenger who left Peking on July 3 has just arrived. He states that two Legations still remain uncaptured, that the Boxers and the troops are much disheartened, that over two thousand of the troops have been killed, as well as many of the Boxer ringleaders. The Boxers say that their mystic powers have been broken by the foreigners, and they do not now dare to approach the Legations. It is further stated by the messenger that the foreigners ought to be able to hold out for a long time if they have sufficient food and ammunition."

The Russian Admiral at Taku received a message from Col. Denbin, commanding the Russian troops at Tien-tsin, stating that he had received a letter from the Russian Minister in Peking which had been brought by a special native runner. In this communication the Minister said the Foreign Ministers were to have met the Chinese officials at the Tsung-li-Yamen for the purpose of conferring upon the situation. The German Minister started first, and while en route was murdered in the street by Chinese Imperial troops. On hearing of this tragedy the other Ministers decided not to leave the Legations. The Russian Minister confirms the report that the Tsung-li-Yamen buildings were attacked and burned by the infuriated German troops. He adds that the food stores and ammunition at the Legations were almost exhausted. The runner stated that he left Peking on June 24. The Chinese troops had then mounted field guns on a wall commanding the Legations and a proclamation was issued warning Chinese to keep out of range of the guns. After the runner had got some distance from Peking he heard the sound of heavy firing from the direction of the capital, from which it would appear that the bombardment of the Legations did not begin until June 24.

A despatch to Berlin from Tien-tsin, dated July 2, says:—

"The Chinese native town here was unsuccessfully bombarded by the Russians to-day. The strength of the allied troops here is about 10,000 men. There is no fresh news from Peking."

Another message from Tien-tsin, dated July 3, says:—

"Since early this morning the foreign settlements have again been heavily bombarded by the Chinese. By order of Admiral Seymour the women and children will be conveyed to Taku as soon as possible."

The Sandpiper was at Wu-chau, and the Robin at Sam-shiu on Sunday last.

The following regiments have been ordered to proceed to China:—16th Bengal Lancers; C Battery Royal Horse Artillery, from Mhow; 3rd Bombay Cavalry, from Neemuch; and Ammunition Column, from Campbellpore. Col. George Richardson will take over the command of the Cavalry Brigade ordered to China.

The transports Uganda, Umta, Nawab, Itaura, and Warora have sailed with Indian troops for China.

The Imperial Government has accepted the offer made by Victoria of a naval contingent for service in China, and also the offer of the services of the gunboat Protector, made by South Australia.

The Emperor William on Sunday went on board the Kurfürst Friedrich Wilhelm, the flagship of the squadron about to leave for China, and delivered an address to the officers and men, bidding them farewell. Rear-Admiral Geissler thanked the Emperor for his kindness.

Gen. Dodds is to take command of the French expeditionary force for China. The cruiser Chasseloup-Laubat left Cherbourg for China.

Tuesday, July 10.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Brodrick said that the accounts from Peking received through native sources showed that the resistance of the Legations to the attacks made on them had made a great impression on the assailants, and there were grounds for hoping that Prince Ching, late head of the Tsung-li-Yamen, was exercising influence to protect the Legations against Prince Tuan and the Boxers. The reports from Tien-tsin showed that further fighting might be expected there at any moment, but no doubt was expressed that the allied forces would maintain their position. The Japanese reinforcements were due at Taku immediately, and the Indian troops would begin to arrive in China at the end of the week. The Japanese Government had informed Her Majesty's Government that they were prepared to send a reinforcement to the extent of bringing their troops up to 20,000 without delay. Rear-Admiral Bruce telegraphed from Taku, under date July 7, 4 p.m.:—

"There are grounds for hoping Prince Ching with his army at Peking is protecting the Legations against Prince Tuan and his army and 'Boxers.'"

Vice-Admiral Bendemann, cabling from Taku, under date Saturday, says Tien-tsin is bombarded daily from the arsenal fortifications on the west, from several batteries on the north, and from the forts in the Chinese town. Attempts by the Chinese to rush the defences have been several times repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy. 1,200 Americans arrived at Taku on Friday last, and 1,400 French troops with one battery of field artillery on Saturday. The Chinese made an attack upon Tien-tsin on that day. They opened fire with artillery at 4 a.m. They had 12 guns in action. The allied forces replied with three 12-prs. from the Terrible, and afterwards a force of 1,000 men, composed of detachments of the different European forces, marched out to attack the Chinese under cover of the naval field guns. The Chinese eventually were compelled to retire at one o'clock.

The transport Nerbudda, from Calcutta, with the left wing of the 7th Bengal Infantry on board, has arrived at Hong Kong on Monday, and left for Taku next day.

The East Asiatic German Squadron left Kiel on Monday for the Far East. The Emperor, addressing the men prior to their departure for China, said:—

"Yours is the first division of armoured ships which I send abroad. Remember, you will have to fight a cunning foe, provided with modern weapons. Avenge German blood which has flowed, but spare women and children! I shall not rest until China is subdued and all bloody deeds are avenged. You will fight together with troops of various nationalities. See that you always maintain good comradeship with them."

Wednesday, July 11.

Mr. Goodnow, American Consul-General at Shanghai, cables the following:—"It is given out by the Governor of Shantung that the Legations were standing on the 5th inst., and that the outlaws were dispersing."—It is reported from Chinese sources that the foreigners at Peking have taken possession of the fourth Prince's Palace opposite to and commanding the British Legation, where the native Christian refugees are sheltered.

The London Gazette yesterday evening notifies the appointments for the China Expeditionary Force.

The Marathon has been ordered from Bombay to strengthen the British fleet in Chinese waters. The Arcturion is also ordered to proceed to Hong Kong from the Pacific station.

A telegram, via Chifu, states that on July 5 an attack was made on the foreign settlement at Tien-tsin from two directions by large bodies of Chinese troops, of which one moved out from the Western Arsenal, while the other advanced on the railway station, on the opposite bank of the river. The attack from the arsenal was directed against what was probably the weakest point of our defence, but the Chinese advanced across the open plain without any cover, and the attack was easily repulsed by the shells of the British guns. The attack on the railway station was made simultaneously, the Chinese, who were in great force, advancing under cover of the fire of 11 guns, to which the British replied with two of the Terrible's 12-prs. and five smaller guns. At the same time a force of British, French, Russian and Japanese infantry moved out to deal with the Chinese infantry attack. More of the enemy's artillery then came into play, and was admirably handled, the shells being thrown incessantly among the allied troops, who suffered heavily. The Japanese succeeded in turning the Chinese left, driving the enemy out of a strong position among grave mounds and irrigation trenches. The Chinese then retired to the native city, and the allied infantry also fell back. The British Chinese Regiment was engaged and proved very steady under fire. Two of the Terrible's 12-prs, with "Ladysmith" to Tien-tsin—Immediate—painted on the carriages had arrived, and two 4-in guns from the Algerine.

Thursday, July 12.

Sheng informed the Consuls at Shanghai that he had received a telegram stating that the Legations were holding out on the 5th, and that the Boxers' numbers were greatly reduced.

The transport Nerbudda, instead of awaiting the arrival of Gen. Gaselee, left Hong Kong on the 10th, after taking in stores, coal, and ammunition. She goes to Taku direct.

The transport Vandata has left Calcutta with a further contingent of the Indian troops for China.

It was suggested at Sydney that as the Europa had left, the New South Wales Naval Brigade should be utilised to man the Tauranga, which is now out of commission. If this proposal is unacceptable to the Imperial Government, it is understood that the men will volunteer to act as a land force for the protection of lives and property, in which case it is considered probable that the Imperial Government will provide the necessary balance for equipment and transport. Mr. Chamberlain has cabled to Sir W. J. Lyne, the Premier, that the German Government has requested permission to purchase horses in Australia for service in China. He adds that he will be glad if every facility is afforded to the German agents for this purpose.

The headquarters and one company of the Welsh Fusiliers received telegraphic instructions from the War Office to proceed from Hong Kong to Taku at the first opportunity. They will probably leave in the Taisang. The Indian transport Palamcottah arrived at Hong Kong with the right wing of the 7th Bengal Infantry and the 43rd native field hospital. She left the same day for Taku.

Friday, July 13.

The following telegram from Admiral Seymour has been received at the Admiralty, dated Tien-tsin, Saturday, July 7:—

"The Chinese continue sniping often, shelling the settlements. They are extending their lines along the Lutaian Canal, to the north-eastward, and appearing in greater force to the west of the city. Yesterday we bombarded city and immediate suburbs, which stopped Chinese gun fire for some time. French settlement and railway station are most subject to attack. To-day another bombardment will take place, as yesterday. Am steadily getting more guns up. Ten thousand troops now here; more required, but both Russian and Japanese expected."

The following story, emanating from Chinese official sources in the north, was received in Shanghai on Monday, and is telegraphed home by the correspondent of the Daily Mail:—

"The two Legations remaining uncaptured—viz., the British and the Russian—were attacked on the evening of July 6 in force. The general in command was Prince Tuan. The attackers were divided. Prince Tuan commanded the centre, with Kung Yu as his assistant; the right wing was led by Prince Tsai Yin, and the left by Prince Yin Lin. The reserve were under Prince Tsai Yu. The attack commenced with the artillery. The fighting, which was severe, lasted until seven next morning, by which time the destruction of both Legations was complete. All the foreigners were dead, while the streets around the Legations were full of the dead bodies of both foreigners and Chinese. Upon hearing of the attack Prince Ching and Gen. Wang Weng Shao went with troops to the assistance of the foreigners, but were outnumbered and defeated. Both Prince Ching and Wang Weng were killed. It is said that two foreigners escaped through the gates, one with a heavy sword wound in his head. Prince Tuan, in celebration of the victory, distributed 100,000 taels and huge quantities of rice to the Boxers."

The officers proceeding to China include Capt. Grimston, of the 18th Bengal Lancers, Lieut. Teed, of the 14th Bengal Lancers, Veterinary-Lieut. Axe, and Lieut. Hawks, of the Transport Service.

It is announced from Berlin that Major-Gen. von Lessel, Commander of the 28th Division, has been appointed commander of the German Expeditionary Corps to China, at the same time being promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-General. The German warships, Furst Bismarck and Tiger passed through the Suez Canal on their way to China.

THE transport Dwarka is being sent from Bombay to Berbera to convey the Central African Regiment to Accra.

At the quarterly meeting of the directors of the Naval Medical Supplemental Fund, held on the 10th inst., Sir J. N. Dick, K.C.B., Medical Director-General (retired) in the chair, the sum of £55 was distributed among the several applicants.

THE initial cost to the Home Government of the despatch of the Indian force to China is approximately £910,000, and the recurring monthly pay £34,000. These sums omit the cost of the extra cavalry and artillery last ordered, but include the cost of the Coolie Corps. Special warm clothing for the troops is being secured in Canada and Europe.

Navv Personal.

The Duke of York held a Levée at St. James's Palace on Friday last, when the presentations of naval officers were comparatively small. His Royal Highness afterwards left London for Portsmouth on a visit to Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Commander-in-Chief, and next Thursday he presents prizes to the cadets of the Thames Marine Officers' training ship Worcester. Originally the Frederick William, on the list of the Navy, she was the subject of considerable controversy in Parliament as to the amount expended in completing and fitting her for service when it was well known that two-deckers would never again be used on active service.

Admiral the Hon. Sir E. R. Fremantle, who returned from his round-the-world tour on the 26th ult., visited the Naval Cadets' Training Establishment at Dartmouth last Saturday. The gallant Admiral displayed great interest in regard to the Britannia while Commander-in-Chief at Devonport.

Admiral H. J. Blomfield, who died on June 4 last, left estate valued at £4,999. He was a son of an eminent prelate, a former Lord Bishop of London, and one of the few remaining officers of the Syrian Expedition and the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre 1840.

Rear-Admiral A. L. Douglas, Second Naval Lord, dined with Captain Lord Belper and the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms at their mess on Friday in last week.

Rear-Admirals R. N. Custance and J. R. E. Pattisson are respectively mentioned for the Australian and Training Squadron commands when the periods of the present holders of those appointments expire. We do not believe that there is the slightest foundation for either statement, and their appearance will hardly be appreciated by the officers named.

Rear-Admiral Day H. Bosanquet, Commander-in-Chief of the East Indian station, left Seychelles on Monday last in the Eclipse for the Mauritius.

Rear-Admiral H. L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, arrived at Wellington, N.Z., on Monday last.

Captain A. J. Horsley, of the Europa, left Sydney, N.S.W., on Monday last with paid-off crews from the Australian command, and will, if necessary, be detached to China. He arrived at Sydney on June 1 last, and according to programme should have remained ten days, but has been detained there nearly six weeks in consequence, we presume, of the defective machinery and boilers of that cruiser.

Captain John Denison, of the Melpomene, paid off that cruiser at Portsmouth on Monday last, after being nearly four years in commission on the East Indian Station. He is not likely to be long without employment.

Captain R. S. Rolleston, of the Tribune, left Montreal for Quebec and the lower St. Lawrence on Monday last, after a week's stay at the first named important city, where an exceptional display of good feeling and hospitality was accorded the gallant officer and those serving under his command.

Captain J. G. M. Field, of the Marathon, has been directed to proceed from the East Indian Station to augment the fleet in China.

Captains G. M. Henderson, of the Isis, and P. F. Tillard, of the Dido, both left Colombo on Saturday last where they arrived the previous day. Captain Lewis Wintz, of the Goliath, arrived at Colombo on Sunday and left on Tuesday last. The two cruisers will, therefore, reach Hong Kong well in advance of the battleship.

Captain James Startin, of the Arethusa, left Victoria, British Columbia, on Wednesday last to reinforce the China fleet. He saw considerable service with the Naval Brigade in Zululand, 1879, and was promoted for the Benin Expedition, 1897. In the Far East he will undoubtedly render further valuable services if called upon during existing complications with China.

Staff Captain Charles Brent and Lieut. W. H. F. Montanaro, Instructing Officers in Pilotage at the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth, were entertained at a farewell dinner last week by the officers studying at that establishment on the occasion of leaving for the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, where their instructional duties are in future to be carried out.

Commander R. G. Heriz (retired) assumes the Transport Officer's duties at Southampton in place of Captain W. G. White, appointed to the Northampton. Commander J. N. Hill (retired) is withdrawn from the Transport Service afloat for Home Transport duties.

Commander A. E. Grant, of the Racoon, who was detached from the East Indian Station to the Cape of Good Hope command, left the latter last week for the Mauritius to rejoin the flag of Rear-Admiral Day H. Bosanquet.

Commander A. P. Ethelston, who was killed at Graspan on November 25 last while serving with the Powerful's Naval Brigade in that action, left estate valued at £5,055.

Commander David Beatty, of the Barfleur, showed exceptional tenacity last month in endeavouring, with two hundred bluejackets, to capture two Chinese guns that caused considerable trouble to the forces and inhabitants at Tien-tsin. He managed to get close to the guns, but a heavy fire therefrom necessitated withdrawing his force. Although twice wounded, he still led his men in the attack. For his services with the Nile flotilla he was promoted to his present rank in 1898 and awarded D.S.O.

Lieut.-Commander the Hon. G. A. Hardinge had not the pleasure of paying off the Rattler at Sheerness yesterday, after holding command of her nearly four years, his services being required for the Speedwell during the coming manoeuvres.

Lieut.-Commander Cecil Lambert, of the Lapwing, left Vigo on Monday for Devonport, to pay off at the latter port after three years' service in the East Indies.

Lieut. F. N. Grant left Southampton on Saturday last in the British India steamship Dilwara to join the Racoon.

Lieut. C. E. L. Thomas, invalided from the Royal Sovereign, and Staff Paymaster Innes W. Taylor, relieved from the Vulcan, after three years' foreign service, arrived home on Sunday last by the P. and O. steamship Bombay.

Midshipman Bertram Denison, of the Doris, has joined the Naval Brigade at Pretoria. There is, therefore, no intention of withdrawing that force from Field-Marshal Lord Roberts' command.

Chaplain Rev. E. T. Fyffe, of the Royal Naval Barracks, Devonport, whose period of service at that establishment expired on Saturday last, has been granted an extension of six months.

Major G. A. Cox, R.M.L.I., recently promoted to field-rank from the Plymouth Division, has joined Portsmouth Headquarters.

Captain L. W. Miller and Lieut. H. I. H. Davson, R.M.L.I., have obtained extra certificates in musketry at Hythe, and Captains W. N. E. Smith and F. T. W. Harvey, R.M.L.I., have qualified in subjects "a" and "b" for promotion.

Lieut. F. A. Nelson, R.M.L.I., is appointed Swimming Instructor at the Dépôt in place of Lieut. J. P. Shine, R.M.L.I., promoted Captain in the vacancy caused by Captain J. A. Tupman, R.M.L.I. (recently employed on special service in South Africa), becoming Adjutant of the Portsmouth Division, R.M.L.I., on the expiration of Captain F. W. Luard's term of service on the latter Headquarters Staff.

Navv Foreign.

The French Squadrons, under the direction of Vice-Admiral Gervais, have been engaged in manoeuvres in the Channel during the week, but it is impossible as yet to give any account of their particular operations. The programme of the fêtes at the Naval Review of the combined squadrons at Cherbourg has been definitely arranged. The President of the Republic will arrive at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the 18th. He will be received by the authorities at the Naval Prefecture at 5 o'clock, and there will be a banquet at the Hôtel de Ville at 7 o'clock, followed by a naval display at 10 o'clock, and a Venetian Fête on the commercial basin at 10.30. On Thursday, the 19th, the President will visit the Naval Hospital at 9 o'clock, and he will entertain the guests at a déjeuner at the Arsenal. The review of the combined fleets will begin at mid-day, the President and his party being on board the Elan, after which he will leave for Paris, and there will be fireworks in the evening. The President of the Republic will be accompanied in this visit by the Presidents of the Chamber and the Senate. The two squadrons are expected to arrive at Cherbourg to-day or to-morrow. During the operations of the week Lieut. Tissot has had charge of the trials of wireless telegraphy.

The armoured cruiser Gloire was successfully launched at Lorient on June 27. It is unnecessary to describe her, because we have already done so, and her particulars are well known. It may suffice to say that she displaces 10,000 tons, being slightly smaller than the Amiral Aube, and much more so than the new cruisers which are to be built. The Gloire has an armament of two 7.6in. breech-loaders, and eight 6.4in., six 3.9in., and twenty-two smaller quick-firers, and she is provided with water-tube boilers. The Condé, which is to be a sister ship, is to be laid down on the same slip. To-day the armoured cruiser Marseillaise, a sister of the Amiral Aube, is to be launched from the Salou slip at Brest. She has been constructed with great rapidity, though she is the longest vessel ever built at the port, being about 30ft. longer than the Suffren. She has been on the slip only six months, while the Iéna was launched after seven months, and the Suffren after six months and a half. We do not attach much importance to this apparent rapidity of building, for the real test is the completion, and we do not think that the French have made so much progress in this matter as some suppose. The Marseillaise displaces 10,014 tons, and is 453ft. long, with 63ft. 9in. beam and 24ft. 7in. draught. Protection will be given by 6ins. of Harvey steel at the water-line, and 7½ins. on the gun positions, and by a 2-in. deck. The armament will be practically the same as in the Gloire, but four small guns will be additional. There will be water-tube boilers and engines of 20,500 horsepower.

The French Naval Defence Bill having passed the legislature, provision will now have to be made for the building of six battleships of 14,865 tons, five armoured cruisers of about 12,600 tons, and twenty-eight destroyers of about 300 tons, besides about twenty-six torpedo boats. Even if only a part of these are to be put in hand at once, it is difficult to see how the French building establishments can undertake all the work, and it is known that there were recently pourparlers with Messrs. Ansaldo, of Sampierdarena, in regard to the possible laying down of one or more armoured cruisers at that Italian yard. But the proposal raised a howl from a section of the French Press, and it remains to be seen whether it will be revived.

Wereferred last week to the launch of the German battleship Wittelsbach built as "C" at Wilhelmshaven. She differs somewhat from the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and the Kaiser Barbarossa, being the first of a modified class, of which "D," "E," "F," and "G" are in hand at Herr Schichau's yard, Danzig, at the Germania Yard, Kiel, at the Vulcan Yard, Stettin, and at the dockyard, Wilhelmshaven. The earlier ships displace 11,000 tons, but the Wittelsbach class are of 800 tons greater displacement, and, instead of engines of 13,000 horse power, will have 15,000 horse power. The length will be 418ft. 8in., and the beam 68ft. 8in. It is expected that a speed of 19 knots will be attained. The coal capacity is as in the Kaiser Wilhelm class, and the armament both in guns and torpedoes is the same. The date fixed for completion is April 1, 1902.

The troops which France is sending to China form an expeditionary corps consisting of two regiments of marine infantry, a group of four batteries of marine artillery, sections of engineers and telegraphists, details of hospitals attendants and bearers, and the necessary equipment for establishing hospitals on the spot, there being two surgeons attached to each regiment and to the artillery group. The infantry regiments are the 16th and 17th, each formed in three battalions of 600 men. The first was despatched from Indo-China to Taku, and the second proceeded from Toulon in the Nive, Oachar, and Colombo, which also carried the batteries and reserve ammunition, while the engineers and telegraphists are in the Vinh-Long. The artillery group consists of four batteries each, with 110 men and sixty-five draught animals. The guns are provided with 130 rounds of ammunition, and 2,400 rounds are being sent out in the Vinh-Long. The provision of ammunition for the infantry is 122 cartridges per rifle, and a reserve of 500 rifles and a million cartridges have been embarked in the Nive.

It has been decided that the new American battleships shall be called Virginia, Rhode Island, Maryland, Colorado, and South Dakota, while the three armoured cruisers will receive the names of St. Louis, Milwaukee, and Charleston. It appears that, after all, the Board upon the superimposed turret system did not definitely recommend that it should be applied in all the five battleships. Admiral Sampson is a strong advocate of the principle, and his ideal system would be two superimposed turrets—one forward and one aft—as in the Kearsarge, and sixteen 6in. guns, eight on each side, for he believes that the 6in. is the most efficient all-round gun. The Army and Navy Journal thinks the Board came to a lame and impotent conclusion, and that the only sound sense was in the definite pronouncement of Naval-Constructor Taylor. This gentleman believes that the tests so far made have practically no bearing upon the essential point at issue, but he strongly insists that thorough and exhaustive experiments should be carried out. To divide the new ships between the two types would, he says, be to advertise to the world that the United States Navy does not know which system is the best. He believes, if it be admitted that the advantage of being able to concentrate six 8in. guns on either broadside instead of four is sufficiently great to warrant sacrifices in other directions, that this result can be readily obtained by a system less disadvantageous than that of the superimposed turret. It appears that Rear-Admiral Highborn, who is one of the strongest opponents of the double turret, was absent from Washington when the Board discussed the question.

PICKERING'S "KHAKI-BLANCO"

For cleaning and renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather, or White Canvas, and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "Khaki-Blanco," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied. "Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour and always looks like new.

White belts and other military equipment, buckskin and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "Khaki-Blanco," and this will in nowise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

SOUTH AFRICA.

FROM South Africa there has been for some days an almost phenomenal dearth of news. We are aware that important, and we trust decisive, operations are in progress in the Orange River Colony to the South of Bethlehem, but since the capture of that important strategic point on the 7th inst., but little intelligence of the movements of columns has been allowed to come through. Meanwhile, around Pretoria the activity of the Boers has continued, and Lord Roberts has had to make counter-moves to rid his flanks and outposts of the numerous small commandoes that have been impinging on his lines at various points over a wide semi-circle extending from Bronkhorst Spruit in the east to the passes in the Megaliesberg Hills in the west. No further successful attacks have been delivered against the southern railway, and the security of the line to Natal has been assured—it is hoped—by the disposition of Sir Redvers Buller's divisions. Nevertheless, hoping against hope, the Boers continue the unequal struggle, with a pertinacity that would be admirable if it gave any promise of substantial advantage to their cause. In De Wet and Louis Botha the Boers possess undoubtedly two intrepid leaders and able strategists. The successes of the former against the railway, the convoys, and the detached posts in the Orange River Colony have been striking episodes in the war, and the recent series of simultaneous attacks by the latter on Lord Roberts's front and flanks round Pretoria merits approving recognition.

The reverse suffered on the 11th inst. by the small British force at Nital's Nek, or Mosilikatze's Nek, as it is also called, was an unfortunate occurrence. The valour of the troops themselves on the occasion left nothing to be desired. Not so the dispositions of the force, so far as the accounts enable us to judge. The place to be held was an important one on the Rustenberg road, where it crosses the Crocodile River. The force detailed to hold it consisted of five companies of the 2nd Batn. Lincolnshire Regiment, one squadron Scots Greys, and two guns of O Battery, R.H.A. The Lincolns had reached the nek at dusk on the evening before, and at dawn they were apparently surprised by the Boers, who had crept within point-blank range and poured in a withering fire from commanding points. Before the day closed three companies of the Lincolns, having expended their ammunition, were overwhelmed and forced to surrender, losing heavily. At the same time reinforcements must have been close at hand, having left Pretoria, only twenty miles off, earlier in the day. This reverse seems to have been due to neglect to take up and entrench a position on the commanding ground, which was left to the enemy to occupy, and to the scattering of the little force, part of which camped within the pass and part some way south of it. There appears also to have been complete ignorance of the proximity of the Boers, who on their part knew all the movements of the British, and there was evidently an insufficient reserve of ammunition for the garrison of a detached post.

The 11th inst. was marked by simultaneous attacks from east, north, and west on the British posts round Pretoria. On the east Louis Botha attempted to force the position held by General Hutton, who, reinforced by Colonel Mahon, assumed the offensive and drove the enemy from their own positions. The outposts of the 7th Dragoon Guards were assailed six miles to the north-east, near Derdepoot, and driven in, fighting, upon their supports. In the Megaliesberg Hills, twenty miles to the west, the British garrison of Nital's Nek was defeated. A successful engagement was fought near Krugersdorp, thirty-five miles to the south-west, by General Smith-Dorrien, who inflicted heavy loss on the Boers. On the same day there were unsuccessful attempts made to destroy the Natal railway near Paardekraal, south-east of Standerton, and near Vlakklaagte Station south-east of Heidelberg. About the same time Lord Dundonald, near Vilpoort, captured the laager of the force that had destroyed Leeuwspruit Bridge a few days before, and had torn up the line.

On the 13th General Clery, whose headquarters were near Greylingstad, was engaged in a smart action near Platkop, and drove the Boers from their kopjes, and General Baden-

Powell's Australian Bushmen defeated a party of the enemy near Rustenburg. After these affairs, as the enemy showed a disposition to mass their forces across Lord Roberts's front along the Magaliesberg Hills, he detached a force on Monday to clear his front, when they vacated their positions without firing a shot. The force employed was a new brigade with mounted infantry and guns formed for General Ian Hamilton, whose return to duty will be hailed with general satisfaction. Hamilton advanced to Waterval without opposition, and continued his march on Tuesday to Hamanskraal, twenty-six miles north of Pretoria on the Pieterburg railway. While the enemy eluded Hamilton's column on Monday, they made repeated and determined attacks on General Pole-Carew's position and on the left of the British advanced line covering Pretoria, but were repulsed with loss. By this forward movement the enemy have been pushed back, and the commandoes of Botha and Delarey have been separated. For the further clearing of Lord Roberts's left rear, Lord Methuen and Smith-Dorrien have advanced towards Rustenburg from Krugersdorp, but similar tactics to those we have recorded will no doubt be continued by the enemy until a serious move against the Delagoa Bay railway, threatening Botha's rear, is set on foot, or an advance in force is made eastwards from Pretoria.

The encircling movement round Fouriesburg received on Monday a disappointing check in the escape of 1,500 Boers, with five guns, through the cordon formed by Generals Hunter and Rundle south-west of Bethlehem. When last heard of they were making for Lindley, closely followed by Paget's and Broadwood's Brigades. There is some satisfaction in the fact that they did not break through the southern cordon which Sir Leslie Rundle and Brabant have, hitherto so successfully, been gradually drawing closer towards Fouriesburg, where Mr. Steyn and his burghers stand at bay, in an area surrounded by mountains approachable by five passes, of which two only, Wit Nek to the west, and Commando Nek to the south, are as yet commanded by the British. On the 11th inst. Rundle marched eastward towards Witkop, from Biddulphsberg north of Senekal, meeting with no opposition beyond some sniping. Excellent service was performed on the occasion by the scouts under Captain Driscoll, who himself is reported to have captured four armed burghers single-handed, and to have brought them into camp. On Sunday the column reached Rooikrantz and blocked the exit against a body of the enemy attempting to break out. Rundle was then about sixteen miles west of Fouriesburg where, as well as at Retief's Nek, and Slabert's Nek, further north, the Boers are supposed to hold strong defensive positions. Of the movements of Clements', Paget's, and Hunter's columns, since the capture of Bethlehem on the 7th inst., there has been no intelligence, nor of the progress of the force reported on the 13th to be moving up Van Reenen's Pass from Natal. It is perhaps not surprising that in some quarters a feeling of impatience is arising as week after week passes and so little apparent progress is made in the Orange River Colony. Possibly if more information were vouchsafed from the front the undoubted difficulties that surround the operations would be more thoroughly appreciated. The general situation in the theatre of war cannot be called unsatisfactory from a military standpoint, but the facts that, after nearly ten months of hostilities and with some 200,000 troops in the field, we have not yet broken down all opposition in the Orange River Colony now some time annexed, and that the greater part of the Transvaal still remains unconquered, are both surprising and disappointing. Against the strategy and leadership of Lord Roberts no dissentient word can be said, the whole Continental Press is in accord in giving praise to him, but opinions are frequently and plainly expressed both locally and at home, to the effect that rebellion and treachery have been too leniently dealt with, and that the prolongation of the war may be ascribed to an over-lenient policy which our Dutch enemies quite misunderstand, thoroughly despise, and turn on every occasion to their own account. This is where the mistake has been all through, and it is rather amusing to find Continental journals saying so freely. As they hold, war is war, and a campaign conducted on the lines which are being pursued in South Africa must prove disappointing as it gives no one a fair chance and is not even kind to the enemy.

COMMON SENSE IN WAR-MAKING.

ONE general rule which must be observed in moving troops in a mountainous country is to avoid 'small detachments' such as could not maintain themselves in the valley when they might be exposed to attack." That simple common-sense principle was laid down by the Duke of Wellington in reference to troop-leading in such countries as the Pyrenees — and it is of universal application. The neglect of it in any mountainous country accounts for "untoward incidents" which have occurred in South Africa — the capture of small detachments and guns by bodies of the enemy, who thrust themselves in between such detachments and the columns of the army around them. Wellington was explaining to Lord de Ros his reasons for disagreeing with the general opinion that the conduct of military operations in a mountainous country presented much greater difficulties than it did in a plain: "At first no doubt," said he, "this is the case, but, when once you become accustomed to it and acquainted with the country, I consider it easier to direct the movements of troops in mountains than in the plains."

One of the strangest features about these incidents has been the escape of the adventurous and successful bands with their prisoners and guns out of the invaders' grasp amid the great host all around—ten to one at least. The news of the disaster is carried to headquarters not twenty miles away; a column starts at once to overwhelm the daring Dutchmen and release the prisoners. Seldom, or never, do they succeed in overtaking the enemy, and the guns are carried off as if they were feathers. There are excuses, of course. White flags flagitiously displayed, false information given by deceitful informers, and want of ammunition. Heaven forbid that we should say or hint one word in disparagement of the soldiers of the Queen. They go where they are ordered. They stand where they are placed. Even the Colonial troopers, Bushmen and others, who have won the highest praise from Lord Roberts, have sometimes made mistakes and have got into scrapes, though they have been held up as patterns of what mounted infantry and light cavalry ought to be—but, all said and done, there has been in no war with the details of which we are acquainted so many strange captures of men and guns, from the Elandslaagte action outside Ladysmith to the loss of two guns and the surrender of the Scots Greys and Lincolns within twenty miles of Lord Roberts' headquarters the other day, as there has been in the present campaign. In every instance there has been a final want of ammunition mentioned as a cause of final submission. It cannot be easily understood how detachments of three arms some 1,000 strong should be placed in the positions the Duke of Wellington condemned without reserves of ammunition. No one pretends that Boers are invisible, though they take to cover kindly while our troops are clad in grasshopper colour, and no amount of "slimness" will enable columns of men on foot or horseback to conceal themselves or their guns and baggage on the march. Anyway it is plainly demonstrated that detachments in mountainous countries should not be small and isolated, and that the Duke of Wellington's rule is as sound in South Africa as it was in Spain.

Army Notes.

The teeming millions of China, headed by Boxer reactionaries and revolted Imperial troops, have thrown down the gauntlet to Europe. Notwithstanding statements to the contrary emanating from doubtful Chinese sources, both the diplomatic world and the general public have been forced to believe that Peking, on or about the 8th inst., was the scene of a colossal crime for which a parallel must be sought in the tragedies of Pagan Rome. The European and American Ministers, with their staffs, their wives and children, the guards of their legations, and a mixed company of missionaries and others, enclosed within the walls of the British Legation, surrounded by infuriated mobs, and cut off from the outer world beyond all hope of relief, were, it is reported, ruthlessly slaughtered after an heroic and desperate resistance, of which perhaps no trustworthy details may ever reach us, the probability being, if the deed has in reality been committed, that not a soul has escaped to tell the tale. The event is one of such appalling magnitude, both from its intrinsic horror and the momentous consequences of which it may be the precursor, that for the time it eclipses all other matters. Meanwhile the work of retribution has already made substantial progress, for on Saturday the 14th inst., the important city of Tien-tsin was stormed and captured, after very heavy fighting, by the allied forces. This punitive work must continue, at all sacrifices, until the outraged nations have proved their power to avenge their slain Ministers, and Peking has met its just doom. There is no disguising that.

History is moving like a cyclone. Since this time last year the world has been unlearning by experience what it learned by theory. The process, which began in South Africa, is being carried on in the Far East with consequences so vast that at present we can only see the shadow of them. For two generations at least belief in the power of Russia has lain like a nightmare on Europe and Asia: to-day it is called in question by the Chinese! Could the irony of events go further? Russia was inaccessible, we were told; her land frontier was easily defended; her Transcontinental railway was to effect a peaceful revolution in Asia; her naval and military strength were equal to the demands of Empire. These claims will now have to be established. Russia and the world reckoned without the Chinese, who have been goaded to madness by the encroachments of their northern neighbour. Is it likely that a proud people, such as the Chinese have always been, forget the manner in which they were robbed of Saghalien, the Amur Valley, Manchuria, and other territories incorporated within the Czar's dominions? Is it likely they forget that Russia compared to them is a new power? Not more than a century ago they were able to impose terms on her at Kainardji. About the same time she was only saved from the horrors of invasion by the death of Nadir Shah. For hundreds of years she lay prostrate under the yoke of Tartar princes. To-day the Chinese are thinking only of revenge; to-morrow, being a practical people, they will think of other things, amongst others the need of territory for their surplus population. The position of Russia is very critical. She is thousands of miles from her base. The most flourishing of her Siberian provinces does not supply more than enough food for its own population. The Transcontinental line beyond Lake Baikal is practically useless for the rapid transport of soldiers, and water communication is impossible. It should be remembered that the finest railway system in the world will sometimes break down under the pressure of a great war; what then can be expected of the single line of rails which is called the Transcontinental Railway. A few months ago to point out these facts was to invite ridicule. The world has moved since then, and we seem to be on the eve of one of the mightiest upheavals in history.

It is pleasant to turn from the contemplation of Peking and its desolate legations to Ashanti, and to record the timely relief of beleaguered Kumasi, as reported by a Reuter's telegram from Fumsu. True to his promise, and overcoming enormous difficulties due to climate, floods, and want of carriers, Colonel Willcocks on Sunday reached the place and joined hands with the little garrison. The greatest credit is due to Colonel Willcocks for his successful conduct of this affair, as well as to his gallant Colonial troops. It is perhaps vain to hope that even with the reoccupation of Kumasi, resistance will cease, or that the revolted tribes will return to their allegiance without more decided defeat, but it is satisfactory to know that once again a British force has fought its way to Kumasi. This time the work has been done by black troops only, led by a body of plucky officers who well deserve the recognition they will in due course receive at the hands of their Sovereign.

When the Volunteers Bill emerges from the House of Commons it will be something like the play of "Hamlet" with Hamlet omitted. The gist of the Bill has been destroyed by Mr. Wyndham's promise to withdraw the sub-section under which special service corps were to be formed of men willing to give service abroad if called upon. We have before expressed doubts as to whether any great number of our civilian soldiers would take this liability upon themselves, but the experiment was well worth trying, and as this portion of the Bill was purely permissive it could, we think, have done no harm to the Volunteer movement. We regret, therefore, that Mr. Wyndham should have withdrawn the proposal in face of the opposition which it met with from the older and more conservative body of Volunteers who take alarm at any proposal to tamper with the constitution of the force. Lord Lansdowne assured us during the passage of the Bill through the Upper Chamber that the proposal met with the approval of the majority of commanding officers of Volunteers, and we quite fail to see that any new facts were brought out in the debate on the Bill in the House of Commons on Wednesday to cause the War Office to go back on its original proposal. Mr. Wyndham gave an instance of the inconvenience of waiting till war actually broke out before seeking to learn what men were willing to go to the front and what men were not. During the application of the necessary tests of the men who volunteered to go out to South Africa last year, the Volunteers had to shoot ankle deep in slush, or lying down on the snow in the fading light of a winter afternoon. It was to guard against the recurrence of such things as this rather than to build up a second reserve for the Regulars that the War Office laid the proposal they have now abandoned before Parliament, and we cannot agree with Mr. Arnold Forster and others who took part in the debate on Wednesday that such a reform should wait the consideration of the question of Army reorganisation as a whole. However, we quite recognise that the Government cannot set aside its promise to amend the Bill in the direction indicated when it comes to be considered in committee. Nor would we wish to see the Bill dropped altogether, the alteration it makes in the conditions upon which the Volunteers may be called to arms making it well worth having.

"A General Officer," who asks "why Lord Roberts makes such changes in the commands and in the composition of brigades, and even of divisions," is informed that we do not understand the reasons for the action which our correspondent seems to deprecate, but that it would be safe, we think, to assume they are good, however mysterious they may appear from this distance to be. It is not easy to explain the disappearance of some names of officers, and even of divisions, in the records of the operations connected with the arrangements for circumventing the enemy, by no means of happy memory. Readers of Blackwood—may their number never diminish!—may recollect an article, last April, dealing with "the settlement" of the conquered territories on the certainty that with the occupation of Bloemfontein and Pretoria the war was practically over, but now, in the middle of the fourth month since Cronje's surrender, every day's paper has its budget of war news—of attacks on the positions of the British in the occupied country, of active operations against our communications, of losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners, accompanied by those distressing casualty lists from the field and from the hospitals. It was predicted that the Boer commandoes would be deprived of mobility when winter came and the veldt grasses were no longer available for their ponies, but it is not so. Et pur se muove. They are "entrapped," "netted," and "in desperate straits," and slip through the entanglements rejoicing, and the Colonial papers and ferocious correspondents demand rigorous measures, and hoot at the milk and water leniency of the authorities in dealing with the rebels, which encourages the Boers to fight. The forward move, "after a considerable period of apparent inaction," Lord Roberts is making towards Machadodorp has commenced, and Ian Hamilton's column has reached Waterval, fifteen miles from Pretoria. "It's a far cry to Loch Awe" still. The liveliness of the enemy was attested last Monday by the attack on Pole-Carew and Hutton, and the Times observes that "there was not much to choose between their losses and our own" on the occasion, when, according to Lord Roberts, the Boers "suffered severely." We must clothe our souls in patience and our bodies in steel, and wait for the bitter end of a war which will not bring peace to South Africa. Then perhaps Carrington will emerge from the interior, and the country will learn what despatches did not make public about other leaders in the war, who are charged with the responsibility of fathering another reorganisation of the British Army.

The homeward flight of "birds of Paradise" has been now for some little time in progress, and the Cape Colony and Natal have seen with regret—especially the hotel keepers—many of the fair objects of Mr. Treves's denunciation preening their feathers for the shores they left intent on benevolent enterprise and novel experiences a few months ago. It would be ungallant after all to deny that they were hailed with gratitude generally and were as useful as they were ornamental. In time to come the immense volume of sympathy with suffering and unostentatious self-sacrifice on the part of these sisters of charity will be appreciated. Even in Miss Nightingale's days the medical officers did not shower blessings on the lady nurses—the patients did. Amen.

The patriotism of the citizens of London in equipping and putting into the field a complete corps of Volunteers—artillery, mounted infantry and infantry—for active service in South Africa has been acknowledged in a way which all ranks of the Army and the Volunteers will readily acknowledge to be appropriate and well-timed. The Duke of York was on Tuesday last gazetted as Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Fusiliers, City of London Regiment. His Royal Highness's appointment, we are requested to say, is due to a desire on the part of the Queen that the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London should be brought to feel how sensible Her Majesty is of the great services they have rendered to the Army, the Volunteer force, and the Empire. Her Majesty has been much impressed by the excellent reports furnished by Lord Roberts of the gallant and soldierly behaviour on every occasion by all ranks of the City Imperial Volunteers, who have so well maintained the credit of the British Army in South Africa. The Queen is fully alive to the important part which the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London have played in a moment of war emergency, and it is her Majesty's earnest hope that the Royal Fusiliers, the City Imperial Volunteers, and the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London will accept his Royal Highness's appointment as proof of her recognition of the heroism of brave men who have gone into the field actuated by a most praiseworthy desire to do their duty, and have thus enabled the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London to launch successfully a new feature in the chain of national defence which is calculated to produce such important results in the future. The Duke of York's appointment to the Royal Fusiliers will be the more acceptable, inasmuch as it marks his first connection with a British Line regiment. His Royal Highness is colonel of a corps of Bengal Lancers, of the 3rd Batn. West Yorkshire Regiment, of the Suffolk Yeomanry, and of the 3rd Middlesex Artillery and 5th V.B. Hampshire Regiment, but up to the present time he has held no commission in a regiment of the Line. In future it will be his privilege to appear in the uniform of the Royal Fusiliers, and it cannot fail to bring satisfaction to the Corporation of the City of London to know that it was due to a Lord Mayor that the question of his association with the Royal Fusiliers first arose.

The officers called back to regimental employment from the Reserve have a grievance, which Major Hermon-Hodge, M.P., has been engaged for some weeks past in bringing to the notice of the War Office. There are two classes of Reserve officers, let it be understood. First, those who have retired with a gratuity of from £1,200 to £2,000, according to length of service up to twenty years, and secondly, those who have retired on a pension of varying amount according to length of service, of over twenty years. It may reasonably be considered that the officers who retired on a gratuity received a capitalised pension. Officers in this category re-called for duty receive, very properly, the Army pay of any appointment, regimental or otherwise, the duties of which they are ordered to perform, without deductions being made. Not so officers who have retired on a pension after twenty years' service. They are docked the whole of such pension, not a part of it, like those holding civil employment under the Government. To take a case. A major who has retired on the pension of £200 a year loses his pension, but receives 16s. a day pay, or £292 a year. The Government thus gets his services for £92 a year, regardless of the expense to which he will be put if, as is most probable, he is a married man with a family and fixed abode. The case of an officer who has longer service and is in receipt of £250 a year is even harder, for his services will cost the Government £42 a year only, and so on. The officer who has received his gratuity of £2,000 draws the same amount of pay, £292 a year, in addition to the interest on his £2,000. He is thus in a better position than one who with longer service has been awarded a pension of £200. This Major Hermon-Hodge holds to be wrong.

In order to elicit a proper explanation the Under-Secretary of State for War was approached and three questions were put to him on the subject, viz.:—"Why Reserve officers entitled to pensions are deprived of them during their present service, while no deductions are made in the case of officers who have received a gratuity; whether the Reserve officers are receiving the full allowances of their rank; and whether such officers as have been deprived of their pensions will be entitled to them as a matter of right on the conclusion of their present service." The official reply to these questions is of so much interest to many officers that we cannot do better than give it in full. Retired pay, it is held, "is not granted to officers solely as a reward for work done: it is also a retaining fee, and is coupled with a liability to return to service. If an officer of military age refuses to return to service when summoned his retired pay may be stopped as a punishment. That being so, the rule is, exactly as in the case of half-pay, that the lower rate of pay drops when the full rate begins. An officer is not allowed to draw full pay and retired pay at the same time any more than he is allowed to draw full pay and half-pay simultaneously. Turning to the case of the officer who retires with a gratuity, his gratuity is regarded as a capitalised retired pay. He compounds for an annual rate of retired pay by accepting a gratuity. Therefore the rule was that when he came back to full pay, the actuarial annual value of his gratuity should be deducted from his full pay. The Secretary of State has changed that rule for two reasons. In the first place, actuarial annual value of the gratuity is always much less than the retired pay given for the same service. But the more practical point is that the gratuity was actually given as a lump sum, and is not, as a rule, in the officer's possession when he is called upon to return to service, so that a deduction from full pay would in that case be a real hardship to the officer. The Secretary of State took a favourable view of those cases, and discontinued the deduction." As regards the other question raised, it is explained that "every officer recalled to service gets his allowances unless he receives consolidated pay, which includes allowances; and every officer who passed from retired pay to full pay when called out will return to retired pay when the emergency is past."

No reasoning could very well be more unsound, having regard to previous decisions dealing with the same class of public servants holding civil employment under the Government. It is tantamount to an admission that the officers whose complaint Major Hermon-Hodge has so ably represented are justified in their protest. Indeed, it would be impossible for the War Office to defend its action, so long as a certain return issued annually is rendered necessary. No one, of course, wishes to injure the officers who have taken their gratuities, but as those who have qualified for pensions are only called up on an emergency, it does seem monstrously unfair to treat them in the way they have been treated in the present crisis. At the same time it is right it should be known that at the War Office the injustice is more or less admitted. That department has to make the best it can of a bad case; but the Treasury is not to be persuaded that there is any hardship. These matters do not affect the pockets of Downing Street officials; it is only retired officers of the Army who suffer, and, despite the promise made when the purchase system was abolished that no officer should be worse off under new warrants, it is only too evident that one large section is, viz., the retired field officer brought back to employment from the Reserve after twenty years' service.

We could have no stronger proof of the effect of past neglect on the Militia than the statements of Lord Lansdowne himself in the House of Lords the other day in reply to Lord Wemyss. The noble Earl desired information on three heads—(1) To what extent the Militia is below its establishment at the present time; (2) of those serving, how many so-called Militiamen are serving in Great Britain, and of these how many are below twenty and eighteen years of age; (3) what force of Militia infantry, deducting Militiamen under twenty years of age, and making an average allowance for casualties and absentees, could at the present time be put in the field for the home defence of the United Kingdom? Lord Lansdowne, who, by the bye, can scarcely be held responsible for the state of things we find existing, did not attempt to make them better than they are. Excluding the permanent staff he gave the figures as follows:—The establishment is 124,273. The number of men now serving in the Militia is 91,824, but in addition to those there are about 12,000 Militia Reservists who are serving with the Line. Including the Militia Reservists the deficiency is thus 20,000, and excluding them 32,000. Of the Militia serving at home there are in Great Britain 57,000, and in Ireland 13,000. Of the 57,000 serving in Great Britain there are under the age of twenty 21,000, of whom 5,000 are under the age of eighteen. Of the 13,000 in Ireland 5,500 are under twenty, and of those 1,400 are under eighteen. The infantry Militia in the United Kingdom numbers 54,000, of whom 22,000 are under the age of twenty. About 22,700 represents the normal deduction to be made on account of sickness. When it is considered what the Militia is, and how important a part it plays in our system of defence, it will be seen how necessary it is for it to be placed on a better basis. The figures given by Lord Lansdowne are convincing arguments in favour of reform. Having regard to the lamentable inadequacy of our Army, there is no excuse for the past neglect of the Militia by successive Ministers for War, for it has placed the interests of the whole Empire in jeopardy. It may be said that the 91,000 men are always available for service. But how can they be—clothed and equipped as they are, and devoid of all administrative organisation in the shape of transport and supply services. Lord Lansdowne has promised that the reforms which he has in contemplation for the improvement of the force shall not be delayed. They ought not to be, for the question of Militia efficiency is one of the most pressing with which the War Office has to deal at the present time. The force is now wholly embodied. With a war in South Africa on our hands, and a serious difficulty facing us in the Far East, even the officials of the Treasury must have been brought to recognise how dangerous the policy is which their department has been satisfied for years past to pursue.

Mr. Hales, who comes to us from the United States by way of Australia, is one of the most brilliant newspaper correspondents at the front. Unfortunately he is not equally reliable. He is not a good prophet, and his estimate of the British soldier differs from that of all others entitled to give an opinion. When his sympathies and his knowledge go hand in hand, however, he generally succeeds in saying something worth hearing. His latest letter to the Daily News is a case in point. While exaggerating the shortcomings of the transport service in South Africa, he suggests a reform which the War Office would do well to consider. Over and over again General French, and other leaders of cavalry and mounted infantry, have had the fruits of their most brilliant movements snatched from their grasp by the failure of the transport, Mr. Hales says that the ox-waggon is to blame, and few will differ from him. Substitute for it the pack-horse of the Australian bushman, and the problem of securing the utmost mobility of mounted troops is solved. In other words, the wandering population of the "never-never" country have learned a lesson in peace, time which disaster after disaster in South Africa has not taught our military authorities at some or at the front. Australia, perhaps, presents greater difficulties to the traveller than any other country inhabited by white men. Hence her miners, shearers, and stock-riders, who, of necessity, are continually on the move, are past masters in the art of covering vast distances rapidly and effectively. "Each man provides himself with two useful horses, both broken in to saddle and to pack-saddle." One carries himself and his blankets, or a weight of about thirteen stone; the other carries his rations, which, with the pack-saddle, weighs about 196 pounds. Each horse, therefore, bears a similar burden. A bushman so equipped can go almost anywhere, riding one horse and leading the other. Such a system, adapted to military conditions, would be invaluable in war. Not only could cavalry take up admirable positions, and hold them until the arrival of heavy convoys, but flanking movements could be made on a magnificent scale. To be successful in these days an army must possess mobility; to secure mobility, the pack-horse is a more effective agent than the slow-moving ox-waggon. General French and other cavalry leaders will have much to say on the subject when they return to England, if what we hear in private letters from the front is true.

Mr. Balfour in the House of Commons on Tuesday announced the names of the two additional members of the South African Hospitals Commission. The Ministers have induced Sir David Richmond and Lieut.-Colonel F. Harrison, Engineer and Railway Volunteer Staff Corps, to accept the responsibility of assisting Lord Justice Romer in investigating the charges of maladministration. The selection cannot fail to meet with approval. Sir David Richmond is Lord Provost of Glasgow and a business man of practical common sense, who knows well what is wanted in order to meet the requirements of an up-to-date medical organisation. Lieut.-Colonel Harrison is not only general manager of the London and North-Western Railway Company—admittedly one of the best-managed lines of railway in the world—but also a valued member of the Army Railway Committee. Both the new Commissioners have, therefore, every recommendation that the most exacting of critics could demand, and they cannot fail to bring to bear on the issues to be determined that sound and dispassionate judgment which is so essential to cause the public to regard the efforts of the Commissioners as a serious endeavour to ascertain the truth. Colonel Harrison has the special qualification of long and intimate knowledge of railway administration. He will, therefore, be in position to weigh more carefully all the evidence which may be forthcoming under this head. The War Office ought to be thankful to those Members of Parliament who objected in the first instance to the constitution of the Commission. As at first proposed the Commission would simply have been ludicrous, for a report handed in by a body so constituted could not possibly have been regarded seriously by any one. The presence at the table of Sir David Richmond and Colonel Harrison will make all the difference. We should have preferred, we confess, to have seen one important change made by the Government, and it is difficult to understand how those responsible can have been so ill-advised as not to have seen the desirability of bowing to the judgment of the House; but they have not. An ineffectual attempt made on Tuesday to raise the general question by a motion for adjournment was frustrated, the Speaker having ruled that debate, if such was to be allowed, would require to be restricted to a discussion on the merits of the two newly-elected Commissioners, as to whose capacity there can be and was no doubt. The Government once again went out of its way to do the wrong thing in the wrong way. We, however, can only hope that in the end all may come well. Two gentlemen of the position and known ability of Sir David Richmond and Colonel Harrison are not likely to allow themselves to be carried away by any extraneous matters which it may be sought to introduce into the inquiry, and so long as they do their duty, as they are certain to do, conscientiously, there is nothing to fear as to the ultimate result of their investigation, in which all classes of the community are naturally interested, bearing as it does, so directly on the general well-being of the Army. It is expected that the Commission will take evidence in this country before leaving for South Africa. The Director General of the Army Medical Department will almost certainly be called, and it is probable that some of the patients who passed through the hospitals in Bloemfontein in April and May, and are now in this country, will be examined.

THE Lord Mayor has received a telegram from the commandant of the City Imperial Volunteers stating that the battalion is in garrison at Heilbron.

An examination of officers who are candidates for admission to the Staff College is to be held at the University of London, South Kensington, on the 1st prox. and eight following week days.

LETTERS for officers and men serving with the Chinese Expeditionary Force under Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alfred Gaselee should be addressed "China Field Force, via Hong Kong."

OFFICERS invalided in consequence of active service in the field, will in future be allowed travelling expenses to their homes in the United Kingdom, and from their homes to the stations at which they rejoin for duty.

THE Curragh District Athletic Meeting will be held on the 30th inst. The open events are:—Quarter-mile race (Army Challenge Cup), open to Regulars only. One mile race. Three miles race, open to all troops quartered in Ireland.

GEN. SIR A. G. MONTGOMERY MOORE, Commanding at Aldershot, has notified that the whole of the stoppages of men admitted to hospital through the effects of the heat on the occasion of the field day on June 11, are, by order of the War Office, to be remitted.

A CORRESPONDENT at Fauresmith writes:—On June 16 a picked team of the Denbighshire Yeomanry had a friendly shooting match with a picked team of the Jagersfontein Rifle Club, the Yeomanry winning easily by 20 points. The utmost good nature prevailed, the burghers thoroughly appreciating their opportunity of once again handling their Mausers.

THERE will be an experimental mobilization of troops on a considerable scale in defence of the Thames from Aug. 1 to 10. The barracks at Chatham, the School of Military Engineering, and the Royal Engineer works will be virtually closed during that period, and Major-Gen. Sir Thomas Fraser, the general officer commanding the Thames District, and the staff will be temporarily transferred with the headquarters to Chattenden, on the opposite shore of the River Medway.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' FAMILIES.—Col. Gildea, chairman and treasurer of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association, 23, Queen Anne's Gate, writes that he is receiving numerous inquiries as to whether or not the organisation will be able to render assistance to the wives and families of men serving in China and Ashanti. "The association," he says, "is not solely a war fund, but exists, and has existed over fifteen years, for the relief of the wives and families of all soldiers and sailors, without any distinction, and irrespective of the part of the world in which they may be serving. Our ordinary income enables us to meet the demands on our fund in time of peace, but we look with confidence to the public to supply what is necessary to carry on our work in time of war."

A FIGHTING REGIMENT.—A correspondent writes:—"Among the Indian regiments under orders for China is the 20th Punjab Infantry, which was actively engaged at the taking of the Taku Forts in 1860, and was the first corps, French or English, to enter Peking and to plant the British colours on its walls. Since then it has been to Cairo (1882), to Herat (1884), and has served with distinction in nearly every campaign on the North-west Frontier of India, including Ambela, where it lost one-third of its numbers in killed and wounded, and though the Pathan or Afridi element has always preponderated in its ranks it did not have a single desertion. With the exception, perhaps, of the 2nd Gurkhas and the Guide Corps, no Indian regiment has a better fighting record since it was raised in 1837 than the 20th Punjab Infantry, and in mountain warfare it yields to none."

PREVENTION OF ZYMOTIC DISEASES.—For greater security have the Drainage and Water Supply of your Town and Country or temporary Residence examined and certified by The Sanitary Engineering Company (H. Carter, C.E., Manager), 65, Victoria Street, Westminster.—Fees quoted on receipt of full particulars. Established 23 years. Telegrams: "Sanitation, London."

The Queen held a private investiture at Windsor Castle on Saturday last. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of York, proceeded to the Green Drawing Room at 3.30 o'clock. Those decorated included:—

THE ORDER OF THE THISTLE.

Col. the Marquis of Zetland, 1st North York Volunteer Artillery.

K.C.B.'s.

Major-Gen. Thomas Fraser, R.E., Commanding Thames District.

Major-Gen. Frederick Maurice, R.A., Commanding Woolwich District.

Gen. Alexander George Montgomery Moore, Colonel 18th Hussars, Commanding Aldershot District.

C.I.E.'s.

Lieut.-Col. M. J. Meade, I.S.C.

Lieut.-Col. A. M. Crofts, I.M.S.

Lord Wolseley visited the Queen at Windsor Castle on the 13th inst., and remained to dinner. General Sir Henry Brackenbury, R.A., was her Majesty's guest on the night of the 12th inst.

The Queen on Wednesday afternoon, at Frogmore, conferred upon Captain E. B. Towse, 1st Batn. Gordon Highlanders, the decoration of the Victoria Cross for conspicuous bravery as follows:—On December 11, 1899, at the action of Magersfontein, Captain Towse was brought to notice by his commanding officer for his gallantry and devotion in assisting the late Colonel Downman, when mortally wounded, in the retirement, and endeavouring, when close up to the front of the firing line, to carry Colonel Downman on his back, but finding this impossible Captain Towse supported him till joined by Colour-Sergeant Nelson and Lance-Corporal Hodgson. On April 30, 1900, Captain Towse, with twelve men, took up a position on the top of Mount Thaba, far away from support. A force of about 150 Boers attempted to seize the plateau, neither party appearing to see the other until they were but 100 yards apart. Some of the Boers then got within forty yards of Captain Towse and his party, and called on him to surrender. He at once caused his men to open fire, and remained firing himself until severely wounded (both eyes shattered), succeeding in driving off the Boers. The gallantry of this officer in vigorously attacking the enemy (for he not only fired, but charged forward) saved the situation, notwithstanding the numerical superiority of the Boers. Mrs. Towse, wife of Captain Towse, who accompanied her husband, and led him in, had the honour of being presented to the Queen.

Her Majesty afterwards decorated Staff-Sergeant S. W. McConnell, Army Gymnastic Staff, with the medal for Distinguished Conduct in the Field for his good services during the final pursuit and defeat of the Khalifa in the Soudan in November, 1899, for which he was brought to notice by the Sirdar of the Egyptian Army. Her Royal Highness Princess Henry of Battenberg was present with the Queen. Lord Lawrence, Lord-in-Waiting; Lieut.-Colonel Sir Arthur Bigge, and Major-General Sir John McNeill, Equerry-in-Waiting, were in attendance.

In connection with Princess Christian's Homes of Rest for Discharged Soldiers and Sailors now in course of erection at Bisley, we are authorised to state that her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to endow two beds; the Duke and Duchess of York endow one bed for a soldier or sailor; Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein one bed for the King's Royal Rifles; and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and Princess Aribert of Anhalt a bed for a "green-jacket."

We are desired to contradict the statements which have been published as to the serious illness of Lord Roberts. No information has reached the War Office, we are assured, to give justification to these and other rumours, which have occasioned no little annoyance, and are absolutely devoid of all foundation.

The Mayor of Windsor has received a telegram from Lord Roberts with reference to the proposal of the corporation to confer upon him the honorary freedom of the Royal Borough:—"I accept most gratefully the high honour proposed to be conferred on me.—Roberts."

Field-Marshal Sir Neville Chamberlain, G.C.B., arrived at Windsor Castle on the 13th inst., and was introduced to the Queen's presence by the Lord-in-Waiting, and received from her Majesty his bâton, and kissed hands.

General Sir Power Palmer, we understand, is almost certain to be confirmed in his appointment as Commander-in-Chief in India, the success with which he has discharged the duties since the death of General Sir William Lockhart marking him as an officer eminently fitted to occupy this important office at the present time. The Simla correspondent of the Times telegraphed the other day:—

"The selection of the staff and troops by Sir A. P. Palmer commands the full approval of the Army and the public. His practical management of affairs connected with the expedition strengthens his unquestionably great claims to be confirmed as commander-in-chief. The present arrangement under which, owing to the provisional nature of his appointment, he is excluded from the Viceroy's Executive Council is injurious to the interests of the Army. This exclusion is probably unknown to the public at home, who do not realise that Sir A. P. Palmer has no share in the deliberations of the Council under existing conditions, though military affairs of the highest importance may be under discussion. His confirmation in office can alone remove the disqualification under which the head of the Army in India now labours."

There is a report that General Sir Francis Grenfell has been selected for the command of the British troops in China. Our own information, however, is to the effect that the announcement is premature, as no appointment has been made.

A movement has been started in India under the patronage of the Viceroy to raise a memorial to the late General Sir William Lockhart.

The funeral of Lady Low, wife of General Sir Robert Low, took place at Poona on the 24th ult., and was attended by a large number of ladies and gentlemen. Lord Northcote was present at the cemetery with his personal staff. His Excellency placed a beautiful wreath on the grave as a token of their Excellencies' sympathy and esteem. The cortege left Magdala House at 5 p.m., the coffin being placed on a gun carriage. Brigadier-Generals Barlow and Blakesley, Colonels Proudfoot, Dobbs, Grant, Lloyd and Major Bowers of the District Staff acted as pallbearers. Sir Robert Low, supported on either hand by the Misses Low, and followed by Captain and Mrs. Low and Major Stanton, were the chief mourners. On reaching the cemetery the coffin was carried on the shoulders of six sergeants of the 1st Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry to the grave. The Lord Bishop of Bombay met the coffin at the gate headed by a procession, and read the burial service, at the close of which wreaths were laid on the coffin.

Lieut.-General Sir George White, V.C., as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Gibraltar, paid an official visit on Tuesday to General Bouza, the Governor of Algeiras. His Excellency was received at the landing stage by a guard of honour of Cazadores from Tarifa, with their colours and regimental band, which played the British National Anthem. Sir George White afterwards drove to General Bouza's residence, where a guard of honour of mounted infantry received him. He was subsequently entertained at luncheon by General Bouza, who proposed the toasts of "The Queen-Regent of Spain," "Queen Victoria," and "The Hero of Ladysmith." The Governor of Gibraltar replied by drinking to the healths of the Queen-Regent, General Bouza, and the officers of the Spanish Army. Sir George White met with an enthusiastic reception, both on his arrival and departure, salutes being fired from the Spanish fort.

Lieut.-General Sir Alfred Gaselee and the Headquarters Staff of the China Field Force arrived at Hong Kong on Sunday last in the Zibenghla from Calcutta, and have since reached Taku.

Lord Hopetoun, who has been appointed Governor-General of the New Australian Commonwealth, wishes it to be known that, so far as circumstances permit, he has made all his arrangements in regard to his staff.

Major-General the Hon. R. A. J. Talbot, C.B., commanding the British troops in Egypt, left Cairo on Wednesday for England on leave of absence, Major-General R. B. Lane, C.B., commanding the garrison at Alexandria, officiating for him in his absence.

Major-General F. G. Berkeley will be placed on the retired list from to-day on completion of seven years of non-employment.

Major-General F. T. Lloyd, C.B., R.A., will be placed on the supernumerary list on Saturday next on reaching the limit of age.

Brigadier-General G. Henry, R.E., officiates as Quartermaster-General in India, vice Lieut.-General Sir A. Gaselee.

Brigadier-General G. H. C. Dyce, C.B., I.S.C., from the command at Allahabad, goes to Bengal headquarters to act as D.A.G. on the staff of Sir George Luck, vice Brigadier-General E. G. Barrow, proceeded on active service to China.

The name of Colonel C. J. Long, R.A., appears in the July "Army List" among the unemployed officers on the active list. This clearly is an error, as letters from South Africa state that this popular officer had quite recovered from his wounds, and was employed as Commandant of the Rest Camp and Convalescent Depot at Bloemfontein.

Colonel J. Leach, R.A., lately in command of the R.H.A., Secunderabad, is now at Okehampton, where he has taken over the duties of the Artillery Practice Camp for the season. He has with him as his Staff: Chief Staff Officer, Captain R. F. Ruck-Keene, 111th Battery R.F.A., Newcastle-on-Tyne, lately arrived home from South Africa on promotion from T Battery, R.H.A.; Gunnery Instructor, Major E. H. Paterson, R.A., Chief Instructor Horse and Field Artillery branch at the School of Gunnery, Shoeburyness; Recording Officer, Captain J. C. G. A. Hankey, of No. 7 Depot R.F.A., Woolwich; Range Officers, 2nd Lieutenants N. P. R. Preston and D. Reynolds, 92nd Battery, R.F.A.; Medical Officer, Mr. J. A. Mearns.

Colonel F. Abbott, I.S.C., has taken over command of the Nagpore District.

Colonels E. D. F. Bignell, C. H. Des Vœux, and F. S. Gwatkin have taken up command of the Nusseerabad, Rawul Pindi and Fyzabad Districts as Colonels on the Staff.

It is officially announced in Dublin that "the Lord-Lieutenant has been pleased to appoint Colonel Neville F. F. Chamberlain, I.S.C., to be Inspector-General of the Royal Irish Constabulary in the room of Sir Andrew Reed, K.C.B., C.V.O., who has retired."

Deputy-Commissary of Ordnance M. Spencer, A.O.D., has been transferred to a captaincy in the Royal Artillery (District Officer). He recently passed the final examination at the Artillery College, and is now appointed to the Army Ordnance Department.

Lieut.-Colonel H. L. Aylmer, having been placed on half-pay from command of the 16th Lancers, has been employed as a Camp Commandant on the Lines of Communication in South Africa.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. Fletcher, late Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed Clerk of the Cheque and Adjutant of the Corps of Gentlemen at Arms, vice Colonel A. Fife, promoted to the position of Standard Bearer. Colonel Fletcher joined the corps May 16, 1892.

Lieut.-Colonel (Captain) A. H. Lee, R.A., Military Attaché at Washington, has been adopted as Unionist candidate for South Hants, vice Lieut.-General Sir Frederick FitzWygram, Bart., when the latter retires at the dissolution.

Lieut.-Colonel Eustace Balfour has temporarily withdrawn his resignation of the command of the London Scottish Rifles.

Major N. W. H. Du Boulay, R.F.A.; and Captains G. F. S. Napier, 2nd Batn. Oxfordshire Light Infantry; M. E. Willoughby, 2nd Bengal Lancers; E. H. Cole, 11th Bengal Lancers; C. H. Selwyn, 12th Bengal Cavalry; F. Tweddell, 28th Punjab Infantry; F. Rennick, 40th Pathans; and F. M. Edwards, 3rd Bombay Cavalry, have been selected to proceed to China on special service for duty at the Treaty Ports.

Major G. F. Ottley, Oxfordshire Light Infantry, has been appointed Recruiting Staff Officer (Class II.), London, vice Brevet-Major the Hon. C. E. Walsh, late Rifle Brigade, who retires on appointment as Chief Constable of Radnorshire.

Major T. King, late 49th Regiment, writes:—"Many years ago I was a cadet at the R.M.C., Sandhurst, with Lieut.-Colonel C. A. P. Burroughs, now commanding the West African Regiment on the Kumasi Expedition, and I can say that his old friends are very pleased to find him still to the fore. Colonel Burroughs was very unfortunate in getting his promotion slowly in the old 82nd Regiment, and more so as the age clause caught him as a Major. However, it must be a satisfaction to all who know him to see that his luck has turned, although rather late in the day, and we must only hope we may see his genial face safe home when he has finished his campaign. A better fellow it would be difficult to find."

Captain Ryder, a telegram from Rangoon says, who has been travelling in Yunnan with Major Manifold and Captain Davies, telegraphs, under date June 20, from Ta-Chien-Lu, that he and his companions proposed to make their way to Shanghai by way of the Yang-tze-Kiang, they evidently being unaware of the serious situation. Mr. Hobson, in charge of the Chinese Customs at Teng-Yueh, had, however, been requested to telegraph to them the safest route for them to take.

Captain E. H. Cole, 11th Bengal Lancers, has been appointed a D.A.A.G. on the Indian Establishment for five years.

Captain E. C. Thomas is to retain his appointment as Adjutant and Quartermaster of the Duke of York's School, Chelsea, until March, 1892.

INDIA AND CHINA.

General Sir Power Palmer, the officiating Commander-in-Chief in India, has been interviewed by a correspondent of Reuter on the subject of the crisis in China. "The object to be arrived at," says Gen. Palmer, "is to be prepared for any emergency. While affording every possible assistance to protect Imperial interests in China, the needs of India cannot be neglected. A division of 10,000 troops with a horse battery has been already despatched. No orders for more have been issued. No appointments have been made or shipping engaged, though a scheme is always ready, and immediate action is possible on a call from home. Further British troops cannot proceed to China until the Indian contingent in Africa returns, or unless those required for China can be replaced within a reasonable time, preferably by seasoned men from the Cape. In this connection I would mention that the order from home for the first division to mobilise reached Simla at two in the afternoon, and by five o'clock all orders had been issued, and within 24 hours the first regiment had moved, so perfect are local arrangements."

Referring to this fact, Gen. Palmer spoke in the highest terms of Gens. Elles and Gaselee and also of the directors of the Indian Marine at Calcutta and Bombay and of the marine and military officials at the ports. Continuing, Gen. Palmer said that schemes for replacing the native regiments already sent abroad were now being discussed. He stated that 41,000 new rifles were expected from home, and a pressing demand had been sent for another 20,000, as the China regiments had been all supplied, and the rearming of the native army was a pressing need.

Replying to a question as to hospital outfits, with reference to the recent disclosures in South Africa, he said:—"The matter is already in the able hands of Surgeon-Gen. Taylor, whose knowledge of China proved invaluable, and 300 per cent. above the average of hospital comforts and supplies are being sent out with the contingents." Sir A. P. Palmer also remarked that the Viceroy, Major-Gen. Sir E. H. Collen, and himself were in entire accord as to all matters concerning the Indian troops proceeding to China. The acting Commander-in-Chief further stated that more officers for the department of the regiments, supply and transports, also the provision of various war materials from home, were now the main questions engaging his earnest attention.

REWARDS FOR GALLANTRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It was announced in last night's Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to signify her intention of conferring the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers whose claims had been submitted for her Majesty's approval for their conspicuous bravery in South Africa, as stated against their names:—

Capt. Matthew Fontaine Maury Meiklejohn, Gordon Highlanders.—At the Battle of Elands-laagte on Oct. 21, 1899, after the main Boer position had been captured, some men of the Gordon Highlanders, when about to assault a kopje in advance, were exposed to a heavy cross-fire and, having lost their leaders, commenced to waver. Seeing this, Capt. Meiklejohn rushed to the front and called on the Gordons to follow him. By his conspicuous bravery and fearless example, he rallied the men and led them against the enemy's position, where he fell, desperately wounded in four places.

2nd Lieut. John Norwood, 5th Dragoon Guards.—On Oct. 30, 1899, this officer went out from Ladysmith in charge of a small patrol of the 5th Dragoon Guards. They came under a heavy fire from the enemy, who were posted on a ridge in great force. The patrol, which had arrived within about 600 yards of the ridge, then retired at full speed. One man dropped, and 2nd Lieut. Norwood galloped back about 300 yards through heavy fire, dismounted, and, picking up the fallen trooper, carried him out of fire on his back, at the same time leading his horse with one hand. The enemy kept up an incessant fire during the whole time that 2nd Lieut. Norwood was carrying the man until he was quite out of range.

Sergt.-Major (now Quartermaster and Honorary Lieutenant) William Robertson, Gordon Highlanders.—At the battle of Elands-laagte, on Oct. 21, 1899, during the final advance on the enemy's position, this warrant officer led each successive rush, exposing himself fearlessly to the enemy's artillery and rifle fire to encourage the men. After the main position had been captured, he led a small party to seize the Boer camp. Though exposed to a deadly cross-fire from the enemy's rifles, he gallantly held on to the position captured, and continued to encourage the men until he was dangerously wounded in two places.

THE MEDAL FOR DISTINGUISHED CONDUCT IN THE FIELD.

The Gazette also stated that the Queen had been pleased to approve the grant of the Medal for Distinguished Conduct in the Field to the undermentioned soldiers, in recognition of their gallant conduct in South Africa, 1899:—Sergt.-Drumr. George Lawrence, Corpl.-Piper Kenneth McLeod, and Lance-Corpl. Samuel Dryden, Gordon Highlanders; Trpr. A. W. Evans, Natal Mounted Rifles.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, July 14.

Sir Redvers Buller telegraphed from Standerton that the South African Light Horse did some good scouting work on the night of the 11th inst., and prevented the Boers from destroying part of the railway near Vlaklaagte Station; and that Lord Dundonald with a force of Colonials captured, near Vilpoort, a camp belonging to a party of the enemy who blew up the Leeuwspruit Bridge a few days ago.

Gen. Buller also reported that troops were moving up Van Reenan's Pass.

Gen. Hart reported from Heidelberg, and Col. Mackinnon from Heilbron, that Boers continued to come in daily and deliver up their arms.

Sunday, July 15.

After three days' skirmishing, the result of which had been the forcing of the enemy back a considerable distance to the eastward, Gen. Clery returned to-day to Vaal, the next station to Greylingstad. Each day the Boers, to cover their retreat, set the grass alight, and the country over a vast area was laid waste.

The mounted infantry, Thorneycroft's Light Infantry, and Strathcona's Horse, stated by Gen. Clery to have done capital work, and the artillery have made excellent practice. On Friday evening the Boers, when their last position was taken, reformed in the open country, whereupon every branch of our artillery, including "Pom Poms" and Colts, poured in a heavy fire upon them.

Monday, July 16.

There was little news.

A short telegram from Lord Roberts stated that Gen. Baden-Powell had reported that a patrol of Australian Bushmen encountered a party of Boers on the 13th inst. and drove them back with loss, Sergt. Ryan being wounded through the shoulder.

Gen. Hart telegraphed from Heidelberg that the local defences were complete.

Lord Roberts to-day detached a force to drive the Boers from a range of kopjes north and north-west of the town. The Boers, however, evacuated the position without firing a shot.

News came from Lord Roberts's head quarters that operations are progressing satisfactorily. In the Orange River Colony the Mounted Infantry Division—formerly Gen. Ian Hamilton's, now Gen. Hunter's—stated to have marched right across from Heidelberg through Frankfort to Bethlehem, while Col. Hickman's Bushman Corps had ridden through the district from south to north. De Wet is thus being pushed back upon Harrismith.

To-day a new brigade, consisting of the 1st. Batn. King's Own Scottish Borderers, 1st. Batn. Border Regiment, 2nd. Batn. Royal Berkshire Regiment, and 1st. Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, under Col. Cunningham, Derbyshire Regiment, together with Col. Hickman's force of 1,800 mounted infantry, various details, an Elswick battery, and a Canadian battery attached to Cunningham's force, was detached by Lord Roberts to force the Boers back from the kopjes to the north and north-west, which they have been occupying since the 11th inst. Col. Mahon, with the Imperial Horse, co-operated with Gen. French on the enemy's right. The Boers were evidently aware of our intentions and withdrew without even a show of resistance. Gen. French discovered a small party retreating with two guns, and shelled them until they disappeared.

There has been a further reorganisation of the division for the purposes of the advance, and Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton now commands a new division composed of Gen. Smith-Dorrien's brigade and the brigade under Col. Cunningham, which is made up of two battalions each taken from Gens. Hart and Barton, who are left with half-brigades on the lines of communication.

Tuesday, July 17.

Advices from Machadodorp stated that Mr. Kruger refuses to surrender until his supplies are exhausted.

Lord Roberts despatched from Pretoria at 10.45 a telegram in which he gave particulars of a series of operations in the neighbourhood of that city, and also in the east of the Orange River Colony. Last night it seems the enemy attacked the left of Lieut.-Gen. Pole-Carew's position, and posts held by Royal Irish Fusiliers and New Zealand and Canadian Infantry were most gallantly defended against a determined assault. The Boers came up to close range, and in the case of the Royal Irish Fusiliers got to within 50 yards and demanded surrender, the men answering with volleys which sent the enemy flying, leaving their killed and wounded behind them. Major Nunn was in command of the Fusiliers, Capt. Vaughan of the New Zealand Mounted Infantry, and Lieut.-Col. Alderson of the Canadian Mounted Infantry. Gen. Hutton particularly mentions besides these officers Major F. Hill, and Lieuts. H. Knight and A. Hughes, Royal Irish Fusiliers, and Capt. J. Barnes, R.A. The despatch went on to say:—

"The 1st Cavalry Brigade, on the extreme right of the line, temporarily commanded by Lieut.-Col. Clowes, was well handled. The enemy suffered severely. They had 15 killed, 50 wounded, and four were taken prisoners. Our casualties were:—Killed—Lieut. H. Borden and J. Birch, 1st Canadian Mounted Rifles. Wounded—Lieut. C. Battye, Shropshire Light Infantry, slightly; Civil Surgeon J. C. Willes, slightly, who was detained by the Boers; Lieut. J. Findlay, New Zealand Mounted Rifles, severely. Missing—Lieut. J. Cameron and Capt. L. Bourn (? H. L.), New Zealand Contingent (third). Five men killed (one Shropshire Light Infantry and four Royal Irish Fusiliers). Twenty-six wounded and 21 missing. Ian Hamilton's column advanced yesterday to Waterval without opposition, and to-day to Hamanskraal. One Queenslander killed and one wounded."

The Boers unsuccessfully to-day attacked the left of Lieut.-Gen. Pole-Carew's position, where the West Australians were stationed, the British general having left an apparent gap in his defences which was able to be swept by the naval and other guns. The Boers' advance was carefully and suddenly met by such a hot artillery fire that they decamped.

Wednesday, July 18.

Lord Roberts reported during the morning to the War Office that 1,500 men with five guns had managed to break through the cordon formed by Gens. Hunter and Rundle's Divisions between Bethlehem and Ficksburg. They were making for Lindley, but were being closely followed by Paget's and Broadwood's Brigades.

In a later despatch his lordship said:—

"The two young Canadian officers mentioned in my telegram of yesterday were killed while gallantly leading their men in a counter attack on the enemy's flank at a critical juncture of their assault on our position. Lieut. Borden, only son of the Minister of Militia, Canada, had been twice before brought to my notice in despatches for gallant and intrepid conduct. The 1,500 men who broke out of the Bethlehem position were about half way between that place and Lindley yesterday, closely followed by Broadwood's cavalry and Ridley's mounted infantry. Methuen left Krugersdorp this morning with Smith-Dorrien in command of his infantry to clear the country between that place and Rustenburg."

Thursday, July 19.

Lord Roberts telegraphed during the evening, announcing that Lord Methuen occupied Heckpoort during the day "without any opposition to speak of," and that General Ian Hamilton and Col. Mahon continued their march along the country to the north of the Delagoa Bay Railway. Sir A. Hunter, his lordship went on to say, is reconnoitring the position occupied by the Free Staters between Bethlehem and Ficksburg.

Friday, July 20.

The latest arrivals from the front state that the Marico commando is in sore straits, inasmuch as lung sickness and red water (cattle disease) are prevalent, and the commissariat is in a low state.

Gen. Delarey has superseded Commandant Snyman, who has been reduced to the ranks. Measles has broken out in the Elands River camp.

Yesterday brought no news of importance. It is stated to-day that Lord Roberts has informed Gen. Botha, in writing, that he cannot continue to support women and children whose husbands and fathers are fighting against him. One thousand women will, accordingly, leave Pretoria to-morrow (Saturday) for the railhead, a few miles beyond Eerste Fabrieken, where Gen. Botha is requested to send to meet them. No answer had been received from the Commandant-General when the telegram was sent off, but it was hoped that Lord Roberts would insist on this logical and humane precaution, which has been adopted only too tardily.

Christiaan De Wet is hard-pressed to the south of Bethlehem, and Piet De Wet, with Mr. Steyn, is attempting a diversion, but is being hotly pursued. Their supplies are limited, and they can have no choice but to fight or disperse. The next few days should bring important developments.

The subscriptions received at the Mansion House for the South African War sufferers amount to £981,500.

HEADRESS OF HIGHLAND REGIMENTS FOR ACTIVE SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—There are strange rumours in the air as to the headgear to be adopted in the Army, and poor Sandy of the Highland Regiments is likely ere long to need all the aid that his civilian friends can bring to bear on the subject. In a Daily Graphic illustration some Highlanders are depicted in skirmishing order wearing Baden-Powell hats, or wideawakes, as they used to be called. This may do at a pinch, but there is nothing Highland about it, needless to observe. The Indian helmet is the nearest thing to the old Celtic helmet, which was conical and high enough to allow of ample ventilation. The undress cap should be that of the Black Watch, to which a cap cover of khaki could be added very easily. This cap is not unlike a fireman's undress cap as to size or in circumference, or like that of the Basque peasants in the Pyrenees. The side could be turned up and the plume holder and wisp added. I am now speaking of headgear for active service. The flat bonnet for undress should have no ribbons, and should be so made as to be able to be pulled a little over the eyes. This would be a sensible headress and correct. The cap here spoken of would not be far from a sailor's cloth cap in appearance, and these are uniform enough to please the eye of the greatest martinet. This uniformity has been the stumbling block hitherto, but there is no difficulty in making a round bonnet or Prince Charlie bonnet of uniform pattern for the undress headgear of our regiments. The Indian helmet, as before said, is not far from the lines of the old war helmet used in the highlands.

Allow me to draw attention to one point in the Indian, or indeed any helmet. The neck piece or hinder-part ought not to be rigid. It should be built up of yielding, curving plates, so that the soldier when lying prone should not get it tilted as at present obtains. The Irish helmet of 1521 as seen by Albert Durer had those yielding plates, which automatically fold up, or crunch up, and fall down when the figure is upright.

SHELTER-TRENCH EXERCISES.

The military authorities have had brought home to them so forcibly the want of increased attention to shelter-trench exercise that they have, as a first step in the direction of improvement under this head, issued orders on the subject. The following is to be added to Section 204 (4) of Infantry Drill:—

"No shelter trench is to be considered as existent until the troops occupying it have extended for at least half an hour, and have marked out their tasks by pick and shovel."

The following is to be inserted at the end of Sub-section 12 of Section 218:—

"Whenever ground is available, opportunity will be taken for combining trench work with ball practice. Shelter-trench exercise must be frequently practised, and on the conclusion of the task, the men will invariably fire five rounds of ammunition. The description of fire employed must be 'independent,' it being explained to the men that in this case 'volleys' would not be effective. Where the ground admits, ball ammunition will be used, and blank where it does not; in the latter case, the manner in which the men take advantage of cover will be checked by an officer or non-commissioned officer placed several hundred yards in front. The manner in which the men adapt the firing position to the irregularities of the ground will be watched by the company instructor, who will place himself for the purpose in their immediate vicinity whilst firing is going on. The men must also be instructed in firing from behind cover of every description."

The following is to be inserted at the end of paragraph 2, Section 180 (b), of the Musketry Regulations, 1898:—

"In order to accustom the men to adapt the firing position to the irregularities of the ground, and at the same time to avail themselves of cover, shelter trenches should be made on all ranges, and a certain number of rounds fired from them. Similarly, when possible, a certain amount of broken ground should be provided."

CERTIFICATES of Honour of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem in England have been awarded to Herbert Livick (late Sergeant Military Police, now Caretaker, Aldershot), for great courage and presence of mind displayed at Aldershot on June 17, 1899, in rescuing a boy who was thrown under the wheels of a cart into which a runaway military waggon and a pair of horses, without rider or driver, had dashed. Livick at great personal risk succeeded in dragging the boy from a most perilous position; and to Corp. Michael Charles Hickey (Army Reservist, Royal Welsh Fusiliers), for very conspicuous conduct displayed on May 11, 1899, in stopping a pair of runaway horses, the driver being thrown off his box. Corp. Hickey just succeeded in stopping the horses within a few yards of a crowd of persons.

AGENTS WANTED with connections amongst Sportsmen. Terms very remunerative. References required.—Apply by letter, "M," 59, Pine Road, Cricklewood, London, N.W.

THE KUMASI EXPEDITION.

Telegram from Col. J. A. Man Stuart, C.M.G., received at the Colonial Office on Tuesday:—

"Cape Coast, July 17.

"Apparently authentic information just received from Bekwai by messenger to Fumsu that Kumasi gave night signals relieved on July 15."

A Renter's telegram dated Fumsu, July 17, states that Kumasi has been relieved by Col. Willcocks's column.

There have been no further advices up to the time of going to press.

FURLOUGH—RESERVISTS AND MILITIAMEN.

Regulations as to furloughs have been issued for guidance of general officers and others:—

"It being probable that some of the re-enlisted ex-soldiers and Reservists posted to home units have interests in civil life requiring their attention, every endeavour should be made to enable them to keep in touch with their civil employment. Furloughs may, therefore, be granted as under to any of the above-mentioned, provided that their services can be spared and that they can satisfy their commanding officers that reasonable grounds exist for their requiring it:—

"Infantry soldiers re-enlisted for Home Service.—One month after joining an existing unit, or after the completion of the formation of a new unit to which they have been posted, provided that they have completed the musketry course prescribed for them and that they have not made fewer points than are necessary to qualify as a second-class shot.

"Infantry Reservists posted to Home Units.—Instructions regarding these have already been issued, but any who have already been granted furlough may, subject to the above conditions, be permitted to proceed again on furlough after a month's drill, provided that they have completed the prescribed course of musketry and that they have obtained the requisite number of points to qualify as a second-class shot.

"It should be pointed out to all who proceed on furlough that any separation allowance or half of Government wages to which they may be entitled shall cease whilst they are on furlough. Plain clothes may be worn by any of these soldiers on furlough if they are engaged in civil pursuits.

"The following instructions are to be observed regarding the grant of furloughs to re-enlisted soldiers, and ex-Reservists of branches of the service other than Infantry, and to Militia:—

"Re-enlisted Ex-Soldiers.—These may be allowed to proceed on furlough under the conditions laid down in paragraphs 1933 to 1951 Queen's Regulations.

"Ex-Reservists.—These may be permitted to proceed on furlough as soon as their services can be spared.

"Militia.—Militiamen in all units embodied prior to March 6 may be permitted to go on furlough, provided that, in the infantry, they have satisfactorily completed musketry and company and battalion training. Prior to being granted furlough all Militiamen will be formed into parties and sent armed and equipped to the permanent headquarters of their corps, where they will leave their arms and equipment, and, if they desire it, their uniform, before they proceed on furlough.

"It is to be distinctly understood by men of all these categories that they are granted such furloughs as an indulgence and not as a right, and to enable them to keep in touch with their civil occupations, for which purpose they will be allowed to wear plain clothes. They can therefore only be granted furloughs when their services can be spared and when they satisfy their commanding officers that there are reasonable grounds for their wishing to return home. They will be subject to recall, should their services be required, at seven days' notice, and their families will not be entitled to separation allowance while they are on furlough. All who are granted furloughs will first sign a paper stating that they thoroughly understand these conditions.

"It has been decided that a Militia Reservist is to be held to serve for the additional year in accordance with the terms of his engagement with the Militia Reserve. This decision holds in the case of a Militia Reserve man on the expiration of his Militia engagement, even when he elects not to re-engage as a Militiaman."

TO MILITARY MEN AND OTHERS.—PIPECLAY SUPERSED BY PICKERING'S "BLANCO" for Whitening Belts, Helmets, Gloves, &c. "Blanco" removes stains and discolorations, and ensures evenness of colour, and a soft silky surface. Does not dust or soil. Much better, more convenient, and cheaper than pipeclay. No trouble of preparation. "Blanco" is sold everywhere in cup-shaped blocks, in zinc non-corrosive boxes. Manufacturers: JOSEPH PICKERING and SONS, Sheffield.

NEW ARMY UNIFORM.—The Queen on Wednesday inspected a new khaki uniform designed for home and foreign service. Sergt. M'Askill and Pte J. Asquith, 3rd Batn. Scots Guards, arrived at Windsor Castle clothed in the uniform, and having been introduced by Major-Gen. Sir John McNeill to Sir Arthur Bigge, the Queen's Secretary, were directed to proceed to Frogmore, whither her Majesty drove, and from her chair under the umbrella tent inspected the new kit, and was pleased to express her approval. The tunic is of the Norfolk jacket pattern, with side pockets and belt, and shoulder straps bearing the thistle and "S. G." beneath it. The Queen asked Pte. Asquith whether the uniform was comfortable, and he replied that it was, and was very handy, being fit for home or foreign service at any time. Both men were then dismissed, her Majesty giving directions that they should be well cared for before leaving Windsor Castle.

Obituary.

NAVY.

The Earl of Cavan, who died at his seat in Hertfordshire, was, as Lord Kilcourse, a Lieut. in the Navy, and served throughout the siege of Sebastopol. In 1856 he participated in the bombardment of Canton, and two years later was present at the unsuccessful attack on the Peiho ports. He sat for South Somerset as a Radical from 1885 until 1892, and when in 1887 he succeeded to the earldom, he retained his seat in the House of Commons. He is succeeded by Viscount Kilcourse, his eldest son, who is a captain in the Grenadier Guards.

Rear-Admiral Valentine Otway Inglefield was killed while crossing the Marylebone Road, near Baker Street Station, on Monday night. An omnibus was approaching, and in order to avoid it the admiral, who was 76 years old, stepped back between the wheels of another omnibus. He was knocked down, and his leg catching in the wheels, he was carried along some distance before the vehicle could pull up. Insensible, and terribly injured, he was taken to the Middlesex Hospital, where notwithstanding the best medical skill, he died in a few hours. The deceased officer was the son of the late Rear-Admiral Samuel Hood Inglefield, C.B., and was born in 1824. He entered the Navy, and served in the Princess Charlotte at the capture of St. Jean d'Acre in 1840. He took part in the Parana Expedition in 1845, and was made Lieut. in that year. In 1870 he was promoted to the rank of Captain, and became a Rear-Admiral in 1887.

ARMY.

Sir Claude Maxwell MacDonald, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., Major, retired list, late Highland Light Infantry, whose death at Peking the whole civilised world now mourns, came of a military stock, his father having been the late Major-Gen. J. P. MacDonald. He was born in 1852, and, after an education at Uppingham and Sandhurst, entered the 74th Highlanders. With this regiment, in which he then held the rank of Captain, he was sent to Egypt in 1882, to help to suppress the insurrection of Arabi. He was present at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir, and in addition to the honour of being mentioned in despatches, received as a reward for his services a Brevet Majority, as well as the Khedive's star and the medal with a clasp. The campaign against the rebellious Pasha's fellaheen soldiery was concurrent with the rise of the Mahdi as a military power and Major MacDonald, who had been retained in the country on special service, volunteered to accompany the Suakin expedition of 1884. His offer was accepted, and he was attached to the 1st Black Watch, with whom he fought at the engagements of El-Teb and Tamai. In the latter of these affairs he was slightly wounded during the temporary confusion into which the 42nd were thrown by the mad rush of Osman Digna's fanatic followers. It was only a display of the greatest gallantry that kept the fatalities in the regiment as low as 60 upon this desperate occasion. For his share in the fighting Major MacDonald was awarded two clasps to his Egyptian medal, and the decoration of the fourth class of the Osmanieh. Subsequently he remained at the British Agency in Cairo until 1887, when he retired from the Army, and was appointed Acting-Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar. In the following year he became Commissioner on the West Coast of Africa, and in 1889 he was despatched to the Niger territory on a special mission. As a result, he took part in the conferences at Berlin for the purpose of defining the boundary between the Cameroons and the Oil River Protectorate, for the latter of which he subsequently became a Commissioner and Consul-General. In 1891 he received a similar appointment to the Niger Coast Protectorate, and he acted also as Consul to the Spanish island of Fernando Po and to the Cameroons. He was created K.C.M.G. in 1892, and a G.C.M.G. a few weeks ago. The order of K.C.B. was conferred upon him in 1898, two years after his important promotion to be her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking. Sir Claude returned to England in May last for a short holiday, rendered necessary by the state of his health. Lady MacDonald was the daughter of Major W. Cairns Armstrong, and widow of Mr. P. C.

Robertson, of the Indian Political Service. There were two children, both girls.

Gen. John Robert McMullen, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at Upper Norwood on the 17th inst., aged 83. He joined the Army March 1, 1838; became Captain March 1, 1853; Major Feb. 18, 1861; Lieut.-Colonel March 1, 1864; Colonel March 1, 1869; Major-General July 1, 1881; Lieut.-General Sept. 7, 1884; and General Jan. 22, 1889. He served in the Gwalior Campaign, and was present at the battle of Punmar, Dec. 29, 1843 (bronze star); in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-9, including the action of Sorojikhond, siege and surrender of Mooltan and battle of Goojerat (medal with two clasps). Also served in the Indian Mutiny, 1857-9, present at the capture of Calpee, and in the operations in the Gorruckpore district (medal with clasp).

Lieut.-Col. Malcolm Thomas Lyde, Indian Staff Corps, Administrator of the Madhapur State, died last week of cholera. Born Sept. 18, 1852, he joined the Army as Sub-Lieut. 57th Regiment Jan. 21, 1874; became Captain Middlesex Regiment April 29, 1882; was appointed to the Staff Corps April 30, 1882; became Major Jan. 21, 1894; and Lieut.-Colonel Jan. 21, 1900. He served in the Zulu War, 1879 (medal with clasp), and in the Afghan War, 1880 (medal).

Surg.-Lieut.-Col. William Wellington Lake, Militia Medical Staff Corps (Volunteer Company R.A.M.C.), died at Bloemfontein of Bright's disease on the 13th inst. He was well known and highly respected in West Surrey, where he resided at Topcroft, Guildford. He was educated at St. Thomas's Hospital, and was admitted a licentiate of the Royal College of Apothecaries in 1876, and a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, in 1877. He had been Surgeon-Major of the Militia Medical Staff Corps since July 24, 1898, and having volunteered for service in South Africa, went out with the Volunteer Company R.A.M.C., and was gazetted Lieut.-Colonel on Feb. 14 last. He was formerly obstetric house physician at St. Thomas's Hospital, house physician at the City of London Hospital for Diseases of the Chest, and he had seen active service in the field as Surgeon in the Ottoman Army, having the Medal and the 4th class of the Medjidie for his services during the Russo-Turkish War of 1877-78. The deceased, though he did not practise, held many public appointments. He was medical officer of health for the Guildford and Woking districts of West Surrey, medical officer of the Guildford, Godalming, and Woking Joint Board Isolation Hospital, and deputy coroner for West Surrey and the borough of Guildford. He was the author of many valuable papers on professional subjects.

Major William George Wyld, Hampshire Regiment, died on the 16th inst. in Longridge Road, S.W. Born Dec. 3, 1859, and educated at Dulwich College, he entered the 37th Foot from the Militia Oct. 23, 1880. Receiving his Lieutenancy in July, 1881, he was Adjutant of the regiment 1886-89, and from 1887 to 1889 served in the Burmese Expedition (medal with clasp). He was promoted Captain April 15, 1889, and Major Nov. 17, 1897. Five months later he was appointed to the staff at Chester as Inspector of Musketry for the North-Western District, and since April last had been serving temporarily as D.A.A.G. Major Wyld was well known as an all-round cricketer of great ability. For several seasons he was a member of the Surrey Eleven.

Major James John Burke Menzies, Major retired list, late Gordon Highlanders, has just died in hospital at Malta at the age of 50. He joined the 23rd Fusiliers as an Ensign April 17, 1869, being transferred to the 75th Foot (now the Gordon Highlanders) in 1871, was promoted Lieut. Oct. 28, 1871; became Captain March 30, 1881; and Major May 21, 1884. He took part in the Egyptian War of 1882, including the battle of Tel-el-Kebir (medal with clasp and the Khedive's star). He served in the Sudan Expedition of 1884, and was present at El Teb and Tamai (mentioned in despatches, two clasps, and the brevet of Major). In the Nile Expedition of 1884-85 he served with the River Column under Major-Gen. Earle (clasp). He retired in 1892.

Major H. L. Borden, Canadian King's County Hussars, was killed in the fighting near Pretoria on the 16th inst. He was the son of the Hon. F. W. Borden, the Minister of Militia, and touching references to his death were made on Tuesday in the Dominion House of Commons by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. N. F. Davin, who is leading the Conservative Opposition in Sir Charles Tupper's absence. Major Borden was born near Halifax, where he was very popular. He entered the Militia in 1893, and in 1897 was appointed Lieut. on proceeding to England with the Canadian Contingent for the Queen's Jubilee. When the war broke out in South Africa he at once volunteered for service, and accepted a commission as Lieut. in the 1st Batn. Canadian Mounted Rifles, with which gallant corps he was doing duty when he received his death wound.

Capt. James Beaumont Standley Alderson, 1st Batn. Royal Irish Regt., died of wounds received in action at Bethlehem, South Africa, on or about the 8th inst. Born July 1, 1869, the youngest son of Mr. E. S. Alderson, 55A, Palace Gardens Terrace, W., he joined the Royal Irish Regiment as 2nd Lieut. from the Militia, June 28, 1890; became Lieut. Aug. 26, 1891; and Captain, April 1, 1899. He served in the operations on the North-West Frontier of India, 1897-98 (medal with clasp).

Capt. David Reginald Younger, 1st Batn. Gordon Highlanders, was killed in action to the west of Hekepoort, South Africa, on the 11th inst. He was eldest son of the late Mr. David Younger, and a first cousin of Mr. William Younger, M.P., of Auchin Castle, Dumfries. Born March 17, 1871, he joined the Gordon Highlanders from the Militia, Dec. 23, 1893; became Lieut. Nov. 18, 1896; and Captain Dec. 14, 1899. He served with the Chitral relief force, under Sir Robert Low, in 1895, including the storming of the Malakand Pass (medal with clasp), and also in the North-West Frontier campaign, 1897-98, with the Tirah expeditionary force, under Sir William Lockhart, taking part in the operations in the Maidan and Bara Valleys (two clasps).

Lieut. Thomas Conolly, 2nd Dragoons, (Royal Scots Greys), was killed in the affair at Nital's Nek, near Pretoria, on the 11th inst. Born Sept. 1, 1870, he joined the Greys from the Militia June 28, 1893, and became Lieut. Dec. 5, 1894. He served with the Egyptian Army from Dec. 15, 1898, until the end of last year, when he rejoined his regiment in South Africa. He served in the Nile Expedition, 1898, including the battle of Khartoum (medal and Egyptian medal with clasp).

Lieut. Gordon Fairfax Prichard, 2nd Batn. Lincolnshire Regiment, was killed in action at Nital's Nek, near Pretoria, on the 11th inst. Born Nov. 17, 1872, he joined the Lincolnshire Regiment as 2nd Lieut. March 7, 1894, and became Lieut. Feb. 17, 1896.

Lieut. Frederick Alexander Galbraith, 2nd Batn. Middlesex Regiment, is now reported to have been killed in action at Spion Kop on Jan. 24. Born July 22, 1871, he joined the Middlesex Regiment from the Militia Dec. 23, 1893, and became Lieut. May 4, 1898.

2nd Lieut. Keith Kinnaird Mackellar, 7th Dragoon Guards, was killed in the attack on the British outpost at Derdepoort on the 11th inst. He was only appointed to the regiment on May 26 from Lieut., New South Wales Local Forces.

2nd Lieut. Thomas Douglas Pilkington, 1st (Royal) Dragoons, was killed in action at Nital's Nek, South Africa, on the 11th inst. Born June 19, 1876, he joined the Royal Dragoons from the Militia, June 9, 1897.

2nd Lieut. Edwin Carsley, unattached list, Indian Staff Corps, doing duty with 1st Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry, has died in India of cholera. He only received his commission in January last from the Royal Military College.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

Household Cavalry.—It is in contemplation to arm the front ranks of squadrons of the three regiments with lances, and the views of commanding officers upon the subject have been called for.

1st King's Dragoon Guards.—The officers doing duty with the service squadrons at Aldershot are Lieut.-Col. Owen. Major Fergusson, Capt. Eastwood, Langton, Williams, Searight (acting adjutant), and the Hon. C. G. Gore-Langton, Lieuts. Rasbotham, Gray, and Denny, 2nd Lieuts. Turner and Wood; 12 out of the 29 whose names are given in the "Army List." All the others are in South Africa or elsewhere.

3rd Dragoon Guards.—Capt. Kent has taken up duty at Belfast as temporary A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Leech, V.C., C.B., commanding the district.

4th Dragoon Guards.—Major the Hon. R. Leigh has resigned his appointment as Military Secretary to the Governor of Bombay.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers).—Lieut. Collis has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

7th Dragoon Guards.—Major Mackeson (Reserve) and Lieut. Dunne, having been invalided, left Cape Town in the Aurania on the 7th inst. for England.

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Lieut. Lord C. Fitzmaurice has been invalided from South Africa, and left Cape Town on the 13th inst. in the Greek.

2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys).—Capt. Collins has been invalided from South Africa, and left on the 7th inst. in the Aurania.

4th Hussars.—The regiment has been specially commanded by the Commander-in-Chief in India for its signalling last year, when it headed the cavalry returns.

7th Hussars.—The officers doing duty with headquarters at Aldershot are Lieut.-Col. the Hon. R. T. Lawley; Capt. Sir K. A. Fraser, Dalgety, Johnstone, Fryer, and Rawstone; Lieuts. Leyland and Lord Cole; 2nd Lieuts. Cartwright, Haig, Royds, Pollok, Gibbs, Mann-Thompson, Robarts, and Gooch. This gives 16 out of the 39 as shown in the July "Army List."

10th Hussars.—Lieut.-Col. Lord Airlie, who was killed at the head of the 12th Lancers in the fighting before Pretoria last month, has bequeathed to the officer commanding the sum of £1,000 to be employed by him as he may think best for the benefit of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the regiment, for sporting or other purposes, and to be allocated in the following proportions: officers £400, non-commissioned officers and men £600, in remembrance of his long and happy connection with the regiment. Lieut. Wilson, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

12th Lancers.—2nd Lieut. Milvain sailed from Cape Town in the Aurania on the 7th inst. for England, invalided.

13th Hussars.—Col. Blagrove has received an extension of command.

14th Hussars.—2nd Lieut. Prescott-Westcar, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

15th Hussars.—Capt. Tagart has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The further results of competitive gun practice carried out by the R.G.A. and local companies, R.A., are made known. The badges won by the companies may accordingly be taken into wear. Gibraltar:—No. 26 Co., Southern Division, figure of merit, 493; No. 11 Co., Eastern Division, 426; No. 19 Co., Eastern Division, 349; No. 18 Co., Eastern Division, 230; No. 20 Co., Eastern Division, 213. Barbados:—No. 1 Co., Western Division, 490; St. Lucia Co., 260 50. Straits Settlements:—No. 1 Co., Hong Kong—Singapore Batn., 407.2.

The 45th, 48th, and 52nd Batteries R.F.A. in India have been warned for service in China.

The 92nd Battery R.F.A., under command of Major H. A. Bethell, has joined at Okehampton as depot battery during the summer practice camp.

The Yorkshire Artillery Militia, consisting of 18 officers and 500 men, under command of Col. Ledgard, encamped at Scarborough, have volunteered for service in China.

The Norfolk Artillery Militia, under command of Col. Lord Coke, which has been stationed at Sheerness Garrison since May 7, returned to Great Yarmouth on Tuesday.

Whilst a number of men of the City of Cork Artillery Militia were practising on Monday morning with a 40-pr. gun at Fort Camden, Queenstown Harbour, the weapon burst. One man was killed on the spot and another died shortly afterwards, and other men were injured.

A revised edition of Chapter VII. of Field Artillery Drill, 1896, has been approved, and copies are being issued to all concerned.

Lieut.-Col. Holland, R.H.A., Majors Foster Wray, and Johnstone, Capt. England and Peel, Lieuts. McDonald and Logan, and 2nd Lieut. Harvey-Price have been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Major G. J. F. Talbot, R.G.A., is on passage home from the Cape in charge of invalids in the Greek.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

A set of "saddlery, officers, Royal Artillery," will in future be issued for each officer posted to the field companies and balloon units of the Royal Engineers. The Equipment Regulations, Part II., Section X., Table 10, are ordered to be amended accordingly.

A Field Service Manual, Pontoon Troop, Royal Engineers (provisional edition), has been approved.

Additions are ordered to be made to the war establishment of a balloon section—viz.: 4 drivers, 8 draught horses, 2 waggons, reservoir, gas.

The following additions to the war establishment of a field park have been approved:—6 drivers, 12 draught horses, 3 waggons, reservoir, gas.

Lieut. F. M. Browne has been wounded at Tien-tsin by a shell bursting in the mess-house; he is said to be in no danger.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Kinloch, 1st Batn., dined with the Queen and royal family at Windsor Castle on the 13th inst., on return from active service in South Africa. Capt. Lord Kilcourse, 2nd Batn., has succeeded to the Earldom of Cavan by the death of his father, the ninth Earl. Lieut. Morrison, just returned from special service in South Africa, was on Tuesday nominated as the Unionist candidate for the representation of the Wilton Division of Wilts, vice Major Lord Folkestone, 1st V.B. Wiltshire Regiment, succeeded to the peerage.

Coldstream Guards.—Orders have been issued for the establishment of the new 3rd Batn. to be increased from seven to eight companies.

Royal Scots (1st).—The 1st Batn. has been specially commended by the Commander-in-Chief in India for its excellent signalling return for last year. Brevet-Major (Lieut.-Col.) Carter, C.M.G., invalided from the Gold Coast, arrived in England on Thursday.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—Capt. Feilden, 3rd (Militia) Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and is on passage in the Aurania, which sailed on the 7th inst.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Major Wilkinson threw up his staff appointment in India in order to become second in command of the new 4th Batn. at Dover.

King's Regiment (8th).—The 6th (Militia) Batn. moved on the 12th inst. from Kilworth to Fermoy and took over quarters.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Capt. Baillie, 3rd (Militia) Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 7th inst. in the Aurania, invalided. Twenty-four non-commissioned officers and men of the 1st Batn. have left India for China, having been selected for service as signallers.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—A telegram to the Lincolnshire Chronicle states that in the Nitra's Nek disaster, Major Herapath, Capt. Howley, and Lieut. Rennie were wounded, but are doing well. Col. Roberts, slightly wounded in the arm, and Lieut. and Adj. Lyall (unwounded) were taken prisoners. The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Pretoria states that most of the Lincolns captured have escaped. Wounded officers, with their kits, are being sent in by the Boers, but the enemy have declined, as a rule, the services of our surgeons for their wounded. They admit having sustained considerable losses. The Scots Greys who had been taken prisoners are also escaping.

"The most heroic thing in the Lincolns' fight was the conduct of Sergt. Rawson, who worked the Maxim which was supporting the D and F Companies. The enemy concentrating a venomous fire upon the Maxim, he ordered the others to retire, and remained alone serving the gun. The Maxim actually jammed under fire. He then dissected it. Recoupling the parts, he resumed firing the gun, which was saved from capture by volunteers of the D Company, who dragged it out. The weapon is pitted with bullet marks. It was notorious that the enemy were gathering, but the hills upon neither side of the nek were occupied by our men, except by a body of eight signallers on the west. Col. Roberts, placed three companies, A, B, and G, in front of the Scots Greys and the two guns of the gallant O Battery R.H.A.; D and F Companies one mile behind, and three companies were camped on the low ground of the nek. The men behaved most gallantly, fighting until outnumbered and surrounded. Small parties were driven up the west hill, but never yielded. Though the Boers called out to them in insulting terms, demanding 'Where's your British pluck?' they lay low, and the enemy never dared to advance or charge. Finally they clambered down the rocks in the dark. The Boers captured five of the Lincolns' waggons, and were apparently sorely in need of the supplies contained therein."

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Capt. Goodwyn, 2nd Batn., left England on Wednesday in command of drafts proceeding in the Custodian to South Africa.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—The 1st Batn. has been specially commended by the Commander-in-Chief in India for its excellent signalling return for last year. Lieut. Tennant, 4th (Militia) Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

East Yorkshire Regiment (15th).—The order for the removal of the 1st Batn. from India to Ceylon, to act as a guard to the Boer prisoners, will not now be carried out. Major Richardson has been transferred from the 1st Batn. in India to the 2nd Batn. in South Africa on promotion.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—The 1st Batn. has been specially commended by the Commander-in-Chief in India for its excellent signalling return last year, which was the best of all corps in the command. Capt. Stares, on vacating the adjutancy of the 2nd Punjab Volunteer Rifles, has been posted to the 1st Batn., and has been granted leave out of India for six months on medical certificate. Lieut. Wilmer, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst. 2nd Lieuts. Peel and Sladen, 4th (Militia) Batn., are also on passage in the Aurania, invalided.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Major Orr is transferred from the 2nd Batn. in India, to the 1st Batn., in South Africa, on promotion. 2nd Lieut. Holland, 1st Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and left in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—2nd Lieut. Arbuthnot, 3rd (Militia) Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed on the 7th inst. in the Aurania.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—Major Charles, 1st Batn., has been appointed second in command of the 4th Batn. at Chatham, Major Page being posted to the 1st Batn. in his place. Capt. Challenor is posted to the 1st Batn., in Crete, on promotion from the Connaught Rangers, and Capt. De Gex from the East Lancashire Regiment. Capt. Sykes, on promotion from the York and Lancaster Regiment, is posted to the 2nd Batn., in South Africa. Capt. Middleton and Seckham, on promotion from the York and Lancaster Regiment and North Staffordshire Regiment respectively, join the 3rd Batn. at Malta; and Capt. Manley, on promotion from the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, is appointed to the 4th Batn., at Chatham. Capt. Wolley-Dod, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst. 2nd Lieut. Johnson, 3rd Batn., who received his commission last month from Colour-Sergeant, 1st Batn., Duke of Wellington's Regiment, is on passage home from the Cape in the Aurania, which sailed on the 7th inst.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—Capt. Shawe-Taylor, 2nd Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

Scottish Rifles (26th) is in readiness to leave India for China, to join the field force if required.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—Capt. Peake and Green, on promotion from the Royal Berkshire and Essex Regiments respectively, have been posted to the 1st Batn. in South Africa. Capt. Monro, on promotion from the Devonshire Regiment, is posted to the 2nd Batn., also in South Africa. Capt. Kennedy, on promotion from the Somersetshire Light Infantry, is posted to the 3rd Batn. at Aldershot, and Capt. Fulton, on promotion from the Yorkshire Regiment, to the 4th Batn. at Aldershot.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (33rd).—Capt. (Major) Bruce, second in command of the Chinese Regiment, has been dangerously wounded at Tien-tsin while endeavouring to locate the enemy's guns near French settlement. He is, however, reported to be doing well.

Black Watch (42nd) is in readiness to leave India for China to join the field force if required. The regiment has been specially commended by the Commander-in-Chief in India for its excellent signalling return for last year.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—Lieut.-Col. Pearse, 4th (Militia) Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (46th).—Lieut. Woodham has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd) is in readiness to leave India for China to join the field force if required.

Northamptonshire Regiment (58th).—Lieut. Mowatt, invalided from the front, left Cape Town in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—The 2nd Batn. will proceed from the Cape to Ceylon to act as a guard to the Boer prisoners. The 4th Batn. returned to Cork on the 11th inst. from Kilworth. The 5th (Militia) Batn. proceeded on the 13th inst. from Kilworth to Buttevant. Major Prendergast, 1st Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

Gloucestershire Regiment (61st).—Lieut. Wilkinson has been invalided from South Africa and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

North Staffordshire Regiment (64th).—Capt. Scott left Cape Town on the 7th inst. for England in the Aurania, invalided. He has been serving with the 2nd Batn. (98th). Lieut. Wilkinson, 4th (Militia) Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

Hampshire Regiment (67th).—Lieut. Faith, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Capt. Trotter, 3rd (Militia) Batn., has been invalided from the Cape and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Black Watch (73rd).—2nd Lieut. Baillie-Hamilton, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Greek on the 13th inst.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—The 3rd (Militia) Batn. arrived at Aldershot on the 13th inst. from Edinburgh and is encamped at Scroggs Bottom.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (89th).—Col. Reeves has been granted an extension until Dec. 31.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (91st).—Capt. Kirk left England on Wednesday for the Cape in the Custodian, to join headquarters. Capt. Malcolm, who has been employed on special service, has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed from Cape Town on the 7th inst. in the Aurania.

Connaught Rangers (94th).—Lieut. Alexander is about to be appointed to the Egyptian Army.

Manchester Regiment (96th).—Capt. Noble is posted to this battalion in South Africa, on promotion from the Yorkshire Regiment.

Royal West Kent Regiment (97th).—Lieut. Nunn has been invalided from South Africa and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

Leinster Regiment, Royal Canadians (100th).—Lieut. Waddell has been invalided from South Africa and sailed in the Aurania on the 7th inst.

King's Own Light Infantry (105th).—A picket of 25 men were surprised at Lindley on July 4 by a large force of Boers, nearly all wearing helmets and khaki. The picket refused to surrender, and fought with Yorkshire doggedness, losing 18 killed and wounded. The remaining seven, however, held the enemy at bay until they were relieved by the 38th Field Battery, which, coming on to the scene, opened fire, and saved the position. The services of this little band of heroes ought not to pass unnoticed.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th) is in readiness to leave India for China to join the field force.

Leinster Regiment, Royal Canadians (109th).—Major St. Leger, second in command, has been selected for the command, which will shortly become vacant, when Col. Glancy's extended term expires.

Royal Scottish Reserve Regiment.—The 2nd Batn. moved on the 13th inst. from Glencorse to Edinburgh.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Mr. Wyndham explained in the House of Commons the other night that there are ninety-eight retired Army medical officers liable to recall; of these eighteen are holding permanent appointments reserved for officers on retired pay. The services of twenty-five others who volunteered to return to the service have been accepted and they have been employed at home and abroad. None have been recalled by compulsion. Four officers are employed in South Africa and on hospital ships. The present state of the Royal Army Medical Corps with regard to the undue proportion of the field officers presses hard on the Indian Government, who are compelled to employ a very large proportion of lieutenant-colonels and majors. At present only about a third of the Royal Army Medical Corps officers in India are under field rank. Representations on the subject have passed between the War and India Offices, and it is understood that, so far as possible, the 1900-1901 outward reliefs will be carried out by junior officers direct from South Africa. Lieut.-Col. Kenny and Majors Tuke, Blenkinsop, and Hathaway left Cape Town on the 7th inst. in charge of invalids on the Aurania.

Central Africa Regiment.—Three companies of the 1st Batn. were to have arrived at Cape Coast Castle yesterday in the Victorian for service. Half the 2nd Batn. embarked at Berbera on Wednesday in the Dwarka for Accra, where they are due Aug. 10.

Army Ordnance Corps.—No. 13 Company is being formed at Aldershot, having been taken on to the establishment of the Army from the 1st inst.

SPORT IN EAST AFRICA.—For full information apply to BOUSTEAD, RIDLEY & CO., BANKERS and SHIPPING AGENTS, MOMBASA, and 51, CAVEN STREET, LONDON, W.C. Caravans equipped for Uganda, and all places in the interior. Provisions, &c., provided.

Reviews.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

The deluge of war literature is now evidently coming to an end, but the history of the campaign has probably yet to be written. We may expect perhaps to find it in the series of volumes which Messrs. Sampson Low are about to issue under the auspices of the Times. Meanwhile, a number of books which we would hesitate to class as altogether ephemeral are upon our table. The Bishop of Natal has written an interesting account of what he saw under the title of My Diocese During the War (George Bell and Sons.) The volume consists of extracts from the bishop's diaries selected by his sister, and they embody a great deal of shrewd observation and some excellent description, and have this advantage—that they were written for personal perusal and without any straining after effect. The bishop does not seem to have been at all prepared for what happened, and was, indeed, greatly at fault on many points, even to the extent of expecting that we should occupy Laing's Nek and hold it, whereas to military observers it was quite clear that that position could be turned and cut off. In this lack of prevision the bishop was not alone, and indeed one of the most curious features of the South African war has been the inability of many on the spot to see even a week into the future. The bishop was with the troops in most of the operations outside Ladysmith, and his volume leaves the reader under the impression that our victories were dearly bought. He is impressed with the fact that there was a want of proportion and dignity in the way in which the Empire in general, and London in particular, stood on its head with frenzied exultation when it was seen that the Boer farmers were unable to overwhelm our garrisons. It is very interesting to have a book specially from the clerical standpoint.

Mafeking, a Diary of the Siege, by Major F. D. Baillie (Archibald Constable and Co.), is a volume of great interest, because it embodies a complete history of the siege. Inasmuch, however, as it consists of letters reprinted from the Morning Post, it is perhaps unnecessary for us to speak of it at any length. We are, therefore, content to describe it as a bright, vigorous, and instructive account of many things which came under the author's observation, and as a fine record of the endurance and resource of the garrison.

The Siege of Ladysmith, by R. J. McHugh (Chapman and Hall), is another book of the same class, for Mr. McHugh was the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. The most instructive part of the book is in its description of the organisation of the defence and of the means which were taken to supply the garrison with necessities. The author says that Col. Ward and Lieut.-Col. Stoneman did all that men could to make the stock of provisions last out, while Lieut. Doherty worked wonders in arranging details. This is the praise that has often been bestowed upon these officers, and it is well deserved. We are surprised to find Mr. McHugh asserting that the hospital methods and arrangements were the least efficiently conducted in connection with the garrison, and that in the month of November and the early weeks of December "waste—scandalous waste, or worse—was allowed to proceed unchecked, and immense quantities of medical comforts—such as tinned milk, brandy, arrowroot, extract of beef, essence of mutton, prepared soups, and beef tea, and similar stores—disappeared in a manner that was perfectly astonishing." Inquiry was instituted, and a better system was devised, but much mischief had been done. Mr. McHugh writes well and in an entertaining fashion.

We have before us two books which are published in aid of Lady Lansdowne's War Fund, and we heartily wish them the success they deserve. The first of them is With Methuen's Column on an Ambulance Train, by Ernest N. Bennett (Sonnenschein), which gives an excellent account of the work on the lines of communication with the sick and wounded. The author's share of profits goes to the Fund. The other book is a quaint publication, entitled Fare and Physic of a Past Century, and is compiled by Alice M. Stewart and Ella R. Christie (Edinburgh, David Douglas). It contains a collection of kitchen receipts from the cookery of a century ago, when our ancestors certainly knew how to prepare many good things, and deserves to succeed, for evidently great pains have been bestowed upon it, and the object is admirable.

The Kings of the East, a Romance of the Near Future, by Sydney C. Grier (Blackwood and Sons), is a second edition of a novel that has proved a success.

The Book of Golf and Golfers, by Horace G. Hutchinson (Longmans and Co.), is a "new impression" of a volume that is emphatically the book of golf, well named. It leaped to success at a bound and has retained it. There is no other such book about golf in existence.

Talks with Old English Cricketers, by A. W. Pullin ("Old Ebor") (Blackwood and Sons), is a distinct addition to cricket literature. The author, a well-known writer on the subject, knows and has talked with a great many old cricketers, and he has given an abundance of anecdotes illustrative of the history of the game. These personalia are very attractive. The book begins with Mr. Herbert Jenner-Fust, who is the oldest living cricketer, and such names as Jackson, Daft, Emmet, Lockwood, and Peat head its chapters. All cricketers will welcome the book.

Capt. S. C. F. Jackson's Juunt in Japan; or Ninety Days' Leave in the Far East (Thacker, Calcutta), is a pleasant narrative of travel; Silvertown and its Neighbourhood, including East and West Ham, by Archer P. Crouch (Thomas Burleigh), is a retrospect of the history of those places, with much concerning the nautical affairs of the Thames estuary and its neighbourhood, and is very interesting; and A Surgical Operating Table for the Horse, by J. A. W. Dollar, M.R.C.V.S. (David Douglas, Edinburgh), gives a full description of a new apparatus.

Prof. Ira N. Hollis, of Harvard University, formerly of the United States Navy, is to publish through Houghton, Mifflin and Co., this autumn an important volume on the development of the United States Navy up to the time sail power was replaced by steam. Professor Hollis has been an instructor at the United States Naval Academy and has served actively on nearly every important station in the naval service of the United States. His forthcoming work will be known as The Constitution, and the Navy Under Sail, and will serve as a companion volume to Lieut. Bennett's The Monitor, and the Navy Under Steam.

OUR NAVAL STRENGTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In view of the gigantic naval preparations of foreign Powers, and in view of the non-expenditure in recent years of shipbuilding votes declared by the First Lord of the Admiralty to be "the very lowest which can be justified by the expenditure on shipbuilding of other Powers, the lowest by which we can assure the objects which the people expect of the Navy," national safety to wit, the executive committee of the Navy League will be grateful if you will publish the following memorandum drawn up by Capt. Eardley Wilmot, R.N.

Is our Fleet strong enough to meet and beat a maritime coalition of any two other Powers, which all are agreed should be the standard of strength for this country? No. Competent authorities have declared we require more battleships and cruisers, as well as destroyers. Assuming that the Government will put forward an adequate naval programme at the beginning of next year, what can be done in the interval towards making good the deficiency?

Battleships.—We have 14 building and 2 ordered, but not begun; total 16. In view of more pressing requirements, we may wait until next year before laying down more.

Cruisers.—A considerable addition to these is one of our principal requirements at present. Our need in this class is not measured by the number a possible enemy may possess, but by duties and area to guard. In this connection there is no possible comparison with any other nation. We ought at the outbreak of war to be able to command the services of at least 200 fast cruisers. We have only 120 built and 21 building. Seven are to be laid down this year. Should be increased by 20.

Destroyers.—This class is not only the antidote to foreign torpedo-boat flotillas, but can be used as a torpedo craft itself against enemy's squadrons. The type is continually developing and becoming more sea-keeping. At the same time, frequent relief is necessary for resting and repairing, so that a large margin in numbers is essential. Service in Mediterranean, other stations and home waters would speedily absorb 150 of these craft. We have 108 completed and completing, but not one provided in current naval estimates. Government should be urged to call at once for tenders for 20 destroyers.

Chairman of Executive Committee.

GENERAL SIR GEORGE WHITE, V.C., writes:—"I have read 'Social Life in the British Army' with great interest, and consider it a fair representation."

Social Life in the British Army.

By a BRITISH OFFICER (Military Correspondent of the Westminster Gazette). With 16 Full-page Illustrations on art paper by R. CATON WOODVILLE. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s.

Fall Mall Gazette.—"A most interesting and instructive volume. It was just what was wanted, now that the question of the cost of life in the Army and the impossibility for an officer of living upon his pay has been brought into such prominence."

Illustrated London News.—"At a time when all matters military bulk so large in the public eye, 'Social Life in the British Army' should receive the welcome its accuracy deserves. The author of this book writes of the fulness of knowledge."

Army & Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1900.

CANADA AND THE IMPERIAL NAVY.

IN a very capable series of articles on Imperial Defence which Captain W. Wood is contributing to the Canadian Military Gazette, the writer has recently been dealing with the "Command of the Sea," treating this important subject in a popular style which should interest a wide circle of readers. It will not be necessary for us to examine in detail Captain Wood's exposition of the main principles underlying not only our own naval policy, but the policy of every maritime nation that has achieved command of the sea, whether in wide or narrow limits. These general principles, like those of strategy, are virtually constant, being unchanged by the development of ships, guns, and the various inventions which sometimes appear to modify naval policy, but which, in fact, can but alter tactics. This great truth, familiar to students of naval history, is none too clearly recognised, if recognised at all, by that bull-headed person, the man in the street, for whose benefit Captain Wood seems to be writing. Hence, his clear exposition of general principles is much to be commended. The writer traces in a few paragraphs the causes which produced our naval supremacy during the Napoleonic wars. Here we need not follow him, but his comparison between maritime commerce and that of the desert is worth quoting:—

"The sea itself is a desert; its trade routes are the trails across it; and the harbours are oases. Now, if the stronger of two desert powers commands every large oasis and every principal trail, the caravans of the weaker power must take to the desert and ultimately perish. . . . Search naval history, and you will see how these evils are brought home to every country whose seaboard is commanded by the enemy."

Captain Wood devotes his attention to the various substitutes for naval strength that are continually being advocated by all who have failed to grasp the main principles of maritime power. He exposes the ever-recurring craze for fixed defences, summing up very happily thus:—

"If an enemy can command the sea he must win in the end. If he gets the British Lion into the pit, he will not be such a fool as to jump in himself in order to have a second life and death struggle. All he will have to do is to keep guard while the Lion starves to death inside."

The belief in public granaries, upon which the writer touches, is not, perhaps, general. The rise in the price of bread has, as usual, directed some attention to our increasing import of food-stuffs, and a few days since the Daily Express printed a clever and novel cartoon, representing multitudinous loaves converging upon the kingdom from all parts of the world, each in tow of a steamer. Accepting our contemporary's figures, the latest bread statistics are sufficiently striking. Our national consumption of wheat is about 260 millions of bushels. Of this amount America contributes 118 millions, Russia 40 millions, India four millions, whilst the balance of 43 millions of bushels is imported from all parts of the world. That the price of bread is thus very liable to fluctuate, even in time of peace, is the moral drawn by the Daily Express; but against this no practical remedy has yet been suggested. Mr. Balfour may be said to have killed the State granaries scheme when he caustically labelled those havens "a paradise for rats."

Other fallacies touched upon by Captain Wood are the employment of civilian seamen in the Royal Navy; the employment of Naval Volunteers; separate Colonial navies; the remedy of Colonial independence on the outbreak of war; the demand that our naval architects should copy foreign models; the futile objection to the cost of efficient warships. All these false theories are briefly examined and rightly condemned, but perhaps the most individual section of Captain Wood's article is that dealing with Canada's contribution to the naval power of the Empire, and his view of her responsibility in this matter. Broadly speaking, Canada possesses about 4 per cent. of the whole sea-borne wealth of the Empire, or less than half as much as Australasia; but Canada, says the writer, cannot pay 4 per cent. of the cost of the Imperial Navy. Neither can she pay her share as represented by population, nor her share reckoned by comparative revenue. On any one of such bases the tax would be crushing heavy, but Captain Wood, who is writing, be it remembered, for a Canadian public, urges that the Colony can and should assist more largely in naval defence by contributing seamen to the Fleet and reserve men to the Naval Reserve. After touching upon the large maritime population of Canada, estimated at one-fifth of the total population, the writer suggests that the Colony should be well able to supply the Imperial Navy with 2,000 trained seamen and 10,000 trained reserve men. In this direction, no doubt, the Canadians would be willing to display their patriotism to the extent advocated by Captain Wood; but there are certain difficulties in the way of establishing large reserves of Colonial seamen, which have been more than once explained by Mr. Goschen. For ourselves, we do not regard these difficulties as insurmountable, though they involve, directly and indirectly, some increase of money contribution from the Colonies toward the cost of training and pensioning seamen. On the whole Captain Wood's article deals very soundly with the main principles of naval defence, and with the responsibilities of Canada as an important section of the Empire, tremendously dependent upon our naval power.

NAVAL STEAM GENERATORS.

THE memorandum on warship boilers, and particularly those of the water-tube system, which Mr. Goschen wished to issue before the estimates were again discussed, was given to the public last Saturday. It is not a paper in which the public can be expected to take much interest, as not only is the subject highly technical, but it is therein treated in a technical manner. It is one of those documents, too, from which anyone can draw facts supporting his arguments and demonstrating, to his own satisfaction at least, anything whatever he desires to prove in connection with the matter. The gist of it is that while we have been obliged, like every other naval Power, to adopt the water-tube system for our warships, because of its advantages from a military and strategical point of view, yet it is by no means certain that we have chosen the best, or nearly the best, type of water-tube boiler, and in any case the system, being as it were in an infantile stage, is subject to a number of infantile complaints which, while worrying to its parents and those placed in authority over it, by no means precludes its attaining a healthy and vigorous manhood. Of the very many types of water-tube boiler, all may be gathered into one of two categories; the large tube types and the small tube types. So far as the latter are concerned, they have been tried in small craft, and have given satisfactory results. So much so indeed, that they are placed outside the region of controversy. One type may be, and is, no doubt, better than another, but the results obtained are not likely to result in our relying entirely upon one type at present.

With the large tube boilers the case is entirely different. The naval authorities, when they adopted, or perhaps as we ought to say, when they were forced to adopt, the system for large ships were practically reduced to Hobson's choice. They had to take the Belleville boiler or none. They have improved upon it as originally designed, and they are still introducing improvements. But meanwhile other systems have come into existence, and it is admittedly a question whether it would not be better now to try a new type. It may indeed be the case that a type at present fitted with small tubes could be utilised for large vessels if the tubes were slightly increased in diameter. It has been suggested that this might be done with the Yarrow type, which has given uniformly good results, and is perhaps at the present moment the most generally approved of all the types in existence. In these circumstances it is not surprising that the First Lord of the Admiralty should be found prepared to submit the whole question to a committee or a commission.

But the question thus to be submitted must be strictly limited to a decision as to which is the best water-tube boiler, and not, as some of the Admiralty critics would prefer, as to whether we should go back to the altogether discredited Scotch boiler, beloved of Mr. William Allan. An agitation which has been worked as much, we believe, for commercial interests as for national ones has unsettled the public mind. It is desirable, therefore, that the Admiralty should have that outside support which we feel sure a committee or commission will afford it. The report of such a body will tend not only to reassure the public, but its recommendations should be an authoritative guide to expert opinion. It is natural, of course, that the First Lord's decision to have a public inquiry should be in some quarters twisted into a confession that mistakes have been made, but impartial critics will not be convinced by any such one-sided reasoning. We do not believe that in taking this step it implies misgiving in the minds of our naval authorities as to the wisdom of adopting the water-tube system, but merely a desire to put an end to the acrimonious and unpatriotic controversy which has been raging for so long, and to ensure that our ships shall be fitted with the steam generator best adapted for their purpose.

Navy Notes.

Mr. Goschen's Supplementary Estimate will disappoint many. The sum to be voted is £1,269,300, and this will chiefly be spent upon guns and ammunition for the Fleet. The principle of increasing the ammunition reserves at our coaling stations and dockyards abroad is excellent, but it was hoped in some quarters that the First Lord would have asked Parliament to increase the shipbuilding votes materially in view of the new French and German programmes that would surely have justified such a demand. Instead of this, the Admiralty is content to ask for five more destroyers and to lay down a sea-going depot ship. In this connection it is curious to note the modified demands of the Navy League, which cried aloud a few weeks ago for battleships and cruisers to be laid down forthwith in the private yards. A memorandum just issued by the League (drawn up by Captain Eardley Wilmot) shows that the League has modified its views. It is now content to urge that twenty new cruisers and an equal number of destroyers should be laid down. The League modifies its proposals on the supposition that the Admiralty will be found willing to lay down several new battleships next year. We have now fourteen on the stocks and two more ordered, though not begun, and the Navy League seems no longer eager to press for the commencement of the battleships which the private yards have declared their capacity to commence. In view of more pressing requirements, so runs the memorandum, "we may wait until next year before laying down more battleships." In this matter the League is right. As regards cruisers, we have 120 built and twenty-one building. Seven are to be laid down this year, and the League urges the addition of at least twenty more, being of opinion that we should require 200 in war. The plea for a considerable increase of destroyers is based upon the contention that these vessels are liable to injury and breakdowns, which is certainly the case. We have 108 built and building, exclusive of the five now to be ordered under the Supplementary Vote. The League estimates that fully 150 will be absorbed by the squadrons in war, and that we require a considerable margin besides. It does not seem, however, that the Admiralty has been greatly influenced by these arguments.

The festivities in connection with the visit of the Mediterranean squadron to Trieste have been continued at Venice and Fiume. At both ports the British squadrons have received a most cordial welcome, banquets, balls, and illuminations have followed one another with almost startling rapidity, while the kindly tact and courtesy of Sir John Fisher has charmed the Italians at the same time that the bonhomie and camaraderie of Lord Charles Beresford has won the hearts of the Hungarians. At the banquet on board the Renown, after Sir John Fisher had proposed the health of the King and Queen of Italy, Admiral Magnaghi proposed in English the health of Queen Victoria. His heart, he said, was bigger with English feeling than his mind with English words, and the Syndic of Venice, in the name of the city, expressed his pleasure at seeing the English and Italian flags once again fraternally united. At the banquet on board the Ramillies at Fiume the principal guest was the Governor, Count Szapary, who in the name of the Hungarian Government welcomed the fleet. General Drogoni, who proposed the health of the British Service, alluded to the days when the Austro-Hungarian Army and Navy had fought side by side with the British. Sir John Fisher telegraphed to Count Szapary expressing his regret that the necessity of paying a visit to Venice had prevented his taking part in the festivities at Fiume, adding that with the Count's permission he would call at that port later on in the week to visit the Governor and thank the Hungarian Government for its hospitalities. It is somewhat noteworthy that in connection with these banquets the principal Austrian, Hungarian, and Italian officials and officers are all reported to have made their speeches in the English language, a compliment which may be deemed indicative of the true feelings of the speakers.

By the end of this week the preliminary cruise of the vessels engaged in the manoeuvres will have terminated, and preparations will commence for the mimic war. In spite of the prognostications of croakers, which were assumed to have had some justification in the mishap to the Conqueror, there has been a commendable lack of the ordinary and almost inevitable troubles incidental to commissioning a large number of vessels from the Reserve. The fleets and flotillas assembled at their respective ports without casualty worth mentioning, and although we cannot expect until early next week the full report on the preliminary cruise, we fully anticipate that what has been well begun will continue without any serious breakdown. It is satisfactory to note that the press appears to be as fully represented as in previous years, and this must surely be taken as a proof that the country is believed to have lost none of its interest in these naval operations. It would seem, by the way, an excellent opportunity for the press, through its representatives, to obtain as much authoritative naval opinion as possible on those two very important subjects of discussion, naval training and naval boilers. The opportunity is too good to be missed, and all that is wanted probably is a mandate from their editors for the correspondents to give the public a body of evidence on these subjects which should be most valuable. After all, it is naval executive and engineer officers who should be the best judges of what is wanted in this connection, and although the method of obtaining their views may be unusual and informal, it could not fail, if fairly unanimous, to make an impression upon the country.

Captains H. G. King-Hall and Reginald H. S. Bacon are the two youngest officers in the new batch of captains, and are to be congratulated upon their unusually rapid and well-won advancement. Captain King-Hall joined the Britannia in 1874, and is 39 years of age, whilst Captain Bacon, who is only 37, entered the Navy two years later. Both officers wear the D.S.O., and are distinguished as gunnery and torpedo experts, but it is unusual for any officer to reach the captains' list so rapidly as these officers have done. Captain Bacon secured five first class certificates and was made lieutenant at twenty years of age. He was specially promoted to the rank of commander, and recently did good service in the Benin expedition, about which he has also written a very interesting book. The new commanders range between the Hon. George Hardinge, with fifteen years' service as lieutenant, and G. P. Webley Hope, who obtains his step after eleven years' service in that rank, from the senior staff of the Excellent. Commander Philip N. Wright, of the Orlando, who has been specially promoted on the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief for his services before Tien-tsin, where he was dangerously wounded, has served just ten years as lieutenant.

The following account of what has been called the Astor-Milne affair appears to be the most correct. Sir Archibald Milne was dining one evening some time ago at the Carlton with a party, which included Miss Astor, Lady O., and Lady S. On that occasion Miss Astor gave him a verbal invitation to the forthcoming Astor concert. Her father's secretary was instructed to send Sir Archibald an invitation, but did not do so. On the evening of the concert the baronet was dining with a party, including Lady O., a close acquaintance of the Astors, who said to him: "Of course, you are coming down to the Astors?" He explained that Miss Astor had invited him, but he had received no ticket. Lady O. said: "Never mind that, come with me, I will take the responsibility." He went. In making his report to Mr. Astor after the concert, the secretary stated that he had forgotten to send an invitation to Sir Archibald, excusing himself for his error. Then Mr. Astor remembered having seen Sir Archibald there, and wrote him a very stiff letter. Sir Archibald, in order to explain the situation, wrote to Mr. Astor, expressing regret. To his surprise, he received a letter very strongly worded, followed by a notice which appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette, to the effect that Sir Archibald was not among those invited to the Astor concert. Sir Archibald had explained the circumstances to the committee of his club, the members of which are perfectly satisfied, but naturally furious at Mr. Astor's attack upon one of their most popular members.

Mr. A. R. Colquhoun, the explorer, has addressed a very curious letter to the press and to the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in which he somewhat rashly advises the admirals in the East how to reach Peking. Mr. Colquhoun's letter is dated the 13th inst., and his advice is belated indeed, if, as is now believed, the massacre of Europeans took place on the 7th or 8th. He urges that a large force could be conveyed by water to a point within fifteen miles of the capital, whence a stone causeway leads to Peking. It seems to us that no man, however distinguished as an explorer, has the right to assume that Admiral Seymour and the foreign admirals neglected to consider this means of reaching Peking. It is evident, too, that Mr. Colquhoun greatly underrates the gravity of the crisis, and is arguing that a comparatively small force would suffice to relieve Peking. "The character of the opposition to be encountered," he writes, "is evidenced by the fact that Admiral Seymour was able with his small force to fight his way back with comparatively small loss." In effect the Admiral was not able to do this: he was relieved, after fighting desperately for fifteen days, by a mixed force of 4,000 men. It is just possible, no doubt, that a much stronger relief force than Admiral Seymour was able to land when he made his gallant attempt, might have enjoyed better chances of success had it gone by the route which the explorer advocates. But the large army now required for the advance upon Peking could not be transported by water.

The following extract from a letter addressed by the late Captain Roderick Dew, R.N., commanding the Nimrod, being of interest just now, has been sent to us for publication by Mr. E. Emanuel, of the Hard, Portsea, to whom it was written just forty-two years ago:—

Nimrod, June 4, 1858,

My dear Sir,

Peiho Forts.

"I send you
You ran a risk on May 20 of being minus my little account, for a ball knocked my hat off. It was a pretty little affair that battle of the gunboats; and the brunt was borne by the Nimrod and the Cormorant. We had fifty-four guns playing on us at one time; but they were most of them elevated too much. We have shipped fifty-four brass guns from seven to two tons each, ten of the former beautifully cast, and but one year old. One goes to the Queen and another to Napoleon, and the rest I hope into our pockets. The French have shipped the same number. All the Ambassadors and Admirals are at Tien-tsin—sixty up the river; and only forty from Peking. It is a wretched place. Two of the tallest mandarins in China have come down to treat; and I have no doubt we shall get all we want. In case of accidents we have sent to Hong Kong for 2,500 troops; and if the Emperor's heart is still hardened, we must wave our flags over Peking. A Mongolian prince, a tiger in war, came to Tien-tsin with 30,000 braves; but when the routed army from Peiho told them what devils we were, they cleared out. I have given up the Nimrod to Captain Mends, and have taken up my quarters with Captain Saumarez.

"If you will send me out a consignment I will open a branch for you at Peking.

Yours truly,

(Signed) R. Dew."

The five new torpedo-boat destroyers ordered for the Royal Navy, for the purchase of which £350,600 is provided, are to be named Cobra, Kangaroo, Tiger, Thorn, and Vigilant. The Cobra is being built at the works of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Mitchell, and Co., of Newcastle-on-Tyne, the Kangaroo at the works of Palmer's Shipbuilding Company, Jarrow, and the Thorn, Tiger, and Vigilant at Messrs. John Brown and Co., Glasgow. There are also at the present time fourteen fast torpedo-boat destroyers building or completing for the Royal Navy at private shipbuilding establishments.

In consequence of the irregularities in Army contracts recently made public, instructions have been given that from firms tendering for contracts the names must be obtained of all persons who are principals or partners, and in the case of limited companies the names of the directors.

THE CHINESE CRISIS.

Sunday, July 15.

The transport Zibenghla, with Gen. Gaselee and his staff on board, arrived at Hong Kong to-day. The transport Nairung, from Calcutta, with one wing of the 24th Punjab Infantry, arrived and proceeded to Taku.

The Italian Consul-General at Shanghai reports that the Italian Mission in Hunan has been destroyed. Mgr. Fantosasti, the bishop, and two missionary priests were killed. The missions in Hu Pei and Ho Nan have also been attacked. It is reported from Hong Kong that in the West River all is quiet. The Sandpiper is at Sam-shui, and the Robin at Wu-chau. The hired transport Tai-sang, with stores and ammunition, and the draft of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers, left for Taku.

The Canning and the Nowshera left Bombay with the 1st Batn. 4th Goorkhas and No. 2 Co. Bombay Sappers, and the ss. Sirsa, also with troops, left Calcutta for Hong Kong.

The company of Bersaglieri ordered to China left Rome for Naples en route for China. There was a great crowd at the station to see them off, and the people cheered for the King and the Army. Similar demonstrations took place at Turin, Florence, and Bologna, and other places on the occasion of the departure of troops for the Far East.

In the attack on the foreign settlement at Tien-tsin on July 3, the Chinese infantry advanced in strong force to within 600 yards of the railway station, which was under the protection of a force of 70 British marines from Wei-hai-Wei, with a company of Frenchmen in support a mile to the south-west and a force of Russians extended over the plain to the westward. On the approach of the Chinese they were met with such a vigorous Maxim fire that they were compelled to beat a hasty retreat. The Chinese then directed a heavy shell fire on the French and Russian troops, and forced them to retire. The British Marines slowly followed, contesting every foot of the ground. The rain continued in torrents, and the firing was maintained far into the night. One French officer was killed and one wounded. The British had six wounded, and the Russians nine.

Monday, July 16.

Actions at Tien-tsin on July 6, 7, and 8 reported. At noon on July 6 the British and Americans unsuccessfully attempted to capture a Chinese 15pr. From two o'clock till four there was a continuous artillery duel, 11 guns shelling the settlements from the native city. After the bombardment the Chinese Regiment, with one naval gun, endeavoured unsuccessfully to capture a gun. The British casualties to-day were:—Killed, two bluejackets, and two men of the Chinese Regiment; severely wounded, Major Bruce, Chinese Regiment, and Midshipman Esdaile, of the Barfleur; wounded, Lieut. Brown, R.E., two bluejackets and two marines, and five men of the Chinese Regiment.

On the night of the 6th-7th the Chinese riflemen made a determined attack on the north-west corner of the settlements, but were repelled by the Japanese, with heavy loss. The Japanese had five killed and five wounded. The racecourse, grand stand, and other buildings in the vicinity were burned, and the ruins occupied by the enemy. One shell entered the barracks occupied by the men of the Centurion, killing two bluejackets and wounding two others. Midshipman Esdaile died of his wounds on the evening of July 7.

(Sent via Chefoo, 3.10 p.m., July 11.)

"Tien-tsin, July 9.—Enemy's position south-west of settlement attacked 4 a.m. to-day. Japanese troops by flank movement drove enemy out, capturing four guns; cavalry pursued and completed rout, killing large numbers of soldiers and Boxers. Allied forces shelled and afterwards occupied western arsenal. Two guns captured. Arsenal burnt, being unable to hold it. Enemy's loss 350 killed. Casualties of allied forces small; details not to hand."

(Sent via Chefoo, July 13, noon.)

"July 12.—On July 11, at 3 a.m., Chinese made most determined attack on the railway station, Tien-tsin, in great force; finally driven off about 6 a.m., but allies lost 150 killed and wounded. Chinese loss not known, but believed to be very heavy. At noon forts were bombarded for one hour by British and French guns. Fort and pagoda used as signal tower demolished. Forces have been increased by arrival of 1,500 Americans."

The Dido and Isis and the transport Ikinda, with the 12th Field Battery, arrived at Hong Kong. The Bonaventure proceeds to Woosung.

Tuesday, July 17.

The following telegrams from Brig.-Gen. Dorward were received by the Secretary of State for War:—

"Chefoo, July 10, 3.30 p.m.

"Tien-tsin, July 7.—City heavily bombarded July 6 by allied troops on right bank of river. Enemy ceased firing soon after bombardment began. Bombardment will be repeated to-day. Enemy have placed guns within 800 yds. British, French settlements, under cover of houses, and keep up galling fire. Lieut. Browne, R.E., slightly wounded by shell bursting in mess house. Major Bruce, Chinese Regiment, dangerously wounded while endeavouring to locate enemy's gun near French settlement. Two naval 12-pr. guns, two 4in. have arrived lately, so they are hoping to suppress enemy's fire more effectually. For the present attention will be concentrated on artillery duel. Major Bruce doing well."

"Chefoo, July 13, noon.

"Tien-tsin, July 10.—Yesterday, 3 a.m., combined force, 1,000 Japanese under the command of Gen. Fukushima, 550 British troops, 400 British Navy, 100 United States, 400 Russians under command of myself, attacked enemy's position south-west of city. Positions were quickly captured. Enemy's loss 350 killed, four small guns captured. Combined force then attacked western arsenal outside South Gate, which, after a short bombardment, was rushed by United States and Japanese. Country to the west of arsenal has been flooded by enemy, so no further movement in this direction was possible. Chief object of expedition, which was to clear away guns and enemy to the west of settlements, completely carried out. Day's honours rested with Japanese and Americans. Chinese Regiment, as escort to guns, worked splendidly, getting over difficulties of swampy country. During the action British and French settlements heavily shelled by north-eastern batteries. Yesterday's victory may result in withdrawal of Chinese troops from Tien-tsin, in which case fort and city will probably be attacked soon."

"Chefoo, Friday (July 13) Noon.

"Tien-tsin, July 11.—Three o'clock this morning determined attack made by enemy on railway station, which is garrisoned by 100 British troops, 100 French, 100 Japanese. Attack repulsed with loss after four hours hard fighting. Enemy's loss: 500 killed. Our loss: Hong Kong Regiment, three men killed and nine wounded; 2nd Batn. Welsh Fusiliers, one wounded; Royal Marine Light Infantry, three wounded; Royal Navy, three wounded. French and Japanese losses considerably heavier."

Wednesday, July 18.

It is announced from St. Petersburg that the Chinese have declared war against Russia and invaded Russian territory in Northern Asia.

The commander of the German Squadron telegraphs from Taku, under date July 14:—

"The allies seized possession on the 13th inst. of all the forts around Tien-tsin except one. The capture of this one is expected to take place when the Russian artillery, now on its way there, has arrived."

The Russian commander reports that at dawn on the 14th inst. the native town at Tien-tsin was stormed by two columns consisting of British, Japanese, American, Russian and German troops. The Japanese occupied the town. The Russians, Germans, and French were unable to enter. The total casualties amounted to 600.

Vice-Admiral Alexieff telegraphs to the Minister of War:—

"Tien-tsin, July 6.

"I arrived to-day and inspected the troops. Everything excellent; soldiers fit and full of courage, a pledge of further successes. They were ably led by their commanders, and I thought it my duty to thank the men in the name of his Majesty."

In the fighting at Tien-tsin on Friday the small Italian naval detachment lost no fewer than one senior officer and 46 men killed or wounded.

The four new destroyers Kasatka, Kit, Shat, and Dolphin, built at Elbing for the Russian Admiralty, and only recently delivered at Cronstadt, are being put into commission for the Far East. It is expected that the flotilla will reach Taku about a fortnight later than the German torpedo squadron despatched from Kiel.

Thursday, July 19.

The following telegram from Admiral Seymour has been received by the Secretary of the Admiralty:—

"Taku, Sunday.

"Attack allied forces made on the native city Tien-tsin on July 13. Troops marched out at 2 a.m., and were heavily engaged until 8 p.m., when they were still outside wall. Early in the morning next day Japanese blew up gate and got in, others following. No opposition afterwards, and city with all forts captured. On the right Russians took battery on the Liu-tai Canal, with 12 small guns; other troops all engaged on the left. About 8,000 troops engaged. Severe loss, over 700 killed and wounded. Japanese most heavily. British loss 20 killed, 93 wounded, of whom 6 killed and 38 wounded belong to Naval Brigade. Chinese troops reported fled; direction unknown."

The lieutenant-colonel of the 9th Regiment (U.S.A.) reports that Col. Liscum and 17 men have been killed in the fighting at Tien-tsin, while Major Eagan, Capt. Noyes and Bookmiller, Lieuts. Lawton and Lang, and 72 men have been wounded.

From the Siberian frontier it is reported that the bombardment of Blagovestchensk by the Chinese from the village of Sahalin has been proceeding for two days. Gen. Gribski reports from Blagovestchensk:—The Chinese along the Amur, near Aigun and Blagovestchensk, have thrown up entrenchments 20 versts long and erected batteries, 40 guns having been placed in position. The Chinese who bombarded Blagovestchensk numbered 2,000 men, with eight guns.

Certain portions of the Amur Territory, comprising the first division of the Khabarovsk District, a section of the coast territory, as well as the towns of Blagovestchensk, Khabarovsk, Nikols-Kussuri, and Vladivostok, have been declared in a state of war, dating from the 17th inst. Rear-Admiral Skrydloff has been promoted to vice-admiral and appointed commander of the Russian Pacific Squadron.

The transport Pentacotah left Calcutta with Indian troops for China on Wednesday.

The Indian transport Itinda left Hong Kong on Tuesday for the north. Capt. Potts, of the Hong Kong Volunteers, has been attached to Gen. Gaselee's staff.

Friday, July 20.

Gen. Gaselee delayed his departure from Hong Kong until Wednesday in consequence of the arrival of Li Hung Chang from Canton. The Viceroy had a long conference with Sir H. Blake, Gens. Gaselee, Gascoigne, and Barrow and Commodore Powell being present. The Governor endeavoured to persuade Li to remain in Canton, but Li maintained that he must obey the Empress's orders to proceed to Shanghai and thence to Peking, if possible, in order to take up the Viceroyalty of Chi-li. Gen. Gaselee and his staff left in the evening for Wei-hai-wei, and Li Hung Chang left for Shanghai.

In a despatch received from Admiral Bendemann, dated Taku, July 16, Count Usedom reports that scarcely any resistance was offered on the part of Chinese to the Japanese, British, and American forces when they stormed the walled native city on the 14th. The town is now in the hands of the allies. On the afternoon of the 14th inst. a fight was still going on at the east side of the town between the Russians and Chinese for the possession of the Chinese camp. On the morning of the 15th inst. Russian flags were floating over the Chinese citadel and camp. With that ended the capture of the town. In the fight on July 13 Gen. Stoessel was slightly wounded, but after an hour he was able to resume command.

After Tien-tsin had been taken on the morning of the 14th inst. the Japanese guns bombarded the Naval Barracks on which the Russians were making an attack. At the same time Japanese detachments occupied the railway station and repulsed the attacks of the Chinese. They then took possession of the Naval Barracks and the surrounding buildings, and captured 80 cannon. The Japanese lost 60 men killed and 270 wounded in these operations.

The French gunboats, Comète and Avalanche have arrived at Canton.

The Mohawk and Wallaroo have left Queensland on their way to China.

HOW OUR SOLDIERS CAN WEATHER THE SOUTH AFRICAN CLIMATE.—When H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES visited India, he was equipped, by orders of the Physicians, with HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT. This is the beverage which stales the body against the climate, maintains the appetite, and being palatable, acts refreshing. The AUSTRIAN Military Field Hospitals reported officially that this preparation is greatly beneficial to the recovery of the wounded soldiers. In emaciation, loss of succulence of the digestive organs, and catarrh, it proved very valuable. This report is issued by VON GAYERSFELD, Major and War Commissary, Pirtz. Caution—The name M. HOFF, HAMBURG, must be on all labels. M. HOFF'S London House, 20, NEW BRIDGE STREET, E.C.

Navy Personal.

The Duke of York presided at a special court of the Trinity House on Tuesday last, when the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain was elected an Elder Brother of the corporation in place of the late Duke of Argyll. His Royal Highness afterwards lunched with the Deputy Master and Elder Brethren.

Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Clanwilliam and Admirals Sir William Dowell and Sir Anthony Hoskins were present on Friday in last week at a meeting of the Patriotic Fund Commissioners, in the Horse Guard's Levée Room, to consider how the recommendations of the War Relief Funds Inquiry Committee can be carried out as far as they, the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund, are concerned. A sub-committee was formed for this important purpose.

Admiral Sir William Luard, in spite of eighty-three years of age and a recent illness, was present on Saturday last at Chelmsford, when the Essex County Athletic Championships were decided.

Admiral Sir N. Bowden-Smith, Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, in distributing prizes to the boys of the London School Board training ship Shaftesbury on Tuesday last, remarked that no doubt many of them would join the Royal Navy. That Service had its hardships and disagreeable features, the same as in other walks of life, but if they entered it he hoped they would remain in it, and do credit to the nation of which they were proud of being subjects.

Vice-Admiral Sir Compton Domville and Rear-Admirals C. C. P. FitzGerald and A. D. Fanshawe are the umpires of this year's naval manoeuvres, and meet at Whitehall for the purpose. As they have all served in large squadrons since attaining flag rank, the selection is a judicious one.

Rear-Admiral Day H. Bosanquet, Commander-in-Chief of the East Indian Squadron, arrived on Saturday last at Port Louis, Mauritius, in the Eclipse. This is the most desirable portion of the rear-admiral's command, and usually visited by him at this period of the year. A distinguished flag-officer, who served in the East Indies during the "eighties," remarked that Mauritius was the only place on the station with anything approaching a decent climate.

Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, of the Mediterranean Squadron, stated in a letter of the 10th inst. to a friend that "to serve the country best at the moment I think that I should be sent to China. I might just arrive in time to prevent rebellion spreading to the Yang-tse provinces." It is to be regretted that his lordship is not on the spot, as his local knowledge and ability to command would be invaluable in the present crisis, especially in the river that is within our sphere of interest.

Captain the Hon. Hedworth Lambton opened a patriotic bazaar at Enfield Lock last Saturday, and, in referring to the large amount of warlike stores made in the locality for our Navy and Army, remarked that it should not be forgotten that those who did their work thoroughly in making weapons did as much good as those who used them, though they had not the same opportunity of gaining honour and glory therefrom.

Captain Count Frederick Metaxa arrived at Plymouth on Friday in last week by the transport Dunera, his son, Lieut. R. Metaxa, 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, who was seriously wounded in South Africa, being a passenger on the same vessel.

Captain H. C. B. Hulbert, of the Pelorus, arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday morning last from Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope.

Captains G. M. Henderson, of the Isis, and Philip F. Tillard, of the Dido, both arrived at Hong Kong on Monday last. These cruisers made the passage from Malta in twenty-three days including stoppages for coaling. Captain Lewis Wintz, of the Goliath, arrived at Singapore the same day that the two cruisers reached Hong Kong, and is thus four days behind them, as they left the capital of the Straits Settlements on the 12th inst.

Captain A. J. Horsley, of the Europa, arrived at Albany, West Australia, on Monday last. Possibly his long stay at Sydney, N.S.W., gave the well-known firm who usually repairs her Majesty's ships an opportunity of showing their ability in putting this cruiser in order for her present voyage.

Captain Henry Leah, of the Diana, pays off that cruiser at Chatham on the 30th inst.

Commander A. E. Grant, of the Racoon, left Delagoa Bay on Sunday last for Mauritius to rejoin the flag of Rear-Admiral Bosanquet.

Staff Commander C. R. H. Robinson, of the Wye, leaves Sheerness on 5th prox. for Ascension and Bahia, and is due at Plymouth, on his return voyage, October 28. Bahia has been substituted for Rio de Janeiro, and he will meet Commodore Groome in the Flora at the northern port.

Lieut.-Commander Cecil Lambert, of the Lapwing, who arrived at Plymouth from the East Indies on Friday in last week, is to pay off that vessel on the 28th inst.

Lieut. John Nicholas's promotion to Commander is well deserved and undoubtedly gives satisfaction to his numerous friends. As senior Lieut. of the Powerful, he was retained on board during the absence of Captain the Hon. Hedworth Lambton and the Naval Brigade at the front in South Africa, and a great deal of hard work and much responsibility devolved on him in consequence, for which he now receives recognition.

Chief Inspector of Machinery Sir A. J. Durston, who has hitherto borne the distinctive appellation of "Engineer-in-Chief of the Navy," now assumes the substantive rank of "Engineer-in-Chief of the Fleet," with the relative rank of Rear-Admiral. Considering the important duties and responsibilities of his position as head of the steam department of the Navy, it is only right that he should be accorded a position superior in rank to that of his professional brother officers. In the medical branch during the fifties the Director-General ranked with a Commodore 2nd class, and an Inspector of Hospitals with a junior Captain. When Inspectors-General were introduced in 1862 with the relative rank of junior Flag-Officers, the Director-General was not given relative rank superior to that accorded the latter, and since then has always held that of the senior Inspectorial grade and worn similar uniforms.

Assistant-Paymaster John Cooper, of the Osborne, obtains promotion to Paymaster after ten years' junior commissioned service. This compares very favourably with the period that several of his less fortunate seniors had to wait for their step, some of whom were seventeen years Assistant-Paymasters, and nearly forty years of age. As he has only held his present appointment eighteen months, the privilege accorded his predecessor in the Royal Yacht of being retained after promotion will obtain in this instance.

Assistant-Paymaster Henry Foden, who was appointed in charge of the Brisk on February 15 last, has now been given the rank of Acting Paymaster from that date. This concession might with justice be applied to the Assistant Paymaster of the Magicienne, the Paymaster of that vessel having been landed at Lorenzo Marques as Acting British Vice-Consul.

Captains B. M. Strouts and E. Wray, R.M.L.I., recently serving at Wei-hai-Wei, and Captain L. S. T. Halliday, R.M.L.I., of the Orlando, are reported to have been with the Legation Guard of the Royal Marine forces at Pekin, and have, it is feared, shared the fate of their countrymen and women within the walls of the British enclosure.

Captain J. L. Homer, R.M.A., and his team from Eastney, were only one point behind the winning team (3rd Hants) in the competition for the Brinsmead Challenge Shield, at Bisley, on Friday in last week.

Navy Foreign.

The chief Russian naval officers serving in the Far East are:—Vice-Admiral Alexeieff, who was born in 1843; entered the Service 1860; Midshipman 1865; Lieut. 1867; Lieut.-Captain 1877; Captain, 2nd rank, 1883; Captain, 1st rank, 1886; Rear-Admiral 1892; Vice-Admiral 1897. He commanded the cruiser Afrika 1878-1883, and the Admiral Kornilof 1886-1891; was Assistant Chief of the Naval General Staff 1892-1895; Chief of Squadron on the Pacific (Far East) 1895-1897; Chief of Division Black Sea Fleet (31 vessels) 1897; Commander Black Sea Squadron 1898. He is apparently now in command at Tien-tsin, and was the officer who telegraphed reports of attack on the Taku forts, although he was at that time in command at Port Arthur. Rear-Admiral Hildebrandt was born 1842; entered the Service 1858; Midshipman 1862; Lieut. 1865; Lieut.-Captain 1875; Captain, 2nd rank, 1885; Captain, 1st rank, 1887; Rear-Admiral, 1892. He commanded the gunboat Sneg 1880-1883; the cruiser Razborjnik 1883-1885; the Vladimir Monomach 1885-1888; and the battleship Imperator Nikolai I. 1888-1892. He was Director of the Marine Artillery 1895-1896; Assistant-Chief of the Naval General Staff 1896; Commander of a Division in the Baltic 1898-1899. He was Chief in Command on the Russian Pacific Station, but has now apparently been superseded by Vice-Admiral Stryloff. Captain Dobrovolski was born 1854; entered the Service 1871; Lieut. 1875; Captain second rank, 1891. He commanded the schooner Bakan 1890-1891; the coast defence gun-boat Burun 1892-1895; the coast defence ship Admiral Greig 1895; the Siberian Expedition 1895; and the transport Tungus 1897. He is the officer mentioned as being in command of the Russian forces at the attack on the Taku forts.

In view of the state of affairs in the Far East, the Japanese are urging contractors to push ahead with vessels under construction. Several ships are to be added to their fleet this month and next. The Yakumo, an armoured cruiser of 9,800 tons, left the western port for Japan a few days ago. The Adzuma, a sister ship, built at St. Nazaire, is also ready, and the gunnery trials have taken place, so that the ship should leave almost immediately. The Asahi, battleship, made her gunnery trials this week, and is timed to leave to-morrow for Japan. The Idzumo, another armoured cruiser of 9,800 tons, will be complete and undergo her gunnery trials on August 12 or 13, and will leave for Japan shortly afterwards. The completion of the Hatsuse and Iwate, the former a battleship, the latter another sister of the Yakumo, has been delayed by the non-delivery of armour plates by the contractors.

It is proposed by the United States Navy Department to authorise the North Atlantic Squadron to use one of the old monitors as a target for the guns of the vessels under Rear-Admiral Farquhar's command. The idea is that this practice should supplement the information gained by our Navy from the Majestic on the Belleisle. United States naval officers appear to be of the opinion that several important changes in naval practice will follow as a result of the Belleisle experiments, and they are hoping that the department will decide to authorise the re-equipment of one of the old monitors and her use as a target for the Kearsarge and New York.

The armoured cruiser La Marseillaise has been successfully launched at Brest. She is of 10,000 tons, and her engines, which will furnish 20,500 horse-power, are expected to give a speed of twenty-one knots.

Steps have been taken to place the American torpedo-boat flotilla in condition for service. Rear-Admiral Melville was authorised to make repairs to the Winslow, which will take sixty days; the Ericsson, which will require twenty days; the Foote, twenty days; the MacKenzie, twelve days; the Cushing, ten days; and the McKee, ten days. It is officially announced in this connection that it is considered desirable to have all the torpedo-boats in condition for sea service.

THE COLT AUTOMATIC QUICK-FIRING MACHINE-GUN
AND DUNDONALD GALLOPING
GUN-CARRIAGE.

Colt Automatic Guns, taking the English Service ammunition of 303 calibre, and mounted on DUNDONALD GALLOPING CAR-RIAGES, are now being largely used in South Africa, both by Imperial and Colonial troops.

The Dundonald Carriage carries 2,000 rounds of ammunition, loaded in belts ready for immediate use, and is protected by patent armour plate.
The Carriage can be taken into action by one man and horse, and can be unlim-bered and brought into action within the space of thirty seconds, the Colt Gun being then ready to pour out a stream of bullets at the rate of over 450 rounds per minute, or less if required.

The Dundonald Galloping Ammunition Cart is constructed to carry either 7,000 or 10,500 rounds, loaded in belts and ready for transfer to the Colt Guns at a moment's notice. This also can be galloped into action and unlimbered with the same speed as the Gun Carriage, and therefore forms a most valuable adjunct to the Colt Gun and Dundonald Carriage.

The Dundonald General Service Cart. Specially
adapted for South African Service. The lightest, strongest, most serviceable
Two-wheeled Cart made. Constructed with a Steel Frame and Hide Bottom.
Carries over 1,000 lbs. of Baggage, contains over 100 cubic feet covered space, weighs about 600 lbs.

GUERRILLA WARFARE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

FOR some time military operations on an extensive scale have been in abeyance in South Africa. Since the occupation of Johannesburg and Pretoria, the energy of the Commander-in-Chief has been mainly directed to the repair and protection of the two great railways connecting Pretoria with the sea. As that work was being accomplished supplies were pushed northward, and large advanced depôts have been formed at strategical points, rendering the army independent of temporary interruptions on the lines. During this period of comparative inaction on the side of the British, the enemy have adopted and put in practice a system of guerilla warfare, which, while it secures for them no prospect of ultimate success, has enabled them from time to time, and at unexpected points, to secure not a few minor successes, in which they suffer and inflict loss, capture convoys and their escorts, interrupt the communications, and even overpower isolated posts. There is reason to hope that the combined movement on the Boer stronghold south of Bethlehem is nearing a great and decisive success, but it is to be feared that the breaking of General Hunter's cordon by the intrepid De Wet and the success that has since attended him, will yet cause Lord Roberts some inconvenience before he can be finally crushed.

It is, however, to be noted that a forward movement of great importance commenced on Monday towards the east from Pretoria, and has already made considerable progress. The possession of the line from the capital to Komati Poort will mark the next great step in advance, and the operations to secure it will, no doubt, be pushed forward with the utmost vigour. When it has been secured the large section of the Transvaal lying south of a line drawn from Mafeking through Rustenburg, Pretoria, and Middleburg to Komati Poort will be practically in Lord Roberts's hands; supplies to the Transvaal Burghers from Lorenzo Marques through Komati Poort will cease, and the annoying guerilla tactics of the enemy will in the main be confined to occasional raids from the fastnesses around Lydenburg, and Fouriesburg if still unsubdued, until the ammunition, supplies, and determination of the Boers become at length exhausted. North of the Vaal the restless activity of the enemy has recently been making itself felt in three different localities, namely to the north-east of the capital, to the north of the Natal railway, and in the Rustenburg district. Lord Roberts, in a despatch of the 19th inst., reported that on that date Lord Metheun, moving from Krugersdorp, occupied Hickpoort, some fifteen miles to the north-west, without serious opposition. On the following day, continuing his march, he engaged the enemy's rearguard near Zandfontein, and on Saturday he again, with his accustomed vigour, attacked and completely dispersed the Boer commando at Oliphant's Nek, in the Megaliesberg Hills, eight miles south of Rustenburg, thereby relieving that place of the threatening presence of the enemy, and joining hands with General Baden-Powell.

On Monday commenced the general advance of the main column, General Stephenson's brigade moving along the railway to Eland's River Station, twenty-four miles east of Pretoria. The enemy retired without fighting on Bronkhurst Spruit, their right flank being overlapped by Hamilton's rapid advance. Lord Roberts's right is covered by the mounted troops of Generals French and Hutton, the former of whom was twenty miles further east beyond the Wilge River. The same disposition of troops and strategy are being employed as during the brilliant advance from Bloemfontein to Pretoria, the infantry being in the centre, keeping by the railway, with mounted wings thrown well forward, the whole being extended over a wide front. On Tuesday Lord Roberts was at Bronkhurst Spruit, well known as the place where the gallant 94th Regiment suffered so severely at the hands of the Boers in the war of 1880. No opposition was met with by the centre, but both French and Hutton, six miles to the south, came across bodies of the enemy, which were driven back with loss. The Boers are reported to be moving north-east towards Lydenburg, whither Mr. Kruger is also proceeding. Balmoral, twenty miles further east, was reached by the main column on Wednesday without seeing the enemy, and French and Hutton, in pursuit of the Boers routed the day before, were about to cross the Oliphant's River at Naauwpoort, ten miles south of the railway, thus turning any positions lying along the eastern bank of the river. At Balmoral, the headquarters of the force were within thirty miles of Middleburg, which may be in possession of Lord Roberts as we write.

In support apparently of Lord Roberts's operations General Clery's Division moved from Greylingstad eastwards to Val Station on the Pretoria-Natal railway on Sunday, and next day, changing direction to the north, reached Groot Spruit, eighteen miles distant, but found no trace of the enemy. On Tuesday he returned with his column to his former headquarters at Greylingstad, having presumably accomplished his object. Further attempts to overpower outlying posts, which happily were unsuccessful, have been reported. A determined attack was made at daybreak on Saturday on a British post thirteen miles east of Heidelberg. The garrison consisting of two companies of the 2nd Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers, 110 Engineers, and ten Yeomanry were able, owing to their good fighting, and the skill with which the post was entrenched, to beat off the enemy before the arrival of reinforcements. This success shows that if officers had displayed skill in fortifying posts, and proper grasp of the principles of war, we should have had fewer minor disasters and surrenders to chronicle. Again, General Baden-Powell has reported from the Rustenburg district that, on Sunday, 450 Colonials under Colonels Airey and Lussington drove 1,000 Boers from a very strong position at Magate's Pass, scattering them with considerable loss. The Boers threatening General Buller's communications from Amersfoort have recently been so much in evidence that General Hildyard moved out against them, and after three days' desultory fighting drove them northwards. The guarding of the captured railways, constantly growing longer as the forces advance, has become the most arduous duty of the generals.

The most noteworthy incident south of the Vaal during the past fortnight has been the escape on the 16th inst. through General Hunter's cordon, west of Bethlehem, of a commando now said to be 2,000 strong, under Christian and Piet De Wet, and accompanied, it is supposed, by Mr. Steyn. This achievement was due, no doubt, to the insufficiency of the encircling troops to close effectually, against so mobile and subtle a foe, all possible exits from a mountainous region of which the circuit to be guarded was at the time not less than one hundred miles. The investing force, which is chiefly composed of infantry, could hardly have exceeded 30,000, or about 3,000 to every ten miles. On the 19th inst. Colonel Little, of the 9th Lancers, in temporary command of the 3rd Cavalry Brigade, came in contact with the escaped commando near Lindley. The Boers, being repulsed, broke up into two parties, and made off in different directions. General Broadwood, with the 2nd Cavalry Brigade, which had followed in the track of the raiders since the 16th, took part in this engagement. The enemy proceeded towards Paardekraal, and making a double apparently eluded the pursuit, as Broadwood on Monday marched to Roodeval Station, where he hoped to obtain supplies for 3,000 men and horses, and get news of the enemy, who meanwhile made their presence felt at Honing Spruit Station, twelve miles south of Roodeval, by cutting the wires, slightly damaging the line, and capturing a train with 100 Highlanders. They then crossed the line at Serfontein, a few miles north of Honing Spruit, taking a north-westerly direction. About the same time a train was reported to have been captured near Roodeval with two officers and 200 men of the 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. It is possible that when the De Wets divided their force each party made for different points on the railway, and succeeded each in striking its own quarry. De Wet's force, presumably reunited, was on Sunday at Vredefort, a few miles south of the Vaal, with Broadwood and Little still in pursuit. On Tuesday Broadwood reached Vredefort where he awaited Little. He captured six of De Wet's waggons, but was not strong enough to attack the Boer force, which was reported to have been reinforced, and occupying a strong position on the south bank of the Vaal. On the whole the situation has greatly improved, and though the position is still fraught with difficulty, Lord Roberts's splendid generalship is telling enormously, as the Continental critics who still follow the war say with one accord.

"BOBS' HANDY MAN."

IF Mr. Spencer Winston Churchill has any fault it is not "shyness." He has physical courage, the courage of his opinions to boot, and, as an ex-cavalry officer of short but varied service, as a son of Lord Randolph Churchill, a persona grata at headquarters, he has come home from a long, adventurous, and eventful course of service as correspondent of the Morning Post with a reputation which will secure him a favourable reception from the general public, should he make, as it is said he intends to do, a new departure, and seek to play a part in the political world in which his father achieved such rapid and commanding distinction. "Even the very youngest of special correspondents" may be mistaken when he tries to "ride on the whirlwind and direct the storm" in a crisis of any kind, but Mr. Churchill seems to have skated over thin ice with dexterity, and he faced the music of an interview the moment he arrived with the utmost confidence "without one 'if' or 'but'" in his responses. The war has not come to an end. Great operations are over. We are in a better position over here to get a good general view of what is going on than people in South Africa are. If that be so they are in woeful ignorance about there we think. Some of the Boers will fight till they die, he thinks. No surrender. It's nonsense to say the Boer is a mounted infantry man—he is essentially a cavalry man—a beautiful horseman. Our mounted infantry was used for duties to which it was not trained. Our cavalry found it a terrible hardship to have to fight with miserable carbines against men armed with rifles. Mr. Churchill would give cavalry a good rifle and teach them to shoot—sharp sticks and long knives are the weapons of the savage (i.e., lances and swords must be abolished!) Our artillery was more satisfactory in the Free State than in Natal, as far as he saw. Our generals were afraid to push guns to the front after Long's misfortune. The Boer guns are better than ours, and we are behind Contimental nations in type of ordnance and rapidity of fire, but in nothing are we so far behind as in rifles (!); our magazine action is wrong. The Lee-Metford is beautiful for a trained marksman, but the Mauser is better for the average shot. There are superior rifles in use now in Germany and elsewhere. The bayonet had played a great part in the campaign, and had robbed the Boer of many of the advantages of his courage and cunning. The veldt Boer on his horse was equal to anything between three and five regulars. On the hospital question he was non-committal—he had no opportunity of visiting the hospitals; no doubt there has been a great deal of misery and suffering, and some of it might have been avoided. "Untoward incidents" on the line of communications in many cases were due to bad staff work. The machine went wrong. "Take one instance," said Mr. Churchill, "Colville was told to march on Lindley and Heilbron on fixed dates, and that both places were garrisoned by our troops, whereas Hamilton, who was seven days in front of him, was told to take on all his troops and leave no men behind for garrisons. Then Spragge with his men was sent by mistake to Kroonstad, instead of Winburg, with other troops going up in the general advance. Colville was not told to wait for him, consequently Spragge missed his connection. Colville had difficulty in forcing his way through without Spragge's cavalry, and Spragge was cut off separately before he could join Colville. These mistakes do not arise from force of circumstances, such as the difficulties of the country or the action of the enemy. Orders are given to a man to meet another, and that man gets orders to march on which prevent him being at the appointed place. There is no more excuse for that than for trains missing connection or being on the same line. The cause, I will not say the fault, is due to this. The control of the Army has been personal. Kitchener, instead of being used strictly as a chief of the staff, whose business it is to present everything in a finished condition to the Commander-in-Chief, who should work the staff as a machine, has been used as 'Bobs' Handy Man.' He has been sent tearing off to different points on the line of communications, hustled about wherever the local situation required to be grappled with, and meanwhile the chief of the staff's department has been handed over to General Kelly, and, not through any fault of either officer, the machine did not work smoothly. Imagine a man of great energy but no special knowledge going down to your office and saying to your colleagues: 'Come along, we will get the paper out.' It might come out, but there would be a muddle. I will not say that the Army has not gained as well as lost by the fact that the chief of the staff's department has practically been in abeyance.

Are we to infer that Colville was sent home in connection with this incident, or that Mr. Churchill thinks so? Of the energy and activity of Lord Roberts he has the highest opinion. The outcome of the interview is that the Army must be kept up at full strength in South Africa, and that Lord Roberts is to have full support in doing as he pleases to put an end to the war.

BRONKHURST SPRUIT.

THE Boer leaders, who had been holding enthusiastic gatherings of the burghers at all the towns in the Transvaal in the summer and autumn of 1880, were encouraged in their hope of recovering their independence by the extraordinary reduction of the British garrison in the Transvaal after the Zulu War, and the precipitate march to the Cape seaports of the regiments which had fought at Ulundi. Lord Wolseley had obeyed the orders of the home Government to send the troops back, and they were marched through Natal and embarked as fast as ships could be found to take them, in spite of the ominous agitation against the British rule which was solely dependent on military force in the Transvaal. The Boers had listened to Lord Wolseley's emphatic assurances that the British flag should wave over the Transvaal as long as the sun rose over it and its rivers ran to the sea, but they looked about and could see no trace of the power that was to make good his words. They had been promised that the Raad should be summoned in due course. They had declared by formal resolutions at crowded public meetings that they would pay no taxes till their national assembly had been called to take the place of the military government of the country by British officers, and at last the burghers had openly resisted the attempt to seize the property of one of the recalcitrants at Potchefstroom; and Colonel Lanyon, who was acting Governor at Pretoria, was brought face to face with something very like a national rebellion. The language at the meetings was menacing—the Boers went in armed bodies all over the country and the group of politicians and journalists at the capital waxed jubilant, for the British authorities seemed helpless. At last it came to open rebellion. The authorities at Pretoria resolved to call in a detachment of the 94th Regiment (headquarters and four or five companies), under Colonel Phillip Anstruther, from Middelburg, and Colonel Bellairs, Adjutant-General, sent the necessary order, followed by a caution that his march might be opposed by the Boers. It is right to say that there is, we believe, no evidence that Colonel Anstruther received the warning. At all events the gallant officer—and all who knew him will agree that no one better deserved the customary adjective than he did—took no precautions against attack probably because he shared the general conviction from Lanyon down that the Boers meant only tall talk. He marched in a long column of waggons, with women, children, and baggage, over the rolling veldt, the colonel and officers riding at the head of it out of the dust in the good old-fashioned way, till they came to the deep valley in which the spruit runs, and saw before them 400 or 500 Boers on horseback. One of these spurred out of the van to meet the column, and informed Colonel Anstruther that he must halt, as the Boer Government would not permit them to proceed to Pretoria. Colonel Anstruther replied that he had received his orders and must obey them, and the Boer, giving him, it is said, five minutes to retire, rejoined the commando, whilst the colonel and his officers ordered the troops to form front in all haste; but, as they did so, the Boers opened fire with deadly effect on officers and men, and in a few minutes the ground was covered with the dead, the dying, and the wounded, and the prisoners of the gallant 94th. It is only just to say that after this sanguinary attack the Boers, as if touched with pity for the wounded, treated them with great humanity, and paid them every attention in their power. One of the medical officers who attended on Colonel Anstruther—Surgeon-Colonel Comerford, now in charge at Dover—stated that the family of Pretorius, who lived near, sent eggs, milk, jelly and every luxury they could provide for him every day, and that generally the population around behaved with much kindness to wounded and captives. And now Lord Roberts has seen that the graves of the dead have been respected, and Bronkhurst Spruit, after nearly twenty years of obscurity, emerges into the world of telegrams and war correspondence.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN IMBROGLIO.

IT may be assumed as a certainty that if in the summer of 1899 the Government could have had the least idea that Great Britain would be called upon to play a part worthy of her in the Concert of the Great Powers in dealing with the appalling position of China to-day they would have dulcified somewhat the masterful dialectics of Mr. Chamberlain which have led to the South African imbroglio that now engages the attention of Lord Roberts and 200,000 British soldiers. We are not ready to cry "Perish India" yet. A South African confederacy with diamonds and gold mines and a railroad from Cape Town to the Nile via Rhodesia, the Equatorial Lakes, Soudan, &c., with Mr. Rhodes as pro-Consul, may be a very potent possibility, but whatever it might become we doubt very much—rather we do not doubt at all—that, as compared to the possession of India as an element of Imperial greatness, strength and dignity, and as a factor in the aggregate of the prestige which is enjoyed by Great Britain in her relations with the great Powers and in her influence in the East, it is of small value. It is of the utmost consequence to bring to an end this protracted guerilla in the late territories of the Dutch Republics. No matter how quickly and how completely the resistance of the Boers may be overcome to-day, the war has lasted too long.

Army Notes.

The relief of Kumasi proves what organisation, resource, and determination may accomplish in the most unfavourable circumstances. By the same road as that traversed by Sir Frederick Hodgson and Major Morris in their dash for the coast, Colonel Willcocks led his West African force, arriving at the capital on the very day on which he had promised that relief should come. The march was terribly trying, inasmuch as the rains were incessant, and the state of the roads through the jungle "indescribable." The expedition has, however, brought out the best qualities of our native troops, and demonstrated the value of the West African Frontier Force, hitherto an unknown quantity. Consisting for the most part of Yorubas, doubts were expressed in some quarters as to whether it would have the staying power necessary to success. Fortunately the Yorubas have completely justified their leader's confidence, in them. This is as satisfactory from the Imperial as it is from the local point of view, for the simple reason that the burden of most wars in the region must be borne by troops raised on the spot. That the relief of Kumasi should have been accomplished without the aid of a single white regiment was a triumph, the credit for which is largely due to the British officers. Colonel Willcocks' account of the final operations is interesting reading, and shows at once how critical the situation was. The troops cheered lustily, we are told, when within 300 yards of the fort, but no response was heard from the garrison, and no flag was seen. The dreadful thought that the column had arrived too late passed through all minds, but on turning a bend in the road Colonel Willcocks caught sight of Captain Bishop, Mr. Ralph, and Dr. Hay, the only three Europeans in the fort, advancing to meet him. It was then seen that the work of the column was crowned with success, and loud cheers for the Queen were given. When these were over, the troops also cheered their successful commander. The force was unable to rest owing to the horrible insanitary conditions obtaining all round the fort. The whole force had, therefore, to be employed in cutting down the bush and burying the dead bodies. Owing to the entire absence of local supplies, both officers and men were placed on half rations, but no complaint was heard, all ranks being determined to do their utmost for their popular commander, who is said to be beloved by all. The story is a pleasing one, but regret will be felt that the gallant Colonel Burroughs was prevented by his wound from taking part in the actual relief. The part he has played ought not to be overlooked. Were the public eye not fixed in other parts of the world, our achievements in Ashanti would be a theme of general interest. As it is, Colonel Willcocks and his subordinates will not go unrewarded, indeed the gallant leader of the expedition has already received a well-earned acknowledgment by being promoted to the rank of colonel for service in the field. The very fact that the weak and enfeebled garrison of Kumasi was not attacked by the Ashantis, and that the return march of the relief column to Bekwai was performed without loss, seems to argue that the back of the rebellion is broken. Perhaps the story of the Yorubas' bayonet charge may assist the process of pacification. At any rate, thanks to Colonel Willcocks and Burroughs, immediate anxiety for British supremacy in Ashanti is at an end for the time.

The special Royal Commission, appointed for the purpose of investigating the charges against the hospital arrangements in South Africa, met for the first time on Tuesday, when Lord Justice Romer explained the course of procedure which it is proposed to adopt. It has been insinuated that some witnesses, "humble people in Government employ," may be deterred from giving trustworthy evidence for fear that they may be affected injuriously. On this point, however, the assurance of Sir Robert Romer should remove all doubts, for it has been arranged that any person who may be nervous as to the consequences of speaking freely shall be allowed to appear privately before the Commission, and the names of witnesses in this category shall not afterwards be published. The principal witness on Tuesday was General Sir Henry Brackenbury, who as Director-General of Ordnance, expressed the opinion that "the reserve of hospital equipment previous to the outbreak of the war was totally inadequate." General Brackenbury did not attempt to disguise the fact that he had experienced much difficulty in providing all the equipment required when suddenly called upon, owing to the delay in obtaining articles which were wanted from the different trades concerned. At the sitting on Wednesday Sir Howard Vincent, who was recently in South Africa as an independent witness of the operations of the campaign, Mr. Watson Cheyne, the well-known surgeon, and Trooper Morgan, City Imperial Volunteers Mounted Infantry, all speaking from personal experience, stated that the hospital arrangements at the front were the best it was possible to make in the circumstances; that there were no complaints from either officers or men; and that any inconveniences suffered were such as were inseparable from a campaign of this character. Lord Justice Romer and his colleagues will sail for the Cape on Saturday next, the 4th proximo.

One of the most pressing questions with which the military authorities will have to deal when the war in South Africa comes to an end will be that of the education and training of staff officers. We are not among those who hold that because an officer has passed through the Staff College he is therefore unfitted for high command. At the same time we are bound to admit that in South Africa many of the commanders who have come prominently to the front have not graduated at Camberley. It would be in the highest degree unfair, however, to contend, as some do, that the Staff College has produced no shining lights; for Lieut.-Generals Sir Francis Clery, Kelly-Kenny, and Hildyard, Major-Generals G. Barton, FitzRoy Hart, R. E. Allen, and E. T. H. Hutton, all possess its certificate, and it can scarcely be said that all these have failed. Nevertheless, the fact remains, there is a feeling in the Service as well as out of it, that the Staff College course is not sufficiently practical, and it will be necessary for changes to be introduced if only to satisfy public opinion. An article appears in this month's United Service Magazine, entitled "The Staff of the British Army," which deals with this matter. The writer is an officer of considerable eminence in his profession, who has been with the Army in the field in South Africa since October last, and he certainly deserves to be heard. He signs himself "An Outsider." His verdict, briefly summarised, is that the beginning, the middle, and the end of the whole matter, is the bad system under which the staff of the British Army is selected. "An Outsider" does not go in for any drastic reforms; for instance, he is opposed to those who would sweep away the Staff College altogether. The college and the system of training there are held to be of great advantage, though the latter might be much improved. What "An Outsider" does object to is the competition for entrance. The effect of this, he maintains, is to bring forward the man with money, as he only can stand the racket of an expensive preparation. This he would alter. He favours the idea of a system of entrance by seniority of qualification, and a rigorous rejection of doubtful students by the commandant of the college so that none but really competent men would have a chance of getting on to the staff. The writer closes his article with these words:—

"During the course of study at the Staff College merit is already determined according to the intelligence displayed in appreciating the lessons taught by incidents in military history, rather than by the accuracy with which the positions of particular units at particular hours are remembered. Why should not the same system be applied to the entrance examination? What we need is to have staff officers who have shown their ability to draw deductions from military history, rather than those who can recall such unimportant details as naming the units or commanders at whose expense the various lessons have been learned."

There is, of course, much to be said in favour of the views here put forward, but we doubt the wisdom of extending the system of selection unduly. Already the number of officers selected is large enough and it is often difficult to know exactly on what principle the choice is made. An increase of the selected candidates would not tend, we believe, to promote the best interests of the college, and certainly it would not raise the standard of its graduates. Nor are we quite sure that it would be wise to place too much power in the hands of one man so long as human nature is what it is. For instance, suppose an officer of influence were selected for the college. He would have to be a very strong commandant indeed who would sign his professional death warrant. Reforms are much needed, no doubt, in our system of training for the staff, but we question very much whether the proposals of the writer in the United Service Magazine, if adopted, would tend in the long run to make matters better than they are.

Mr. Wyndham, in explaining the Supplementary Army Estimate for eleven and a-half millions last night, dwelt on the financial rather than the military aspect of the South Africa War. As the Under-Secretary for War truly remarked, this is not the time to discuss the tactics of our generals in the field, and still less is it the time to discuss the question of a general reorganisation of our Army system whilst the men best fitted to speak on the subject are away in South Africa. Some of the financial aspects of the war dealt with by Mr. Wyndham were, however, decidedly interesting. Of the eleven and a-half millions now asked for by the Government eight and a-half only is for purposes connected with the war, the remainder being for the expeditionary force in China and other purposes. Of the eight and a-half millions for South Africa £2,650,000 is for bringing the troops back to England and for sending the Indian and Colonial contingents to their homes. A substantial sum is also required for the garrison which it will be necessary, for a time at least, to keep in South Africa. The strength of this Mr. Wyndham put at 45,000 men, 15,000 of whom will, it is hoped, be made up of Militia and Reserve men, who will be encouraged to settle in the country. Then there will be the usual gratuities—£5 per man and officers in proportion—and other terminal charges. At the close of his speech Mr. Wyndham made the interesting announcement that the War Office contemplated an expenditure of £4,692,711 for reserves of stores. This expenditure will be spread over a period of three years, but the policy of increasing such reserves is to be initiated immediately.

Mr. Wyndham promised last week to drop the sub-section of the Volunteers Bill under which special service corps were to be formed by men willing to give service abroad. We compared the Bill as thus altered to the play of "Hamlet" with Hamlet omitted. When the measure again came up for consideration in the House on Monday, an attempt was made to strike out the Ghost as well. Captain Sinclair moved the omission of the first clause, which, in substitution for the old proviso under which Volunteers can only be called up in the event of "actual or apprehended invasion of any part of the United Kingdom," sanctions their calling out in circumstances amounting to "imminent national danger or great emergency." We were surprised to find Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman joining those who opposed this clause. As he himself admitted, he had offered no objection to it on the earlier stages of the Bill, and as Mr. Wyndham said his opposition was very much in the nature of a right about face, Sir Henry contended that the distinction that Volunteers were not to be called upon for actual military service except under the threat of immediate invasion was not a mere phantom maintained to make a difference between them and the Regular Army. It rested, he argued, upon this. What would happen if there was an actual or immediately impending invasion? All the business of the country would come to a standstill, and those men who were Volunteers would be free without loss of professional or business position to take part in the discharge of their duties. But as Mr. Wyndham pointed out, no War Office, after any amount of reorganisation, could turn the Volunteers into a field army, with transport and supplies, in less than two or three weeks. The main point, too, still remains, and no one who spoke in the debate on Monday night made any attempt to reply to it. Are we to declare to the whole world by proclamation at a time, it may be, when diplomacy is at its last gasp, that we apprehend invasion? Under the first clause of the Volunteers Bill this hitherto necessary preliminary to the calling out of the Volunteers will be swept away, and we are glad that the House of Commons rejected the proposal to eliminate it from the measure, though it is difficult to follow the arguments of the objectors to progress.

Lord Bray put a long and categorical question to the Secretary of State for War in the House of Lords on Thursday on the subject of the Government's proposals with regard to the Militia. Lord Lansdowne stated some time back that a scheme was before the Government under which the whole of the Constitutional force would be invited to accept a larger liability for service. In consideration of their assuming that liability, the bounty would, of course, be largely increased, and the Militia Reserve would be done away with altogether, the whole force accepting the same liability as that which the Militia Reserve now serve under. The details of a far-reaching scheme of this kind cannot be settled in a day, and it was not to be expected that Lord Lansdowne would be able to satisfy the curiosity evinced by Lord Bray. He contented himself for the most part with reiterating the views he expressed on the second reading of Lord Wemyss's Ballot Bill. The particulars he gave, however, in answer to Lord Bray's request for information as to how the existing system had worked when it became desirable to send out Militia battalions to South Africa sufficiently indicated the inconvenience of the present arrangement. Thirty Militia battalions, Lord Lansdowne stated, had been sent out to South Africa, and in addition to these four battalions had gone to the Mediterranean and one had gone to St. Helena. Of this number thirteen had volunteered without being approached at all by the War Office, and before any intimation had been sent to them that their services if offered would be acceptable. In some of the other battalions a certain number of individual men had refused to go out on foreign service, whilst five battalions had refused altogether. In addition to the battalions that had gone out, forty other battalions had volunteered without being approached by the War Office, though the Commander-in-Chief, in the exercise of the discretion vested in him, had not availed himself of their services. Still, although the Militia generally seem only too anxious and willing to go on service abroad, there is always an inconvenient uncertainty under existing conditions as to what battalions would be available, and this question of volunteering would be done away with under the scheme the War Office have in view.

Mr. Balfour's statement in the House on Thursday that the Commission of Inquiry into the South Africa hospital trouble would be a Royal Commission is decidedly satisfactory. A Royal Commission will bring the witnesses under the provisions of the Act for the protection of witnesses, and that is avowedly the reason for making the investigation take that form. Mr. Balfour was scarcely reasonable in repudiating with so much warmth the suggestion that any such protection was necessary. It is a recognised thing that professional witnesses need protection from the displeasure of those affected by their evidence. Lord Justice Romer acknowledged this when he said in opening the Commission, that if any of the witnesses preferred, their evidence could be taken in camera. It is to be hoped that this will not now be found necessary, for it is certain that it would materially affect the public interest in the proceedings, and impair that general acceptance of its report that is desirable.

Colonel Long intends to call attention in the House on Tuesday to what he refers to as the wholesale supersession of Artillery subalterns by those in other branches of the services. He will ask Mr. Wyndham whether it is a fact that according to the establishment the proportion of first lieutenants to second lieutenants in the Cavalry at home is eight to six, and in the Infantry eight to four. He will further submit for Mr. Wyndham's consideration that in the Colonies the numbers are equal and that in India the proportion is nine to eight, while in the Artillery it is now about 159 to 362 in the mounted section, and ninety-eight to 348 in the garrison. Colonel Long intends to ask Mr. Wyndham to remedy this disproportion, his own suggestion being the substitution of a fixed establishment of first lieutenants in the Artillery, as was formerly the case.

The Patriotic Fund Commissioners have appointed a sub-committee of their body, consisting of Lord Rothschild, Lord Davey, Lord Welby, Lord Pirbright, the Lord Mayor, Mr. William Lidderdale, Sir George Hayter Chubb, and Sir Francis Mowat, to consider how the recommendations of the War Relief Funds Committee, presided over by Lord Justice Henn Collins, can be carried out. The Commissioners are to be congratulated on their prompt action, which will go a long way to ease the public mind. What Lord Justice Collins's committee has urged most strongly is the desirability of having a central administrative body to deal with all the war funds, so as to prevent overlapping and waste. This central body would be assisted by the various local committees, and, in a measure, control expenditure for the benefit alike of subscribers to the several funds and the objects of their charity. One of the great benefits, however, which it is hoped will result from the committee's inquiry is the reform of the Royal Patriotic Fund. There can be no disputing that of late years this fund has lost to a great extent the confidence of the public. It is recognised that the system of the Royal Patriotic Fund is in some respects admirable. At the same time Sir Henn Collins's committee have desired to record their opinion that unless steps are taken to make the fund at once "more businesslike and more elastic," public confidence will never be restored, and thus the only central fund in the country for the permanent relief of the widows and orphans of soldiers and sailors will cease to exist. This, the committee say truly, would be "a great public misfortune."

The Service members are not quite satisfied with the conditions laid down in the cases of non-commissioned officers who are to be recommended for commissions. Commanding officers of cavalry and infantry units in South Africa have been asked to send in the names of suitable candidates for promotion, on the scale of two to each battalion, but those recommended must be unmarried, and not over twenty-five years of age. These conditions, it is contended, will debar many non-commissioned officers, who are otherwise eligible from obtaining commissions. It is held that injustice may be done in some instances if any such hard-and-fast conditions are imposed, and that it would be fairer and better, in all the circumstances, to leave more discretion in the hands of commanding officers. In times of peace it may be reasonable enough to have an age limit of qualification; but after a campaign, where cases of individual gallantry may have been numerous, it certainly does seem unfair to disqualify good soldiers for promotion from considerations of age.

The War Office does not favour the idea of giving Line commissions to Militia subalterns under the age of twenty. And there is much undoubtedly to be said in favour of the official view. As Mr. Wyndham explained the other night in the House of Commons, the commanding officer of every Militia battalion has been asked to recommend two of his officers for commissions in the Line, provided they are between the ages of twenty and thirty and unmarried; and in many cases officers attached to Line battalions in South Africa have been recommended and given commissions. Candidates for direct commissions if taken below the age of twenty would unfairly supersede the cadets at the Royal Military College and candidates who present themselves for the Militia examination. They would also be less fitted to stand hardships in the field than older men. Any Militia officer may be given a Line commission for distinguished service, irrespective of age.

The influence of the war upon Canada is marked and significant. Racial rivalry is not altogether extinguished, but a spirit of great loyalty prevails throughout the Dominion. The Citizen, of Ottawa, remarks that a notable effect has been what it calls the elevation of the flag. Never was the Union Jack so much in evidence in Ottawa as this year, and the same appears to be true of other sections of the Dominion. "Never did it mean so much to our people, and never were they more ready to stand for its defence. This is not a sign of weakness, nor, necessarily, of simple emotionalism. True, the feelings have been deeply stirred by witnessing the sights of men marching to war, and receiving reports of battle in which our brothers and sons have fallen, and we have seen with quickened vision in the flag the emblem of those principles for which we contend in the halls of legislation, and, if need be, on the field of blood, and we love it—the dear old flag." Our contemporary suggests that it would be appropriate to establish a flag-day in the Dominion which should give the occasion of a patriotic demonstration. "The country could lose nothing, but gain much by such a ceremony."

The rivalry between Russia and this country has been committed to the discussion of a "symposium" in the new number of the North American Review. M. Demetrius Boulger thinks that the rivalry must soon be subjected to "the stern arbitrament of war." The conflict, says this aggressive gentleman, has been inevitable for sixty years, and now is the moment to bring it to an issue, and to have recourse to the remedy of war as an insurance against an inevitable and manifest danger. He goes so far as to say that "the reckless and defiant proceedings of Russia" leave England no honourable choice. She must plunge straightway into "this historic and earth-shaking struggle." For our part, we do not see this necessity, and we deprecate such fire-eating Chauvinism. A "Diplomat" does not go quite so far, although he evidently thinks that the struggle is coming. "Land an Englishman on the diplomatic stage, and nine times in ten he is bound to play his part poorly. His education and disposition rarely make him a social success, except among his congeners." The Russian is differently equipped, and endowed with a natural flexibility of character which is wonderful and enables him to adapt himself to any circumstances, and the Russian diplomatic service is one of the most formidable machines in existence. Sir Richard Temple, who closes the "symposium," surveys the situation of Great Britain and Asia, and declares that from our "imperial watchtower" we must be perpetually on the look-out to descry, discern, and detect the beginnings of future trouble. Unlike Mr. Boulger, he thinks that whether the present is a fitting time for other Powers to try any contest with Britain is a question for them to determine. We are disposed to say that the present moment is one in which English and Russians should work loyally together, and they can scarcely do so if suspicion is raised by such utterances as those of Mr. Boulger and his friends.

The Queen hopes to pay two visits to the sick and wounded soldiers at Netley before the Court moves to Balmoral.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and the Duke of Cambridge visited the wounded soldiers of the Household Brigade at the Golders Hill Convalescent Home, Hampstead, on Tuesday afternoon. A party of specially invited visitors consisted of thirty-three men of the Canadian contingent, invalided from the front, who were under the charge of Major Boyce Thompson, of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada. On arriving at the home at about 4.30, their Royal Highnesses were received by Major-Generals Trotter, the Hon. Herbert Eaton, and Lord Falmouth. The home has now thirty patients. Brief particulars of the nature of the wounds or the sickness of each man were given to the Royal visitors by General Eaton and Dr. Jessop, and kind and sympathetic words were spoken to all. The Princess accepted as a present a frame made by one of the men, and the Prince of Wales requested General Eaton to supply every man now in the Home, and those who may yet come during the hot weather, with straw hats on his behalf. The Royal party took their departure amid hearty cheering shortly before six o'clock.

The Duke of Albany has been created Lieutenant à la suite in the 9th Regiment of Hussars of the Prussian Army.

At the Croydon Town Council, on Monday, the Mayor, Councillor Nathaniel Page, proposed that the freedom of the borough should be conferred on Lord Roberts, who, in his early life, was for some time associated with the town. The proposition was carried unanimously amid much enthusiasm.

The Lord-Lieutenant of Devon has inaugurated a movement to give a county reception and present a testimonial to General Sir Redvers Buller, V.C., on his return from South Africa. Among those who have joined the committee are Earl Fortescue, the Earl of Iddesleigh, the Hon. Mark Rolle, Sir John Shelley, of Shobrooke Park, Sir Robert White Thomson, Lord Poltimore, and the High Sheriff of Devon. Sir Redvers Buller was, on a previous occasion, the recipient of a magnificent trophy, the gift of his native county.

There are still living eight officers who received the Victoria Cross for services with the Army in the Crimea, viz.:—Generals Sir Collingwood Dickson, R.A. (rank when gazetted in 1857 Colonel), and Sir Hugh Rowlands (Brevet-Major 41st Foot); Major-Generals C. M. Dixon, R.A. (Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel), T. de C. Hamilton (Captain 68th Foot), and Luke O'Connor (Lieut. 23rd Foot); Colonel Lord Wantage (Brevet-Major Scots Fusilier Guards); Surgeon-Major T. E. Hale (Assistant Surgeon 7th Foot); and Assistant-Surgeon H. T. Sylvester (Assistant-Surgeon 23rd Foot).

Lieut.-General Lord William Seymour has arrived in England from Halifax, N.S., on leave.

Lieut.-General A. H. L. Fox-Pitt-Rivers, of 4, Grosvenor Gardens, and Rushmore, Wilts, who died on May 4, gave his museum at Farnham and certain grounds in Hants, Wilts, and Dorset, and £300 per annum for the keeping up thereof, to his eldest son Alexander Edward. The residue of his personal estate he left to his eldest son. He devised his estates in Wilts, Dorset, and Hants to his eldest son for life, with remainder to his first and other sons, according to seniority in tail male, but charged with the payment of £2,000 per annum to his wife during her widowhood, or of £1,000 in the event of her re-marriage, and, during the life of his wife, of £450 per annum to his son William Augustus; and £400 per annum to each of his sons St. George William, Lionel Charles, and Douglas Henry, and on trust for his son Arthur Algernon. On the decease of Mrs. Fox-Pitt-Rivers portions are to be raised of £8,000 for his son William Augustus, £13,300 each for his sons Lionel Charles, Douglas Henry, and St. George William, £13,300 on trust for his son Arthur Algernon, and £3,500 on trust for his daughter, Mrs. Ursula Katherine Scott, but his said children are to bring into account any sums appointed to them under the marriage settlement of their parents. The value of the estate has been sworn at £414,586 7s. 6d., with net personalty of £110,022 5s. 8d., by the executor, Mr. William Charles Scott, of Thorpe, near Chertsey.

Lieut.-General Sir Henry Colville has arrived in England from South Africa on the break up of his command.

Major-General G. Cox will attain the limit of age on the 31st prox. and be placed on the Retired List.

Major-General H. D. Slade, of 54, Beaumont Street, Portland Place, formerly of the 1st Dragoon Guards, who died on June 15, aged seventy-six years, appointed as executors his brother the Rev. George FitzClarence Slade, of Buckland Rectory, Betchworth, to whom he bequeathed £100, and his great nephew, Basil Alfred Slade, to whom he bequeathed £1,000. He bequeathed to his nieces Margaret Philippa Rose Slade and Alice Mary Slade £1,000 each; to his sister Matilda Gertrude Slade £1,000 and his books, pictures, ornaments and furniture; to his sister Sophia Burton, £100; to Genevieve Marshall, £500; and to his servant, George Blackmore, £100. General Slade left to his nephew, Captain Edmond John Warr Slade, £1,000, his cottage at Hill Tarrant, and the income for life of a sum of £12,500 which, subject to Captain Slade's life interest, is to be in trust for the person entitled to the Slade baronetcy; and he bequeathed to his nephew, Major-General Frederick George Slade, C.B., his plate and plated articles, and the income for life of a sum of £12,500, which subject to his life interest is to be in trust for the person entitled to the Slade baronetcy. The late General Slade's estate has been valued at £50,271 9s. 2d. gross and £47,065 19s. 6d. net. His nephew, Major-General Frederick George Slade, is the residuary legatee.

Major-General F. S. Russell, M.P., has gone to Germany to take a course of waters, and has paired for the remainder of the session.

There seems to be much doubt as to the constitution of the cavalry of the Natal Field Force under Sir Redvers Buller, and the "Army List" unfortunately does not give very trustworthy information. We therefore give particulars which have reached us direct from the front:—

1st Cavalry Brigade.

Commanding.—Brigadier-Gen. J. F. Burn-Murdoch.
Brigade-Major.—Major H. W. G. Graham, D.S.O., 5th Lancers.
1st Royal Dragoons, 5th Dragoon Guards, 13th Hussars.

2nd Cavalry Brigade.

Commanding.—Major-Gen. J. F. Brocklehurst, M.V.O.
Brigade-Major.—Major G. P. Wyndham, 16th Lancers.
5th Lancers, 18th Hussars, 19th Hussars.

3rd Mounted Brigade.

Commanding.—Major-Gen. Earl of Dundonald, C.B., M.V.O.
Brigade-Major.—Major W. S. Birdwood, 11th Bengal Lancers.

Lord Meath has sent us a copy of the correspondence which has passed between the Lads' Drill Association and the War Office on the subject of cadet corps and battalions. From the papers before us it appears that four suggestions were made, all with the object of rendering the training of the lads more thorough. The two most important were: (1) that one sergeant-instructor per cadet battalion should be allowed; and (2) that serviceable rifles should be allowed for full establishment. Lord Lansdowne has declined to concede any of the points, on the ground that they have all been considered by his predecessors in office. The argument hitherto put forward has been that these cadet battalions do not add a single effective soldier to our defensive forces. But as Lord Meath represents, with perfect truth, the cadet battalions are the indirect means of inducing a larger number of young men to join the Army, the 1st Cadet Battalion of the King's Royal Rifles, with an establishment of 500, having passed no fewer than 500 men into the Service in the last ten years, or ten per cent. annually. Lord Meath quotes the opinion of Lord Roberts, that "lads who have been efficiently trained would probable become quite as effective soldiers in an equally short space of time as would the Reserve men after they have been away from the colours for three years." The force of the official reason is quite beyond the comprehension of most thinking men. In the Navy lads are taken and specially trained for service; and it is admitted by everybody that the system produces the best results.

A cavalry officer serving in India expresses an unfavourable opinion of the change which has been ordered by the War Office in the abolition of the depot squadron, and as far as we understand his objection, he disapproves of the re-organization of cavalry regiments into four squadrons also. The melting-pot in Pall Mall is always ready for cavalry changes. We are threatened now with abolition of the lance and the sword in that much-vexed arm, apparently because the Boers live in a hilly and kopje-infested country.

It is impossible to exaggerate the good that will be done to the Army by the patriotic action of those large employers of labour who have made known their willingness to keep open the places filled by Army Reservists recalled to the colours for active service in South Africa. This generous recognition of the claims of the nation's defenders will go a long way to render service in the Army popular. Many a man has in the circumstances gone out with a light heart to fight his country's battles, feeling that his prospects for the future were not to be ruined by his response to the call of duty. The Reservists have come up admirably. This all are now ready to allow. It is only right, of course, that those who benefit most by the success of our arms in war should play their part in a crisis like that which the South African difficulty has produced. It is, nevertheless, gratifying to find that sympathy with the soldier has on the present occasion been so spontaneous and widespread. We trust, however, that generosity of feeling will be extended to Militiamen also who have joined their battalions for embodiment. They, too, are making great sacrifices in a moment of emergency. It would be cruelly wrong if they were in any way placed at a disadvantage, and we hope that those in administrative authority will make every endeavour to represent to employers of labour the necessity of placing them on the same footing as the Reservists. The Militia, we regret to say, has hitherto been a rather discredited force, but it has played its part splendidly whenever it has been called upon, and it is doing this now in a way which all must appreciate. The rank and file may suffer, however, considerably, and much injury may be done to the Service as a whole, unless the taxpayers are brought to recognise that the constitutional force has a claim on their gratitude. It would be well if commanding officers could take combined action, so as to prevent misunderstanding from the period of embodiment expires, for it is evident from the letters we have received that some of them fear the effects of an influx of time expired soldiers on the labour market.

Natal Carabineers, Natal Mounted Rifles, Border Mounted Rifles, Umvoti Mounted Rifles, Battery Natal Field Artillery, two Hotchkiss guns.—Brigadier-Gen. Dartnell, C.M.G., attached to 3rd Mounted Brigade.

Brigadier-General H. B. McCall, late King's Royal Rifles, commanding at Peshawur, will take over the next command at Bangalore.

Brigadier-General T. C. Porter having broken his collar bone, Brigadier-General J. R. P. Gordon has taken over his brigade at the Cape, Lieut.-Colonel M. O. Little, 9th Lancers, replacing him.

The command of the 45th Regimental District, Derby, will fall vacant on August 28, when Colonel J. G. Sparkes completes his term.

Two colonels on the Active List attain the limit of age next month, viz., Colonel H. L. Dundas, temporary Brigadier-General, commanding the Infantry Brigade at Gibraltar, on August 1, and Colonel H. D. Browne, half-pay, lately in command of the Rifle Depot, on August 9.

Two colonels of the Indian Staff Corps come under the terms of the age disqualification rule next month, viz., Colonels E. A. Money, C.B., on August 16, and W. V. Ellis on August 25.

Colonel A. Wilkinson, lately commanding the 19th Regimental District, is shown in the "Army List," in the return of officers on half-pay. As Colonel Wilkinson has been for some weeks A.A.G. to Major-General T. A. Cooke, commanding the troops on Salisbury Plain, the "Army List" is clearly in error.

Colonel W. Pitt retains his appointment as Commanding R.E., South Aldershot Sub-District, as a supernumerary until further orders.

Colonels G. F. Guyon, 7th-57th Regimental District, and T. E. Verner, 10th Regimental District, have been selected to command brigades at Aldershot, temporarily, as Major-Generals on the Staff.

Colonel E. H. Corse-Scott, half-pay, lately commanding the 2nd Batn. Royal Warwickshire Regiment, has retired voluntarily on pension.

Colonel E. Nesbitt will complete his five years in command of the 6th Regimental District at Warwick on Monday next, when Colonel J. C. R. Glasgow, late of the Suffolk Regiment, will succeed him.

Colonel J. Drummond Lambert, C.B., late Director-General A.V.D., has had printed for private circulation among his friends in South Africa a most useful pamphlet on local horse-sickness. Having served in South Africa with the 17th Lancers in the Zulu Campaign, and afterwards as P.V.O. during the operations of 1881, Colonel Lambert recognises the necessity of ordinary care being taken by the soldier of his horse. It is with a view to helping officers to adopt precautionary measures against disease that the brochure has been put together. It is written in such simple language that all who read must follow the author's sound and practical reasoning, holding as he does that much of the disease is preventable if only officers will take care to see that ordinary precautions are taken in the unhealthy season.

Those who complain that no honours have yet been bestowed upon Colonel Mahon and Lieut.-Colonel Plumer, the relievers of Mafeking, seem to forget that Lieut.-General French, who relieved Kimberley, was only given the rank of Major-General, which he was about to obtain by seniority; that he held the rank of Lieut.-General at the time Kimberley was relieved; and that his reward, gazetted on February 21 last, was, in truth, no reward at all. Even Sir George White has received no recognition yet from the military authorities. Colonel Mahon is a most gallant and capable leader. This all the world knows, but it was only on March 14 that he was promoted a Brevet-Colonel for his services in connection with the defeat of the Khalifa. Lieut.-Colonel Plumer, on the other hand, is but a Brevet Lieut.-Colonel, having held that rank since May, 1897. It would be difficult perhaps to promote one officer and not recognise others, so for the moment nothing is to be done. It must not be supposed, however, that these twodeserving officers are to be overlooked, for they will not.

Colonel J. Willcocks, C.M.G., D.S.O., has been promoted to the brevet rank of Colonel in the Army in recognition of his services in connection with the relief of Kumasi. Colonel Willcocks writes, in his despatch to the Colonial Office from Bekwai, dated the 20th inst.:—

"Amongst those whom I shall bring to notice, the following were conspicuous on July 15: Major Hensstock, West India Regiment, Chief of the Staff; Major Wilkinson, 1st Northumberland Fusiliers; Captains Holford, 7th Hussars, D.A.A.G.; M'Clinck, R.E., West African Frontier Force, D.A.A.G.; Eden, 1st Batn. Oxford Light Infantry, W.A.F.F.; Wright, 1st Batn. Manchester Regiment, W.A.F.F.; Lieuts. Phillips, R.A., W.A.F.F.; Edwards, Sierra Leone Police Force; Cartwright, 1st Batn. Durham Light Infantry, West African Regiment; Sergeant-Major Bosher, R.A., W.A.F.F.; Sergeant Farini, 1st Batn. Durham Light Infantry, W.A.F.F. Dr. M'Dowell, P.M.O., has been invaluable. Of the civil officers attached to force I specially commend Haddon-Smith, Gold Coast Civil Service, who has served in every capacity as soldier and civilian since the force left Cape Coast."

Colonel W. B. Wade, A.P.D., Chief Paymaster in South Africa, who would have been placed on the retired list for age on the 11th inst., is retained as a supernumerary of his rank.

Colonels F. S. Gwatkin, A.A.G., Peshawur, E. E. N. Lawford, 1st Madras Lancers, and C. H. Des Vœux, 36th Sikhs, have been appointed officiating Colonels on the Staff to command stations in India.

Colonel A. B. Morgan, C.B., retired list, late Norfolk Regiment, and Lieut.-Colonel W. H. Wilson, late Oxfordshire Light Infantry, are employed as Staff Officers for Instruction with the Militia embodied at Salisbury Plain.

Colonel H. Byrne, 21st Middlesex (Finsbury) Volunteer Rifles, has been permitted to retain his appointment till March, 1902.

Colonel A. Broadwood, commanding the Royal Guards Reserve Regiment, will be Field Officer in Brigade Waiting next month.

Colonel G. A. W. Forrest, commandant of the Duke of York's School, Chelsea, has received an extension of his appointment up to September, 1903.

The command of five regimental units should fall vacant next month, under the four years' rule, viz., the 10th Hussars, Lieut.-Colonel R. B. W. Fisher, on August 3; the 2nd Batn. Leinster Regiment, Colonel J. G. Glancy, on August 12; the 2nd Batn. Royal Scots, Colonel T. F. Ross, on August 14; the 2nd Batn. Royal West Kent Regiment, Lieut.-Colonel E. A. W. Grove, on August 19; and the 2nd Batn. Hampshire Regiment, Lieut.-Colonel W. E. Briggs, on August 29.

Lieut.-Colonel R. Owen, half-pay, late 21st Lancers, who was Military Secretary to Lord Sandhurst at Bombay, has been selected to fill the same position on the staff of Lord Northcote, Major the Hon. R. Leigh, 4th Dragoon Guards, who had been appointed, having elected to remain with his regiment.

Lieut.-Colonel B. R. Hawes, Royal Munster Fusiliers, who was promoted in February last in view of his assuming command of the new 3rd Batn., which it has since been decided not to proceed with the raising of, has now been provided for, he having been selected for the command of the 2nd Batn. Royal Irish Rifles, vacant by the death of Lieut.-Colonel Eagar.

Lieut.-Colonel H. Bower, commanding the Chinese Regiment, Wei-hai-Wei, has been appointed Military Governor, Tien-tsin City.

It is announced in the London Gazette that the Queen has been pleased to give licence and authority to the officers undermentioned that they may accept and wear the Insignia conferred by the Khedive of Egypt in recognition of their services in the Soudan during the year 1899:—

Osmanieh, 3rd Class.—Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. Collinson, C.B., Northamptonshire Regiment; Qrmr. (Hon. Lieut.-Col.) W. H. Drage, D.S.O., A.S.C.; Brevet Lieut.-Col. F. J. Nason, D.S.O., Scottish Rifles.

Medjidie, 3rd Class.—Brevet Lieut. - C. Fergusson, D.S.O., Grenadier Guards, and A. de S. McKerrill, Cameron Highlanders; Major R. H. Penton, D.S.O., R.A.M.C.; Brevet-Major E. A. Stanton, Oxfordshire Light Infantry.

Medjidie, 4th Class.—Capt. R. C. L. Battley, Essex Regiment, J. S. Liddell, R.E., and G. A. C. Webb, Royal Munster Fusiliers; Lieuts. M. E. Sowerby and W. R. G. Wollen, R.E.

Lieut.-Colonel J. McNamara, R.A.M.C., from Malta, is appointed to the Cork District as P.M.O., vice Colonel Riordan, retired.

Lieut.-Colonel (Captain) H. E. J. Brake, D.S.O., R.A., is en route to Accra in command of headquarters and half of the 2nd Batn. Central Africa Regiment, which was recently known as the British Central Africa Rifles. The men under Colonel Brake sailed from Berbera in the Dwarka on the 20th inst. for Accra.

Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel F. J. Maxse, D.S.O., Coldstream Guards, has been appointed Commissioner of Police, Pretoria, and is raising a force of 3,000 men by volunteers from the Colonial corps.

Sir Montagu Frederick Ommanney, late R.E., Permanent Under-Secretary for State for the Colonies, has succeeded Sir Edward Wingfield as Secretary of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. The staff of the Department of the Crown Agents for the Colonies have presented a service of plate to Sir Montagu Ommanney on his promotion, as a mark of their appreciation of his proverbial kindness and courtesy.

Captain F. M. Sandys-Lumsdaine, 2nd Batn. Highland Light Infantry, has been appointed a Brigade Major at Aldershot temporarily.

Captain H. J. Martin, 2nd Batn. East Lancashire Regiment, has been selected for the adjutancy of the 1st V.B. East Lancashire Regiment.

Lieutenants E. H. Phillips, R.A., and E. H. Monck-Mason, and D. F. McC. Morrough, Royal Munster Fusiliers, serving with the West African Fusiliers Force in the Niger Territories, arrived at Cape Coast Castle on the 3rd inst. in charge of 126 men and 33 carriers for service with the expedition to Kumasi.

Lieut. R. Clarke, District Officer, R.A., has been selected for the Adjutancy of the 1st Hampshire Volunteer Artillery, and Lieut. C. J. Troyte-Bullock, 1st Batn. Somersetshire Light Infantry, for that of the 2nd (East) Regiment of Jersey Militia.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, July 21.

Lord Roberts, in a despatch sent off from Pretoria at 1.15 p.m., announces that Lieut.-Col. Little, 9th Lancers, in temporary command of the 3rd Cavalry Brigade, came in contact near Lindley on the 19th inst. with the force under De Wet, which had forced its way through Sir A. Hunter's cordon. "Fighting lasted until dusk, when De Wet's force, being repulsed, broke up into two parties. Little's casualties were slight, and will be reported as soon as names are received. He buried five Boers, and took two dangerously wounded into his ambulance." Lord Roberts also said that "Hamilton and Mahon continued their march yesterday, practically unopposed. They found the country extremely difficult. Hamilton captured a few prisoners and four waggons."

The Royal Dublin Fusiliers to-day added to their excellent record of good work done in this campaign. The enemy made a determined attempt to destroy the post at railhead, 13 miles east of Heidelberg. They attacked it at daybreak with three guns and a "pom-pom," and by noon had completely surrounded us. The position was garrisoned by two companies Royal Dublin Fusiliers, 110 Royal Engineers, and 10 Yeomanry, the whole under the command of Major English, of the 2nd Batn. Royal Dublin Fusiliers. He telegraphed to Heidelberg when the attack commenced, and Gen. Hart started to his assistance with two guns, one "pom-pom," and 140 Marshall's Horse and Yeomanry. The Boers had, however, been beaten off before the reinforcements arrived, owing, Gen. Hart states, "to the skill with which Major English had fortified the position, his vigilant arrangement, and the good fighting qualities of the garrison." The Boers were seen burying their dead, and their ambulance was busy with the wounded.

The votes for the year's estimates were submitted to-day to the Cape Parliament. They amount in the gross to £5,446,808. The estimated cost of parolling and guarding the line of communications in Cape Colony during the war is put down at £50,710. There is an increase of £9,571 under the head of defences, while the votes under the head of railways, for Volunteers, and for the ammunition allowances, show an increase.

There was a reconnaissance near Bethlehem to-day, in which the Berkshire Yeomanry, Imperial Bushmen, and the 38th Field Battery took part. They encountered the enemy, who had taken up a strong position on a hill ten miles west. Considerable fighting ensued, but with no decisive result, our force being insufficient to drive the enemy from the hill. The Yeomanry took a kopje, but were obliged to retire at dusk. They lost an officer and nine men in the course of the retirement. The conduct of the troops is said to have been excellent.

Sunday, July 22.

Major-Gen. C. E. Knox transmitted from Kroonstad to Sir F. Forestier-Walker to-day a message which was despatched to the War Office at 9 p.m. In this it was stated that Major-Gen. Broadwood with 2nd Cavalry Brigade, had wired from Honing Spruit, to which place a special messenger had been sent, that he had followed Boer commando since July 16. "Had sharp fight at Palmietfontein, July 19. Prevented from pursuing laager by darkness. Eight dead Boers found. Reached Vaal Krantz to-day. Enemy doubled back through Paardekraal in the night. I shall march to-morrow to Rooodeval station. Send supplies for 3,000 men and horses, also any news of enemy's movement. Boer commando consists of 2,000 men and four guns, is accompanied by Steyn and both De Wets."

Immediately following Gen. Knox's despatch came one from Lieut.-Gen. Kelly-Kenny from Bloemfontein, to this effect:—"Railway line cut last night to the north of Honing Spruit. Supply train, with 100 Highlanders, captured by enemy. Report received this morning large force of the enemy moving on Honing Spruit Station. All communication with Pretoria cut off. 2nd and 3rd Cavalry Brigades are following up enemy."

Lord Roberts telegraphed from Pretoria:—"Methuen continued his march after the occupation of Heckpoort and engaged the enemy's rear guard near Zandsfontein on the 20th. Casualties, one man killed and one wounded. Early on Saturday he attacked the enemy again at Oliphant's Nek and completely discomfited them, inflicting heavy loss on them. Our casualties are reported to be slight. By these successes Potell have joined hands. Hunter reports that Bruce Hamilton secured yesterday a strong position on Spitz-Mounted Infantry. Our casualties: Killed: Three of the Camerons. Wounded: Capt. Keith Hamilton, Oxford Light Infantry (severely), head; Capt. Brown, Lieut. Stewart, both slightly; and 13 men Cameron Highlanders."

Monday, July 23.

Lord Roberts commenced a general advance eastward from Pretoria, the enemy evacuating their position on seeing that the British forces were moving against them.

Gen. Hunter attacked the Boer position in the hills south of Bethlehem to-day. Gen. Clements force was at Stabbert's Nek, Hunter's at Retief's Nek. After fighting all day the 2nd Batn. Black Watch at dusk captured a hill, one mile on Hunter's left flank, and was reinforced there by Remington's and Lovat's Scouts. The 1st Batn. Royal Sussex Regiment, after what is described as a very hard march during a particularly cold and rough night, joined Hunter, and made a bold attack on a hill which commands the Nek on the right. Gen. Hunter states that the attack was very strongly opposed and did not succeed, but that the Sussex men "behaved splendidly." The 1st Batn. Highland Light Infantry were compelled by heavy fire to retire from a steep hill which they tried to take by assault, the enemy being "entrenched and giving no target." Among casualties—about 50—that gallant soldier, Major Willshire, Black Watch, fell wounded through the abdomen, it is feared mortally.

Tuesday, July 24.

During the afternoon Gen. French's Cavalry and Gen. Hutton's Mounted Infantry engaged the enemy six miles south of Balmoral. The former made a wide turning movement round their left, and, on seeing their line of retreat threatened, the Boers broke and fled.

Lord Roberts telegraphed from Vander Merwe Railway Station:—"Railway and telegraph communication restored during last night. In the supply train captured by the enemy near Rooodeval were two officers and 200 men of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers; most of them were taken prisoners. Baden-Powell reports from Majato Pass on the 22nd, that Colonels Airey and Lussington, with only 450 men, drove 1,000 Boers from a very strong position and scattered them with considerable loss. Our casualties: Killed—Capt. Robinson, Royal Marines, and five men; wounded—nineteen men. We marched to-day to Bronkhorst Spruit, the place where the 94th Foot was attacked on Dec. 20, 1880. The graves of the officers and men who fell on that occasion are in very fair preservation, and now will be put into good order. Our march was unopposed, but both French's Cavalry and Hutton's Mounted Infantry, who are making a wide detour to our right, came across bodies of the enemy. These were driven back, leaving several dead and wounded behind them. A good many prisoners were also taken. We had only one casualty: Lieut. Ebsworth, 1st Australian Horse, who, I regret to say, was killed. Broadwood reports that he captured five of De Wet's waggons to-day, and was waiting at Vredfort until Little joined him."

Gen. Hunter telegraphed in the evening that he and Clements were in Brand Water Basin, and that Gens. Hector Macdonald and Bruce Hamilton were securely blocking Inguwooni and Golden Gat. The enemy had vacated Wit Nek. Letters published by the Times from Lieut.-Col. Schiel denying report of ill-treatment of Boer prisoners at St. Helena, and bearing testimony to the "kind and generous" behaviour of Cols. Leeffe and Evans.

Wednesday, July 25.

Lord Roberts's advancing force reached Balmoral, within 30 miles of Middleburgh, to-day.

A telegram from Lord Roberts's headquarters says:—"The Elswick battery (1st Northumberland Volunteer Artillery) has excited universal admiration. The gun is easily drawn by six horses, and is immeasurably superior to our field guns. The only question asked is why it was not sent out before."

Thursday, July 26.

Gen. Rundle stated to have taken Commando Nek, the enemy retiring before him to Fourisberg.

SOLDIERS IN THE FIELD: THEIR CLOTHES, FOOD, &c.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The experience gained in South Africa during the present war, to say nothing of that which happened at Aldershot only the other day, proves that, admirable as the private soldier is as a fighting machine, he is not so good as he might be if he were clothed and fed properly, and his duties more equally apportioned. The following suggestions are made in the hope that they may be fairly and impartially discussed.

(1) First as to his Clothes.—The soldier ought to have the very best that can be provided, and the very best need not by any means be the most expensive. His underwear ought all to be made of the most serviceable natural wool, not flannel, but natural wool underclothing carefully manufactured free from burr and all prickly substances. The working everyday uniform should be serge, specially manufactured so as to be waterproof and yet retain all the qualities of serge wool clothing. This is not impossible, as many manufacturers know. The most serviceable shape is no doubt the Norfolk jacket with inside (not outside) pockets, knee breeches, stockings, tan boots, and putties. There should be ventilating gussets under the armpits of the jacket and in the fork of the breeches. The colour would be best if it were khaki throughout. A Baden-Powell hat, instead of the ridiculous service cap now in use would complete his field uniform. His arms should consist of the very best magazine rifle, with adjustable short bayonet, which should be carried in a frog at the end of a bandolier capable of holding 100 rounds of ammunition, 50 in a tier. He ought to have a waterproof cloak of the very best quality, lined with wool, which should be carried for him as a rule in a supply waggon (of which more hereafter), and served out to him at night or in wet weather. He should carry no knapsack, only a haversack and water bottle, also khaki in colour. A complete change of clothing should be carried for him, with extra shirt, stockings, and boots in the supply waggon. This waggon should be built so as to combine lightness and speed, capable of being drawn over rough ground by four horses or six mules. It should be fitted with compartments to hold clothes, food, ammunition, and trenching tools. There should be one waggon for every section of a regiment.

(2) Food.—The first meal of the day should be a generous supply of oatmeal, properly boiled, into which a small quantity of treacle might be stirred while boiling. This, with brown bread and cocoa, would be the soldier's breakfast, and he should never be allowed to go without it. Each man, when going out for a day, whether for manoeuvres or actual fighting, ought to have served out to him three or four oatmeal biscuits, and as many bars of chocolate. His water-bottle should be filled with cold tea. He should never be allowed to drink water from wayside streams, unless the opportunity offers of filling up the water-bottles from absolutely pure spring water. Too much water is fatal to all men. The less a man drinks of anything the better for him. This habit of excessive drinking is difficult to overcome at first; but if men can be persuaded to forego the fancied pleasure of a long, cool drink till the work of the day is over, no men would fall out from heat apoplexy, and no men would suffer from thirst. When the day's work is done the men should have a good feed of stew, liberally supplied with all kinds of vegetables, the best meat that can be procured (none at all if good meat cannot be procured), with rice, peas, or lentils. Good brown bread should also be served out with this meal, and if possible one small glass of the very best whisky per man, to be taken with water properly filtered. No beer or malt liquor, or wine of any kind, should be allowed. These liquors incite thirst, and upset the liver and the digestive organs. The last meal at night might consist of biscuit and cocoa, tea, or coffee. Tea and cocoa are more nourishing and better thirst curers than coffee. Every man could be allowed one ounce of tobacco per diem, and men should be encouraged to smoke short briar-wood pipes. Cigarettes and cigars ought never to be smoked while working hard and subject to exposure; they promote thirst, and dry up the natural moisture of the mouth and throat. The food supply for every section of a regiment for one week (except the fresh vegetables, meat and bread), should be carried in the supply waggon of the section referred to. With the principal meal of the day the men should be served with a moderate supply of the fruit in season. In winter, or when fruit is not procurable, raisins, figs, bananas or nuts should be supplied; oranges also at the proper season of the year. Three good meals a day are enough for any man, and he can march, fight, and do any amount of work without feeling fatigue or requiring extra nourishment. The regimental canteen should only be allowed to supply a very limited quantity of malt liquors or aerated waters during a campaign, and that only when the day's work is done. These drinks put men out of condition and training quicker than anything else. The supply of spirituous liquors should also be strictly limited.

(3) Fatigues.—That which hampers commanding officers in getting men on parade for drill purposes in time of peace, and that which causes the principal inconvenience and irksomeness of campaign life, is the absolute necessity of telling off so many men per diem for guard picquet, orderlies, clean fatigues, cook's mates, officers' servants, &c. This could be obviated by enrolling time-expired men, who might be asked to serve another period of three years before being drafted into the Reserve. These companies could then supply all the necessary details for regimental duties and leave the service companies intact for drill or fighting. These companies should have charge of the supply waggons, see to the cooking arrangements, serve out the ammunition to the fighting line, the cloaks to men bivouacking on the ground at night in places where they have fought, would pitch and strike tents when in camp, and keep their waggons supplied from the main stores of the Army Service Corps.

If the War Office could be induced to discuss these suggestions with experienced soldiers, and to tentatively carry them out, say, with one regiment during the summer manoeuvres, a report might then be made as to the results, noting the condition of the men, their capacity for hard and arduous marching and fighting, the condition of their clothes, and the general comfort of all ranks.

A RETIRED FIELD OFFICER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Although it is too soon to apportion blame (above all in the free and easy manner which some delight in, relying mainly on ex parte statements) to those who have sacrificed health, time, and life even for their country in South Africa, it is not too soon to profit by some, at least, of the lessons which the war in that country offers. These may be considered under five heads—dress, armament, drill and instruction, discipline, organisation. But before we touch in a critical manner, perhaps, on the war (for Truth, though mild eyes may object to the sight of her nakedness, must be coaxed from the bottom of her well), let us offer a fervent tribute of admiration to all ranks and all branches of the Service, both combatant and non-combatant, who have so gallantly suffered, fought, and died for us. Not only the Regulars, but the grand old constitutional force the Militia, the hardy Volunteers, the devoted Yeomanry, and, of course, all the gallant Colonial troops, who have fought side by side with the rest, deserve our warmest praise, our loving gratitude.

In the question of dress, the paramount importance is in a good head covering, good and comfortable boots, and providing warmth for the stomach and loins, without unduly embarrassing the soldier. Equipment must be considered pari passu with dress: the difficulty being to enable the soldier to carry ammunition and clothing in sufficient quantity without impeding the circulation of the blood and the action of the lungs; in a word, without impairing his power of marching and fighting. Let it be once and for ever understood that we can provide the soldier with a good fighting kit, but that we do not intend to interfere with historical distinctions or national costumes. We shall then have practically no opposition. The head-dress had better be the grey slouch hat worn for choice by many civilians in various lands, worn alike by our Cavalier and Roundhead forefathers; and more lately endeared to us by the experiences of South Africa. A badge, a plume can easily be worn with it if necessary. A small forage-cap, not to be worn in the sun, may be retained. For all ceremonial parades the steel helmet, the bearskin, the feather bonnet, as at present. The infantry helmet is not worthy of perpetuation. The collar should be a roll collar. The present khaki, or light woollen, Norfolk jacket is good. The Slade-Wallace equipment, though very good in its day, has served its time. Men must not be bunched and huddled up with a complicated arrangement of straps and buckles. Forty rounds of small-arm ammunition should be carried in pouches, and all the rest on a bandolier; except twenty in the haversack. In all, the infantryman should carry 140 rounds of ammunition on his person. A comforter of light wool, 40 inches in length and 12 inches in breadth, which can be wound round waist at night, should form part of equipment. Good big pockets should exist in the trousers or breeches. Putties or gaiters. A good laced boot, well dubbed with dubbing, should be worn in peace time until it quite easily fits the foot; then put by, and occasionally inspected, so as to be taken on service by the man in a soft condition. Socks, which are not so good as linen bands, must be soaped if worn. And young officers should not consider it beneath their dignity to inspect their men's naked feet periodically in barracks or camp. I will attend to the armament question, with your permission, in another letter. C. E. D. B.

[The insertion of this letter by no means carries with it our support of the writers' recommendations. He proposes, notwithstanding his disclaimer, to "interfere with historical distinctions and national costumes." "A grey slouch hat! A Norfolk jacket of khaki colour, with a roll collar! A bandolier! A comforter! Good big pockets!" Tableau.—Ed. A. and N. G.]

LADS' DRILL ASSOCIATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As the above subject is exciting a certain amount of public attention at the present time, it may be of public interest to state what is being done in this direction in some of our colonies. In Victoria, Australia, military drill is obligatory in all state schools, and masters must qualify as drill instructors. In 1884 Sir F. Sargood, K.C.M.G., Minister of Defence, urged the formation of cadet corps in connection with all schools, and there are now some 6,000 cadets in Victoria. Up to 1890 the Government allowed a capitation grant of 10s. per efficient cadet, and an additional grant varying from £3 to £10 to each school according to the number of cadets in the corps. In 1890, owing to the financial crisis, the capitation grant of 10s. was withdrawn, except in the case of senior cadets who could drill with the ordinary rifle, and who were qualified to take their places in the ranks of the Militia, and the Government now only makes a grant of £3 per cadet corps; there is, however, every probability that the Victorian Government will again allow the capitation grant. A camp is held every year lasting from four to seven days, and is well attended, as many as 5,000 cadets having been present. The Government allows free railway passes, tents, and camp equipment for these camps. The results of the military training are stated by a distinguished military officer, who held a high command in Victoria, to be marked improvement in the bearing of the lads, and in the discipline and respect for authority in those schools where cadet corps have been started.

In a letter published in the Spectator of March 10 last Dr. Harris, formerly Head Master of King's School, Parramatta, New South Wales, writes that for over 30 years it has been a fundamental rule in that school "that every boarder should be a cadet." Other schools in New South Wales have followed this excellent lead; and boys in the primary and superior State schools have been encouraged by the Minister of Education to become cadets. Camps for these cadets are formed, and once a year several thousand Colonial lads from schools of various grades parade in the park at Sydney for review by the Governor.

Dr. Harris ends his interesting letter with these words:—"The compulsory military discipline during certain hours of the week has proved of considerable value towards the tone and general management of the school, and so far from games suffering, the schools leading in cadet corps also lead in cricket, football, &c. It is surely no exaggeration to say that some portion of the magnificent spirit of patriotism displayed by the New South Wales in rallying round the flag for the protection of the Empire, and their evident familiarity with the essentials of military training are, to some extent, due to the existence of these cadet corps in the matter of encouraging and of developing the spirit and practice of loyalty and of patriotism. Old England may once again train from her young colonies."

The Lads' Drill Association has been formed for the purpose not only of arousing public interest in the question of military drill for lads, but of encouraging the virtues of loyalty and of patriotism. Persons interested in these subjects are requested to communicate to Major W. Elliot, Hon. Secretary Lads' Drill Association, 44, Harrington Gardens, London, S.W. MEATH, Chairman.

83, Lancaster Gate, W., July 14.

A STRONG committee will assemble in India in October to consider the question of horsebreeding and military remounts. It will include the inspectors-general of artillery and cavalry, representatives of the veterinary departments, the director of Army remounts, a revenue officer, and two officers from England.

MILITIA RESERVE.—An Army Order says, "It has been decided that three months' embodied service shall be reckoned as an equivalent to an annual training as a qualification for entering the Militia Reserve, or the special service section of the Militia. The following amendments in regulations will accordingly be made:—Militia Reserve.—The following will be substituted for para. 12 of Army Order 203 of 1899. The Militia Reserve will be kept up to the usual quota in the manner prescribed by the Militia Regulations. Men who may be otherwise qualified, but have only served one training, may enlist in the Militia Reserve after three months' embodied service, and those who have not completed one training will be considered eligible after six months' embodied service, provided that, in either case, they have undergone the course prescribed in Table (B) Musketry Regulations. Special Service Section of Militia.—The following will be an additional instruction upon the Royal Warrant promulgated by Army Order 93 of 1899: 7. Three months' embodied service will be reckoned as equivalent to one annual training under Article 4 (i.) of the Warrant, provided that it includes the execution of the course prescribed in Table (B), Musketry Regulations."

ARMY.

Lieut.-Gen. Craven Hildersley Dicken, C.S.I., retired list, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, died at 53, Sinclair Road, W., on the 23rd inst., aged 76. He joined the Army, June 11, 1838; became Captain, March 3, 1853; Lieut.-Colonel, Feb. 18, 1861; Colonel, Feb. 18, 1866; Major-General, March 1, 1870; and Lieut.-General, May 1, 1878. He was appointed assistant secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department in 1855, and chief engineer and secretary to the Chief Commissioner in the Central Provinces in 1864. In the following year he returned to the headquarters of the Public Works Department as secretary, and in February, 1877, he relinquished his post.

Lieut.-Col. Andrew Hamilton Russell, formerly of the 22nd and 58th Regiments, died at Torquay on the 20th inst. in his 89th year. He was given a commission in the 22nd Foot by the great Duke of Wellington in recognition of the services of his father, who was killed in the Peninsular War. After taking part in the war which resulted in the capture of Sind, Col. Russell exchanged into the 58th Regiment, and served in that regiment in the south of New Zealand in 1865. There he left the Army and took to sheep farming. For many years he was a member of the Legislative Council, and in one Administration held the post of Minister for Native Affairs.

Brig.-Surg. Thomas Wright, retired list, Army Medical Department, died at Vambrugh Park, Blackheath, on the 20th inst., aged 68. He joined the Army April 21, 1854; became Surgeon June 20, 1865; Surgeon-Major March 1, 1873; and retired May 7, 1884. He served with the 20th Regiment during the Eastern Campaign, 1854-55, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman and siege of Sebastopol (medal with three clasps and Turkish medal); served with the 38th Regiment in the Indian Mutiny Campaign from November, 1857, including the capture of Meerut, siege and capture of Lucknow (medal with clasp).

Major James Du Pre Brabazon died at 87, Harcourt Terrace, South Kensington, on the 19th inst. He was present at the storm and destruction of the fortified native Mandingo town of Sabagee on the Gambia on June 1, 1853. Obtaining his Majority July 8, 1859, he retired shortly afterwards by sale of his commission.

Surg.-Major Arthur Croker, retired list, Army Medical Department, died at Claremont, Seaford, Sussex, on the 18th inst., aged 68. He joined the Service May 7, 1858; became Surgeon-Major April 1, 1873; and retired Nov. 17, 1878.

Capt. the Hon. Lonsdale Richard Douglas Gray, 6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers), died at Johannesburg on the 10th ult. of enteric fever. Born March 3, 1870, the second son of Eveleen, nineteenth Baroness Gray in her own right, by her marriage with Mr. James Maclaren Smith-Gray, who only died in February last, he joined the Carabiniers as 2nd Lieut. Feb. 15, 1893; became Lieut. July 1, 1895; and Captain May 11 last. He was Adjutant from Jan.

11, 1899, to May last, when he joined the staff of Brig.-Gen. Porter as A.D.C.

Capt. Bernard Elliot Church, Reserve of Officers, doing duty with 7th Dragoon Guards, died of wounds at Pretoria on the 19th inst. Born March 5, 1870, he was appointed a 2nd Lieut., 13th Hussars, Sept. 18, 1889; was transferred to the 16th Lancers Nov. 6, 1889; became Lieut. March 13, 1891; and, having left the Service, volunteered for the front at the beginning of the present year, and was given his troop in the 7th Dragoon Guards, with which he embarked for the Cape.

Capt. Francis W. H. Petrie, late of the 11th Regiment, died at his residence, Campden Hill, W., on the 21st inst., aged 69.

Capt. George Patrick Campbell, Indian Staff Corps (25th Bengal Infantry), has died at Malakand of ague. Born April 4, 1866, he joined the Army as Lieut., Wiltshire Regiment, Jan. 30, 1886; was transferred to the Worcestershire Regiment March 17, 1886; joined the Indian Staff Corps August 23, 1887; and became Captain Jan. 30, 1897. He served in the Hazara expedition, 1891 (medal with clasp); in the Bazai expedition, 1892; in the Chitral expedition 1895 (medal with clasp); and in the North-West Frontier expedition, 1897-8 (clasp).

Lieut. Harold Erskine Fendall Currie, Indian Staff Corps (14th Sikhs), died at Doolalee, Bombay, of cholera, on the 24th inst. Born Sept. 10, 1877, youngest son of Major-Gen. E. Fendall Currie, 48, Nevers Square, S.W., he joined the Indian Staff Corps from the Royal Military College, Jan. 20, 1897, and became Lieut. April 20, 1899. He served in the North West Frontier Campaign 1897-98, with the Malakand and Tirah Field Forces (medal with clasp).

2nd Lieut. William Henry Kenyon, 1st Batn. Liverpool Regiment, died at Newcastle, South Africa, on the 20th inst. As a Lieut. in the 2nd V.B. Liverpool Regiment, he went out to South Africa with the Volunteer Company, and was transferred to the Line batn. on May 5 as a 2nd Lieut.

Trooper Malcolm Lugard Craigie, 58th Company, Imperial Yeomanry, was killed in action at Bethlehem, South Africa, on the 13th inst. He was the youngest son of Col. J. H. S. Craigie, late Highland Light Infantry, A.A.G. Army Headquarters, India. This plucky young soldier was most anxious to obtain a commission in the Army, and when the Imperial Yeomanry were organised, at once applied to join in order, if possible, to qualify himself by service in the field. He had been brought to notice for his smartness, and was one of those on Lord Roberts' list.

MILITARY MANOEUVRES BILL.

This measure came before the Standing Orders Committee of the House of Commons last week, Mr. Halsey presiding. The object sought was to give power to the War Office to use certain specified lands, for a limited period in each year, for the purpose of rifle and artillery practice, and, according to a memorandum put before the Committee on behalf of Lord Lansdowne, ample compensation would be afforded to landowners and all other persons who might be affected by the proposed use of the said lands. The only non-compliance reported by the examiner, on the memorial of the Earl of Lichfield and others, was that notice of the Bill was not published in the London Gazette, and Lord Lansdowne trusted that the Committee would dispense with the Standing Orders, and allow the Bill to proceed. The statement presented to the Committee on behalf of the opponents to dispensing with the Standing Orders urged that the promoters had technically escaped the ordinary obligations to give notice to owners, lessees, and occupiers of land compulsorily purchased or taken by the way they had framed the Bill, and as a result of the procedure adopted the Bill passed the House of Lords without observation by the persons whose rights were affected. Indeed, it was only discovered by them after the Bill had been sent to the Commons. One of the memorialists (the Earl of Lichfield) is the owner of a large and valuable estate in the Cannock Chase area, which, like other lands within the affected area, would, it was urged, be most seriously deteriorated for purposes of use and enjoyment, and depreciated for any purpose of sale or lease by the existence of any such powers over it as the Bill would confer. The Committee decided not to dispense with the Standing Orders.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

TACTICS v. MILITARY HISTORY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A recent order as to Volunteer officers and active service states that a Volunteer officer before entering on the special engagement for active service must have passed the examination in tactics. Why should such an examination be insisted upon? Tactics is a subject that, after the competitive examination in September, a Militia officer need not be examined in. Surely if a few pages of military history are to be substituted for tactics in the case of Militia subalterns, the Volunteer officer—who is generally a very hard-worked man—might be allowed to substitute military history for tactics as well, for that subject would not take him so long to study for examination and in the end would be more profitable.

COMMON SENSE.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It was announced in last night's Gazette that the Queen had been graciously pleased to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the under-mentioned officer, whose claims had been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery in South Africa:—

"Capt. Conwyn Mansel-Jones, West Yorkshire Regiment.—On Feb. 27, during an assault on Terrace Hill north of the Tugela, in Natal, the companies of the West Yorkshire Regiment on the northern slope of the hill met with a severe shell, Vickers-Maxim, and rifle fire, and their advance was for a few moments checked. Capt. C. Mansel-Jones, however, by his strong initiative, restored confidence, and, in spite of his falling very seriously wounded, the men took the whole ridge without further check, this officer's self-sacrificing devotion to duty at a critical moment having averted what might have proved a serious check to the whole assault."

CAVALRY.

2nd Life Guards.—A service in memory of the late Lord Kensington and Surg.-Capt. Fawcett, R.A.M.C., attached to the same regiment, will take place in the chapel at Albany Street Barracks on Monday next, at half-past 12 o'clock, simultaneously with the funeral of Lord Kensington at St. Bride's.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards.—Capt. Quicke is on passage home from South Africa in the Lake Erie, which sailed on the 19th inst.

2nd Dragoon Guards.—The 1st team won the Royal Cambridge Shield at Bisley on Saturday last with a score of 80—39 at 500 yds., and 41 at 600 yds. The 2nd team made 89—41 at 500 yds., and 48 at 600 yds., but was disqualified for not riding the course.

4th Dragoon Guards.—Major the Hon. R. Leigh, Military Secretary to Lord Northcote, Governor of Bombay, has been invalided home for three months.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers).—Major Garratt has been selected for the appointment of second in command, vice Major Sprot, promoted to the command.

7th Dragoon Guards.—Major Cooper, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst.

10th Hussars.—The estate of Capt. Meeking, who died at Bloemfontein on April 16, is sworn at £3,461 4s. 2d. by his widow and sole executrix, to whom probate has been granted.

13th Hussars.—Lieut. and Qrmr. Rupert, invalided from South Africa, sailed in the Orcana on the 20th inst.

14th Hussars.—Major O'Brien left Cape Town on the 19th inst. in charge of invalids in the Lake Erie.

19th Hussars.—Capt. and Qrmr. Marshall, V.C., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orcana on the 20th inst.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Three new field batteries, the 146th, 147th, and 148th, are to be formed at Aldershot. They are taken on to the establishment from to-day.

Cpts. Donaldson and Grover and Lieut. Peckham, R.F.A., and Capt. Austin, R.G.A., have been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst. Lieut. Farquhar and 2nd Lieut. Synnott sailed from Cape Town in the Avondale on the 16th inst.

Capt. H. Biddulph left England on Thursday in the Rome for China.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Majors W. Perry and D. S. King left England on Thursday in the Rome for China.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Lieut. Morrison took the oath and his seat on Monday in the House of Commons as member (Unionist) for the Wilton Division of Wilts, in the room of Viscount Folkestone, raised to the peerage.

Scots Guards.—Lieut.-Col. the Hon. N. de C. Dalrymple-Hamilton, who was wounded at Belmont, and has since been appointed to command the newly-created 3rd Batn., underwent a further operation on Monday. He was wounded in the forearm, and had to undergo amputation of the left hand. The surgeons feared that it would be impossible to save any part of the limb, and, their apprehensions being justified by subsequent developments, the arm was amputated at the shoulder joint. The patient is doing as well as can be expected.

Irish Guards.—Major Nugent has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst.

Queen's (2nd).—Sergt. J. J. Hall, 2nd Batn., writing from Beaufort West, South Africa, on June 13, gives a touching account of the sale of the kits of comrades who succumbed to enteric fever, which shows how true comradeship is in the historic "Queen's." He says:—

"What kits they had were sold by auction, and I think the prices realised show that Tommy is rarely behindhand with his little mite. Pte. Avern's kit realised about £13 12s. 6d., Lance-Corpl. Collins's about £13 10s., but Lance-Corpl. Askew's was the best of all. The fellow had only got married just before we embodied, and when it became known that his kit was going to be sold I think every man turned out to try and do his young widow a good turn. The prices that some of the things reached in the bidding would surprise a good many who know the actual value of them. Several things were sold two or three times over, the fellows after they bought them throwing them down again. The kit realised £15 15s. 8d., and some of the prices obtained were: three matches, 6d.; towel, 3s. 6d.; cap, 9s. 3d.; comb, 5s.; half-ounce of tobacco, 15s.; photo of Baden-Powell, £1."

Bufs (3rd).—Lieut. Worthington, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—Major Matthews, 2nd Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 20th inst., in the Orcana; Capt. Jackson, 3rd (Militia) Batn., in the Avondale Castle on the 16th inst., and Capt. Hibbert, 4th (Militia) Batn., in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst., all three invalided.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Lieut. Moore, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from South Africa, and left on the 16th inst. in the Avondale Castle.

King's Regiment (8th).—The committee for the formation of a Liverpool Scottish Volunteer corps have received from Major-General A. E. Turner the following communication:—"I am now directed by the Secretary of State for War to acquaint you that her Majesty has been graciously pleased to accept the services of a battalion of Volunteer Rifles to be composed of Scotsmen resident in Liverpool and to be designated the 8th (Scottish) V.B. King's Liverpool Regiment, with an establishment of eight companies, and to request that you will be good enough to give the necessary instructions accordingly for the formation of the corps." 2nd Lieut. Fowler, 6th (Militia) Batn., has been selected for employment with the West African Frontier Force.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Lieut.-Col. Becher is on passage home from South Africa in the Avondale Castle, on promotion from second in command of the 2nd Batn. He is under orders to join the 1st Batn. in India. 2nd Lieut. Dawson, 2nd Batn., is also a passenger in the Avondale Castle, invalided.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—Col. Roberts, 2nd Batn., who was wounded lately near Pretoria, is stated to be progressing favourably.

Devonshire Regiment (11th).—Lieut. Lancaster, Volunteer Company, and 2nd Lieut. Milne, 2nd Batn., are on passage home from the Cape, invalided, in the Orcana, which sailed on the 20th inst.

Suffolk Regiment (12th).—Capt. Turner, 2nd Batn., has been appointed a Staff Captain, Intelligence Department, Simla, vice Capt. Norrie, Middlesex Regt., who has joined the China Expedition.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—2nd Lieuts. Cuthell and Grant-Dalton, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orcana on the 20th inst.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Capt. Pile has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Avondale Castle on the 16th inst.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (33rd).—Capt. Digby, 3rd (Militia) Batn., and 2nd Lieut. Trench, 1st Batn., have been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Avondale Castle on the 16th inst.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—2nd Lieut. Gover has been invalided from South Africa, and is on passage in the Avondale Castle.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—Major Western has been appointed second in command of the 2nd Batn. (97th) in South Africa, vice Major Harrison promoted to the command of this battalion.

Northamptonshire Regiment (58th).—Major Brereton has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Avondale Castle on the 16th inst.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Plumer has been appointed second in command, vice Major Lousada, promoted to the command of the 2nd Batn. (84th) in India.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (66th).—Lieut. Gosset has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst.

East Surrey Regiment (70th).—Capt. Collyer, Volunteer Company, Lieut. Colquhoun, and 2nd Lieut. Stafford, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orcana on the 20th inst.

Gordon Highlanders (92nd).—Lieut. Booth, who has been in command of the depot in India, has joined headquarters in South Africa.

Royal West Kent Regiment (97th).—Lieut. Kitson left England on Monday for South Africa in the Bavarian.

North Staffordshire Regiment (98th).—2nd Lieut. Hope left Cape Town on the 20th inst. for England in the Orcana, invalided. He received his commission, May 19, from the ranks of Thorneycroft's Horse.

Wiltshire Regiment (99th).—Capt. Pollew, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orcana on the 20th inst.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Lieut. Waddington has been invalided from the Cape and sailed in the Lake Erie on the 19th inst.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Lieut. Seppings, invalided from the Cape, is taking passage in the Orcana, which sailed on the 20th inst.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (103rd).—Capt. Higginson left England in the Bavarian on Monday for South Africa to join headquarters.

Rifle Brigade.—There has just been placed in the north aisle of Winchester Cathedral, a position chosen by the Duke of Connaught, Colonel-in-Chief, a stained-glass window to commemorate the centenary of the raising of the brigade. The design of the window is to illustrate self-sacrifice for the good of others as being the true principle of the soldier's life. In the apex is a crown surmounting a Maltese cross, which is encircled by a wreath tied by hands inscribed with the names of the chief battles in which the brigade has been engaged. In the two top lights of the central division are the Crucifixion with the figure of the Roman centurion, saying, "Truly this man was the Son of God!"; and below are St. Stephen, the first martyr, St. Lawrence, martyr, A.D. 258, St. Edmund, King of East Anglia, slain by the heathen Danes in 876, and St. Oswald, King of Northumbria, slain in battle with the heathen King of Mercia in 642. In the side-lights are, on the left side, St. Alban, the first British martyr, and below him St. Maurice, a Christian Roman soldier who suffered martyrdom in 286; while on the right side are the patron saint of England, and below him St. Martin, who, after serving as a soldier in the army of the Roman Empire, became Bishop of Tours in 371. A brass tablet at the foot commemorates 2nd Lieuts. L. W. Nelson and the Hon. F. G. Boyle, and 50 non-commissioned officers and men of the brigade, who fell during the Soudan campaign of 1898, and the subsequent operations in Crete.

West India Regiment.—The steamer Dervent has been ordered to Bermuda to ship the 1st Batn. there, and to St. Helena to embark two companies of the 3rd Batn. after which she will convey them to West Africa.

Army Service Corps.—Capt. Standen sailed from Cape Town in the Orcana on the 20th inst., invalided.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—Majors Greig and Anderson are on passage home from South Africa with invalids in the Avondale Castle, which sailed on the 16th inst.; Surg.-Capt. Morris, M.M.S.C., is also a passenger in the Avondale Castle. Major Clements is on passage home from the Cape in the Lake Erie, which sailed on the 19th inst. Major Gerrard is on passage home from the Cape in charge of invalids, in the Orcana.

MILITIA SERGEANT-MAJORS.

A Royal warrant has been issued granting warrant rank to Militia sergeant-majors. They will take rank and precedence immediately after warrant officers serving in the Regular forces. Their daily rate of pay will be: Artillery, 5s. 3d.; Engineers, 5s. 6d.; Infantry, 4s. 9d.

After having served five years as warrant officers, they will be entitled to pensions at these rates: On discharge on account of disability, reduction of establishment, or age, after twenty years' qualifying service, 3s. 3d.; on discharge for any cause, except for misconduct or inefficiency—after twenty-one years' qualifying service, 3s. 3d.; after twenty-five years' qualifying service, 3s. 9d.; after thirty years' qualifying service, 4s. 3d.

Widows and children will be entitled to pensions and compassionate allowances at the rates and under the conditions laid down in the warrant of April 12 (Army Order 109 of 1900).

Non-commissioned officers who were serving as sergeant-majors of Militia on April 1 will receive warrant rank from that date, and those who have been appointed since that date, from the date of appointment.

In order to remove any misapprehension that may exist in regard to the amount of bounty payable to a Militiaman on his re-engagement in the Militia, attention is drawn to the terms of Army Order 86 of this year, under which the sum of £5 is issued, provided the man is at least 20 years old, instead of the bounty of 30s. formerly allowed. The bounty of £5 is also payable to men on their re-enlisting in the Militia, provided they come under the category of re-enlisted men as defined in the Army Order.

WAR LITERATURE.

Things Seen is the title of a collection from the scattered writings of the late G. W. Stevens, selected and edited by G. S. Street, and including a memoir by W. E. Henley, to whom the book is dedicated by Mrs. Stevens. It embodies articles on men, cities, and books, and may be something of a revelation to those whose impressions of Mr. Stevens have been gained from certain of his more popular volumes. He was the leader of a school of impressionists in literature, and has had many imitators, but what he wrote was always characterised by insight, and the reader learnt much from the things that came from his pen. Here, however, there are articles from Blackwood's Magazine, the National Observer, and other publications, that have not reached everybody, and they show us Mr. Stevens dealing with the new humanitarianism, with Mr. Balfour's philosophy, Zola, Tennyson, and other like subjects. Here he displayed rare qualities that lead Mr. Henley to say, perhaps with-out exaggeration, that there was lost, when he died at Ladysmith, as fine a spirit, as rare and completely trained a brain, and as brave a heart as we have to show. It was a wise thought to republish these essays, some only of which concern the war.

Sidelights on the War, by Jessica Sykes (Fisher Unwin), is a somewhat remarkable volume, which is dedicated "With admiration and respect to the officers and men of the Naval Brigade." Lady Sykes refers mostly to her experience in Natal, and one lesson which she wishes to convey is that "Were our Army organisation in any way equal to that of our Navy the Union Jack would long since have waved over Pretoria." The book contains a great deal of censure of our military leaders, but it may be remarked that the writer went out with a preconception. Before she left England, she had a "presentiment that in a military sense we were not prepared," and were not sending out sufficient troops; also that, "from a succession of petty jealousies, mean tricks, and the usual criminal weaknesses and follies connected with red-tapism the best men were not going out in command, but were at that time detained by official pressure in English, Irish, and Egyptian employments (which could be equally well filled by less distinguished and useful men), and that these our true generals would never reach South Africa except as the result of a violent and unmistakable popular outcry." Lady Sykes went out prepared to find her prepossessions justified, and, of course, was not disappointed.

England's Armed Neutrality, by Professor L. Henry, late of the Royal Staff College (Farmer and Sons), has been produced for the benefit of the Madeira Hospital for sick and wounded officers. Its ideas are individual, and the main contention is in favour of an Anglo-Franco-Russian alliance. It is a curious book, and Sir William Butler is quoted on the title page as having given the author his opinion that it has "the rare merit of originality."

The Right to Bear Arms, by "X" (Elliot Stock), is a volume that caused a little sensation when it first appeared. It has now been somewhat extended. No one will quarrel with its contention that, if arms are borne at all, they should be borne with proper authority; but, unfortunately, sometimes the source is tainted. Any coat of arms which is recorded in a herald's visitation is accounted valid, but these gentlemen were not above corruption, and it is on evidence that the Herald's College has certified and enrolled pedigrees which have proved to be false. However, there is a great deal of interest in this book, and it certainly explodes many popular fallacies.

Outpost Duties, by Colour-Sergeant L. Twigge (Derby, W. Hall). A most useful little book this, which we have no hesitation in recommending strongly. A study of its pages would be the means of preventing many a difficulty on active service. Its cheapness—it is only 2d.—brings it too within the reach of all.

THE KUMASI EXPEDITION.—A supplementary estimate for £241,221 has been issued, of which £200,000 is required to meet the expenditure on Ashanti.

An Army Order notifies that "It has been decided to allow additional pay at the rate of 1s. a day to the senior majors of embodied Militia units during the period of embodiment. This instruction will be added to paragraph 14 (c) of Army Order 203 of 1899."

A CIRCULAR issued by the Irish branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association shows the number of cases relieved by the Lady Roberts fund. The number of wives is 4,658, of children 7,311, and of dependent relatives 5,168. The amount required monthly is £7,970, the amount in hand £12,488 up to March 31.

THE TRANSPORT OF TROOPS.

WHEN, in the early days of the trouble in South Africa, we found it necessary to chronicle certain shortcomings apparent in the system of sending out the troops, we at the same time expressed the belief that the transport department of the Admiralty would in the end satisfactorily respond to any call made upon it.
No better justification of the confidence which naval administration inspires can be found than that afforded by the return in connection with the subject of transport to South Africa issued this week. The document is a lengthy one, full of interesting facts and statistics which will doubtless furnish material for many historians and commentators on the war. But among all these facts one stands out most prominent.
The Admiralty undertook to carry between July 1, 1899, and March 31, 1900, no less than 7,566 officers, 192,089 men, 59,073 horses, and 32,678 mules from various parts of the world to the Cape Colony and Natal. The vessels they employed made 351 outward voyages; yet, with all this transfer of men and animals over so many miles of sea, only two vessels failed to complete their voyages. There was no loss of human life, and less than 2,500 animals died, barely 2½ per cent. of the total number carried. This is in itself a marvellous demonstration of good organisation on the part of all concerned; and what makes the success of the undertaking so much more satisfactory is that it was all done without going outside the resources of the Empire for transport. Mistakes there were, doubtless—some errors of omission and commission—but the net result is something of which the nation has every reason to be proud, and for which the Admiralty, the transport department and its officers, the shipping companies, and the troops conveyed all deserve—and should receive for their several shares in such a magnificent achievement—due credit and adequate recognition. Never before in the history of the world has such an undertaking been attempted, and its successful accomplishment must remain till the end of time one of the most striking and instructive chapters in our Empire's story.

We have hitherto dealt with the subject in its largest aspect, but in its details may be found some equally interesting facts and figures. From this country and from the Mediterranean the vessels sent to South Africa in the period above mentioned made 216 passages, carrying 6,663 officers, 170,185 men, and 30,101 horses. Two vessels, as we have already said, came to grief, and altogether 1,543 horses were lost during the passages. The Admiralty return shows which vessels were provided with old pattern fittings, which with new pattern fittings, which were provided with slings for each horse or mule, and which were not so provided; but we must leave it to others to calculate and apportion the losses among the vessels as respectively fitted. Valuable results should be obtained from such apportionment, results which cannot fail to have a bearing upon the further transport which is or may become necessary either for this war or for other expeditions oversea. The passages made by the ships from India were forty-nine in number, 417 officers, 10,392 troops, 2,882 followers, 7,344 horses, and 1,566 mules being carried, out of which numbers ninety-eight horses and three mules only were lost. The passages made were, of course, shorter in distance than those from home, but here again some further instructive comparisons are suggested between the numbers of men and animals transported, and the numbers of vessels employed in the work. Statistics thus obtained will doubtless be given due weight by the authorities, and should have had useful application in regard to the transport of the expeditionary force to China. Two other series of passages are described in the Admiralty return—the conveyance of Colonial contingents, and the conveyance of horses and cobs from Australia and Argentina to South Africa. In the first case the ships used made twenty-nine passages and carried 486 officers, 8,630 men, and 7,733 horses; while in the latter, twenty-four passages were made, and 13,896 animals were carried, of which only 148 were lost. These figures, as we have said, are only brought up to the end of last March, and cover a period of nine months, but the operation is still going on, and no return has been made of the homeward voyages with sick and wounded. Moreover, the time occupied in making each passage, some particulars of which are given, affords interesting data for those who will take the trouble to investigate the circumstances and classify the results.

Navy Notes.

The so-called naval review to be held at Portsmouth on August 14 has all the appearance of, and indeed can be nothing but an afterthought. In all probability the Shah, with natural and pardonable curiosity, has requested to be shown some of our ships of war. In such circumstances it would be a poor compliment if his wish were not gratified, and he could not have his desire satisfied better than by a view of the Channel Squadron. The ships of this squadron are therefore to anchor at Spithead on the 13th, and on the following day the Shah will go down from London and be taken round them in one of the Royal yachts. It would be a mistake, however, to attempt to magnify such a visit into the kind of function to which in recent years we have applied the term naval review. At the same time it would probably be bad policy from a diplomatic point of view to allow the Shah to return home without having seen something of our naval might.

The correspondence on the subject of the training of seamen is continued in the columns of the Times. Captain Eardley-Wilmot, quoting an extract from Mr. Thursfield's lecture, "The perfection of any organism consists in its precise adaptation to its environment," argues that the present environment being one of steam and other machinery, and not one of masts and yards, therefore we should modify our system of naval training, both for officers and seamen accordingly. He points out what an advantage it would be in and after a modern action at sea if gun crews could be reinforced when necessary from the engine-room, and vice versa, while all could be employed afterwards in getting the ship ready for action again when the cry will be for mechanics, and when captains will be obliged to make and keep their ships efficient from their own resources. Captain D. W. Barker, who commands the Worcester, the mercantile school ship in the Thames, is quite convinced also that in no respect has a sailing vessel the advantage of a steamer in the matter of the seaman's training when the present day exigencies of his profession are taken into account. He instances also the circumstance that some of the leading steamship companies train their own officers from the beginning in steam, while the Board of Trade considers one year's experience in a sailing ship quite sufficient to qualify a man for a master's certificate.

On the other hand, a writer signing himself "Calliope," argues in favour of the revival of a masted squadron because, he says, "it is not unreasonable to assume that a man called upon to follow the sea as a profession should be so trained and educated in its technical and practical branches as to be able to cope with any contingency which may arise in the course of ordinary routine." He urges that at any time one of Her Majesty's ships might fall in with a sailing vessel so far disabled as to require assistance to work her into port, or in time of war a vessel propelled by sails might fall a prize, and he asks what excuse would hold good if in the first place the Navy could not assist, or in the second they were obliged to destroy the prize because they could not sail her. He finds further support for his contention in the advantages which spar and sail drill afford as gymnastics for the improvement of the men in physique. These arguments and instances are not new, and they have been answered. It is astonishing indeed to find the last-named used even by such a high authority and clever writer as Sir Cyprian Bridge, when Sandow, or indeed, any Aldershot instructor, will guarantee to do for the chest and other muscles in a few months what it would take years of what we now call practice aloft to accomplish.

Two important contributions to this "naval training" discussion have appeared in the Times this week from the pen of its special correspondent on board the Majestic. We shall refer to these letters again, but, in the meantime, strongly recommend their perusal to all who are interested in the efficiency of the Navy. They deal directly with that training at sea which can only be given in commissioned battleships and cruisers acting in combination. Those who have argued against the revival of a masted training squadron will probably find in these letters unexpected arguments in support of the alternative plan of training our officers and men in the ships in which they will have to fight. Indirectly, too, they afford support to the contention of many experienced officers that a larger number of cruisers might, with advantage, be kept under the pennant both in the Channel and the Mediterranean, and exercised as independent squadrons.

The performances of the torpedo-boat destroyers engaged in the naval manoeuvres will deserve attention at the hands of the correspondents afloat. The number engaged is not large, and therefore it has been possible to select only the best steamers. But even so, there are likely to be several mishaps, judging by the defects that are so constantly developed in the instructional flotillas. The Devonport flotilla, especially, has rarely boasted the full complement of eight efficient destroyers at any time during the past six months. One or two, sometimes more, have always been undergoing repairs—repairs not due to accidents, but to defective tubes, cracked cylinders, and so forth. The three worst offenders have been the Gipsy, Fairy, and Osprey. The weakness of these destroyers, their liability to break down, has become a very serious matter in view of the numbers built and building for the Navy. The contractors give a guarantee for twelve months after delivery, but these guarantees do not safeguard us from weak tubes and even more serious defects, as in the recent case of the Fervent, which cracked her cylinder during a run from Devonport to Falmouth. Meanwhile, the turbine destroyers, the wonderful invention of the Hon. J. Parsons, have completely exhibited their superiority over the earlier types—at least in point of speed—whilst they appear far less liable to breakdowns. The turbine destroyer Cobra, for instance, attained at her trials the high speed of 35·6 knots, and averaged 34·7 knots during the three hours' run. But her coal consumption during the trial was 41 tons. It is being said in some quarters that all our 27 knot destroyers are rendered obsolete by the success of the turbines, but such is obviously not the case in view of the lower speeds of foreign torpedo boats, even of the newest types.

At a recent Portsmouth inquest on a marine pensioner named Roberts, who was found drowned at Southsea subsequently to his discharge in a penniless condition from Haslar Naval Hospital, where he had been resident several years, the coroner, Mr. Bramsdon, was requested by the jury to report the circumstances to the Admiralty, pointing out that, though turned out penniless, Roberts was entitled to a pension of 2s. per day. Mr. Bramsdon, in his letter, asked whether it was true that this pension was payable in advance. The Admiralty, in reply, practically admit the facts, but go on to show that at the time of his discharge Roberts was indebted to the Crown in the sum of £5 15s., which reduced the quarterly advance payable to him on discharge to £1 5s. This would have been sent to any ordinary address for him, but he gave the local workhouse, and pensions drawn from Greenwich Hospital Funds could not be paid to men in workhouses. The Admiralty then heard nothing of Roberts's movements until the statement of his death appeared in the papers. The Secretary to the Admiralty explains that had Roberts represented to the hospital authorities that he had nowhere to go, and required money for immediate necessities, he would certainly have been retained until the adjustment of the pension had been settled. To prevent a possibility of the recurrence of such cases the Admiralty had now given instructions that any amounts due by pensioners to the Crown on discharge should be recovered in four quarterly instalments, and in no circumstances is a pensioner to be discharged in a destitute condition.

Naval officers are probably unaware that foreign subjects may sit as assessors at naval courts and cancel or suspend the certificates of masters and other officers. The Merchant Shipping Guild have respectfully called the attention of the Board of Trade to this undesirable regulation, and after emphatic protests that department of her Majesty's Government promises that the matter shall receive careful consideration. Naval officers will undoubtedly wish for an alteration of such an impolitic and unjust measure.

The Parliamentary paper recently issued gave the following details of the supplementary estimate referred to last week. The total amount is £1,269,300, and is made up as follows:—War like stores, £709,000; Acceleration of orders in progress, £50,200; Purchase of five destroyers, £350,600; estimated cost of repairing ship, £80,000; Land for Devonport gunnery establishment, £40,000; Mooring cables for Malta and Gibraltar, £30,000; Wireless telegraphy apparatus, £9,500. It is explained that the present reserves of guns and ammunition, &c., are fully up to authorised standards hitherto considered to be essential, but recent experience has emphasised the necessity of making an addition to those standards, especially as difficulties have been found in hastening deliveries on existing contracts when new orders have to be placed. It is further proposed to establish for each foreign station reserves of guns and ammunition independently of the class of ships that may happen to form the squadron on the station at the time, thus rendering the relief of ships and their movements from station to station more simple than under the present system.

In the Standard of Wednesday there is a very interesting letter from its special correspondent at Tien-tsin, under the dates June 8, 9, and 10. The writer describes how the Boxers' storm may be said to have burst on May 16, in an attack on native Christians, some seventy of whom were burnt in a chapel on that day. He describes also the murder of the two missionaries, Messrs. Norman and Robinson, at Yung Ching, and the various attacks on the foreign engineers of the railways. On June 8, there were twenty-seven men-of-war off the Taku Forts, and a force of some 700 marines and bluejackets with eleven machine guns in Tien-tsin, where every foreigner was also under arms. Then the next day an alarming telegram came from Peking to say that unless foreign troops were sent at once it would be too late. He mentions that there all the foreign women and children were gathered in the British Legation, and that the guard could not consist of more than 400 regulars, in addition to the armed civilians. Lastly, he describes how on June 10 the expedition for the relief of the foreigners in the capital left under the British Admiral. "It was," he says, "the best sight I have seen in China. An open truck in front of the engine carrying a nine pounder in charge of bluejackets. The engine was in charge of American drivers, and the American contingent was commanded by Captain McCalla." The Admiral and his staff occupied the last carriage, and the British detachment the centre of the train with a Gatling. The expedition carried rations for four days, and material to repair the railway line and bridges. It was hoped that it would have reached Peking on June 11; we know, unfortunately, how this hope was not realised, with lamentable results.

Mr. A. R. Colquhoun still persists, we notice, in advocating an advance upon Peking by way of the Peiho River, and contends that a British force of ten thousand men could even now take the capital. "The river route," he writes, "is the one best suited to us as a maritime power, and to a force largely composed of marines and commanded by a naval officer." The explorer may be very well acquainted with China, but his advice on naval and military questions does not rest on the same basis. How could it be possible for Admiral Seymour to collect a marine force of ten thousand men, even if the possibility of utilising the river route be admitted? At the same time, Mr. Colquhoun gravely underestimates the fighting value of the Chinese forces. Their defence of Tien-tsin has opened the eyes of Europe on that head. Rightly or wrongly, Mr. Colquhoun believes that Russia is not to be trusted in the present crisis; but we cannot follow him when he contends that Russia will be prepared to prevent the Powers from avenging (if necessary) the Peking tragedy. But such is his belief, and he therefore advocates an immediate advance upon Peking with a small force. We can but repeat our comment of last week.

Mr. Goschen stated in Parliament on Tuesday last that steps would be taken to extend the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, to naval courts-martial.

In the course of the recent discussion on the Supplementary Estimate for the Navy two M.P.'s, Mr. Arnold Forster and Mr. E. Robinson, tried to extract from the First Lord a direct expression of the Admiralty policy with respect to submarine boats. Mr. Arnold Forster expressed his own conviction that this country could not afford to neglect the development of submarines in France and America, wherein he was right; and denied that submarines were the weapon of the weaker sea power, wherein he was wrong. And Mr. Goschen very properly declined at present to make any statement of the views of the Board. All experiments, he said, were being carefully noted, but the Admiralty did not wish either to encourage or to discourage foreign Powers in the construction of these vessels by stating their view of the extent of the menace to our Navy that efficient submarine vessels involved. Thus we have the assurance that the progress of these vessels is not being ignored. This assurance, combined with the disinclination of the Admiralty to experiment themselves, may logically be taken to imply that their Lordships do not consider the submarine boat to have, as yet, any place in the British Navy.

The King of Sweden and Norway has conferred upon Lieut. George T. Temple, R.N., on the retired list, the cross of Knight 1st Class of the Royal Norwegian Order of St. Olaf for his voyages, researches, and hydrographical work in connection with the navigation of the Norwegian coast, and the Queen has been pleased to grant her Royal licence and authority to Mr. Temple to accept and wear this decoration. His many brother officers and friends will hear with pleasure of this recognition of Mr. Temple's work in this direction. His valuable Sailing Instructions, published by the Admiralty, are authoritatively admitted to be the best compilations of this nature for the Scandinavian coast line. Their importance to navigators are as well recognised in the seafaring profession as is the usefulness of the little pamphlets which Mr. Temple has written for the Orient Company by those who have participated in the pleasure cruises organised by that well-known firm of steamship owners. It is, perhaps, not so well known that in the preparation of these works Mr. Temple has devoted many years of arduous and patient labour as well as having been at considerable private outlay. It is to be hoped, therefore, that our own Government will not be behind the King of Sweden and Norway in the recognition of services which have had such valuable results to the benefit of commerce and navigation.

At Debenham's, on Friday last, the medals and decorations of the late Admiral Sherard Osborn, including the Arctic, China, Crimean, Turkish Crimean, and Life-Saving, the C.B., Legion of Honour, and Medjidieh, and miniature copies of the same, fetched £39. A gold badge for June 1, 1794, with the name of Earl Howe on an anchor, and those of his admirals specially mentioned by him "as meriting a particular claim to his attention," was sold for £7 15s. A gold medal, given by the officers of his Majesty's 43rd Regiment to J. Loftus, to perpetuate the memory of his distinguished conduct at Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775, fetched £52, and a Victoria Cross, awarded to Timothy O'Hea, Rifle Brigade, on June 19, 1866, "Fenian Raid," fetched £57.

THE INADEQUACY OF PRIMARY BATTERIES OF BATTLESHIPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Considerable comments have been made in regard to the experiment in England in using a real battleship as a target, in order to learn how long a time it requires to destroy or disable such types of warships as the Belleisle by the guns of the Majestic, a first-class British battleship.

The Majestic fired 15 rounds of 12in., which is now accepted as the most powerful gun in the British Navy. Further, they fired about 100 rounds of 6in. lyddite; 100 rounds of 6in. powder shells; about 400 rounds of 3in.; 750 rounds of 3 prs., and an indefinite number of Maxims. Full charges were used throughout for all guns. A consecutive fire lasted in all nine minutes, the whole total of shot and shells fired at the Belleisle being about 45,000 pounds. Only about 20 per cent. of the projectiles missed the target. Between 30 and 40 per cent. of the shells fired were effective, that is, they hit the target and exploded promptly. Many of the shells went clear through the lighter or upper structure of the ship without exploding on account of imperfect fuse. The range was only from 1,300 to 1,700 yards, therefore there was such a large percentage of hits. Besides there were no gunners to return the fire from the opponent ship; that is, this experiment lacked the excitement of actual war.

The opinions of officers and experts differ as to what lessons can be drawn from this experiment. While the British Admiralty seems to be well pleased with the efficiency of their modern guns, the best posted men in this country are of that opinion that there is still a great deal to be learned, and that there is great room for improvement, as great as ever.

The Belleisle was, after all, not out of action or defenceless, as the Admiralty seems to have considered her, as the machinery below the water line was still intact and running. Therefore she would yet have been able to ram, or at least to torpedo an opponent. This illustrates that if mechanical engineers of the capacity of John Ericsson were given a free hand in constructing the Belleisle, somewhat on the plans of the Ericsson's destroyers, the Majestic would have had a poor show in the duel, as the destroyer type could easily be constructed with a superior speed than the Majestic class.

However, more can be learned from this experiment, which corroborates the statement I made years ago: that the primary batteries of the present battleship are not adequate. Had the Majestic been equipped with guns of the aerial torpedo type, such as are now being completed at South Bethlehem for our War Department, it would have taken less than nine seconds instead of nine minutes to destroy or disable the Belleisle. One round would completely wreck that battleship. However, if such guns were mounted on the Belleisle she could destroy the Majestic long before that battleship got to such a close range as 1,700 yards.

Nevertheless the advancement in naval and military science during the last 30 years has been considerable. One modern battleship of to-day could it have come upon the scene at then, 30 years ago, it might easily have destroyed the combined navies of the world. Yet in the officers' and experts' opinions of the time, naval and military armaments had reached such a high state of perfection as to leave but little room for improvement. History has repeated itself so often that it is but reasonable to expect that in this age of invention and mechanical revolutions our most modern engines of war will again be obsolete a few years hence, and more modern ones will take their place.

England also has some far-seeing men. Lieut. G. E. Armstrong, R.N., says in "Torpedoes and Torpedo Vessels":—"The power of gun-cotton we have overwhelming proof of. What all the guns of the Japanese fleet failed to bring about in four hours, the power of one torpedo alone accomplished in one second." Then, too, H. W. Wilson, not a naval officer but an "expert" second to none, says in "Ironclads in Action":—"The perfection of an aerial torpedo, with great range and accuracy, would be the death-knell to the present form of battleship, and it is hard to see what protection could be devised against it."

LOUIS GATHMANN.

THE directors of the Stereoscopic Company have had prepared a souvenir picture of our generals in South Africa, "Heroes All," and they offer to send, gratis and post free, as many copies as may be applied for by the managers of hospitals, sick wards, convalescent homes, or other resorts where our invalided soldiers and sailors returned from South Africa are being treated, in order that these souvenirs may decorate the walls and interest the invalids. The souvenir is beautifully executed. All enquiries should be addressed to the General Manager, the London Stereoscopic Company, Limited, 54, Cheap-side, London, E.C.

THE CHINESE CRISIS.

Saturday, July 21.

The United States Government received through the Chinese Minister at Washington a cypher despatch from Mr. Conger, the Minister in Peking, alleged to be a reply to the message addressed to Mr. Conger by Mr. Hay on the 11th inst. The despatch states that the American Minister is in the British Legation, which is being bombarded by Chinese troops, and that quick relief only can prevent a general massacre. The message is not dated, and there is nothing in it to show that it is a reply to Mr. Hay. The United States State Department, however, regard it as genuine, and as a satisfactory reply, showing that the Europeans in Peking were safe on the 12th inst. The Chinese declare that it was sent from Peking on the 18th.

Wu-Ting-Fang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, also communicated to Mr. Hay a telegram from Sheng saying:—"It is fortunate that Mr. Conger's telegraphic reply has come. An Imperial Decree, dated the 22nd of this moon (corresponding with the 18th inst.), states that all the Ministers are safe, and that the insurgents are fighting and killing each other."

The French Minister for Foreign Affairs received a telegram from the Emperor of China asking for the benevolent assistance of the President of the Republic in order to put an end to the present situation. The President's reply, telegraphed to M. Pichon at Peking, said that the question of French mediation could not be usefully considered until absolute certainty had been obtained on the following points:—(1) That effective protection and full liberty to communicate with their Governments be assured to the French representative and his colleagues at Peking. (2) That Prince Tuan and the high functionaries responsible for present events be removed from the Government, pending their eventual punishment. (3) That the authorities and troops, throughout the Empire, be ordered to cease all hostilities against the foreigners. (4) That measures be taken for the rigorous repression of the insurrectionary movement of the Boxers.

Sunday, July 22.

A telegram was received at the Admiralty from the Commander-in-Chief in China waters, to the effect that Tien-tsin and neighbourhood had been entirely evacuated by the Chinese troops.

Monday, July 23.

A short account of Lieut.-General Linevich, who has been appointed to command the Russian troops at Tien-tsin, appears in the Russviedchik. He was born in 1838, and entered the Russian army in 1855 as Cadet in the Reserve Batn. of the 34th Foot. In 1856 he was Lieut. in the 58th Regiment, and in 1857 was ordered to join the 78th Regiment, with which for seven years he was engaged in the war in the Caucasus. At the end of the war he was transferred to the 75th Regiment, and took part in the pacification of the Western Caucasus. At the outbreak of the Turkish war in 1877 he was appointed to the command of the 2nd Caucasian Rifle Batn., and took part in the fighting around Batum. In 1878 he became Colonel, and in 1879 took command of the 84th Regiment. In 1885 he was Commander of the 2nd Transcasian Brigade and in 1891 became Major-General. In 1895 he was appointed to the command of the South Ussuri army division. This position he held until June this year, when, having been in the meantime promoted to the rank of Lieut.-General, he was appointed Commander of the Siberian Army Corps, and this is followed by his present appointment. In the course of his career he has been twice wounded, and has been awarded numerous orders and medals for distinguished service, bravery, &c.

The Government have accepted the services of the American hospital ship Maine, and have expressed their gratitude for this great act of generosity to the Atlantic Transport Company, which had furnished the ship, and to the American ladies who had provided the funds for equipping and maintaining it. The Government has also accepted from the Maharajah Sindhia of Gwalior the offer of a fully-equipped hospital ship for China, made on behalf of himself, his mother, and his wife, to testify their loyalty to her Majesty the Queen-Empress.

A despatch from the Commander of the German Squadron, at Taku, dated July 20, says that the German force at Tien-tsin has been reduced to 300 men, under the command of Captain Weniger. Captain von Usedom, whose attitude has been praised both by the British and Russian Commanders, has returned on board with the remainder of his men who are fit and well.

M. Sviagin, engineer of the Manchurian railway, telegraphing on the 18th inst. from the station of Pogranitchnaja, in the Primorski territory, states that the commander of the Chinese military post reported on June 27 that an attack by a Chinese band 500 strong was impending. There were only 20 Russian guards to protect the station. Consequently, on June 28, the families of the Russian employes left the station and crossed the frontier. On July 10 the workmen of the 11th section of the railway, together with the officials and the guards, abandoned Chantachezi Station, which was plundered and set on fire by the Chinese. The telegraphic communication with Charbin was cut.

Tuesday, July 24.

A telegram reached the Foreign Office this morning from H.M. Consul at Tien-tsin, dated the 21st inst., stating that he had that day received a letter from H.M. Minister at Peking of the 4th inst., appealing for relief. There were enough provisions to last a fortnight, but the garrison was unequal to hold out against determined attack for many days. There had been forty-four deaths and about double that number wounded.

In a telegram from M. du Chaylard, French Consul at Tien-tsin, dated July 13, and despatched from Chefoo on the 18th, he announced that a courier had just arrived from Peking. He stated that since June 20 the Ministers had been besieged in the British Legation. All the naval detachments were defending it vigorously, but the provisions were beginning to fail and the danger was very great. The detachments had lost sixteen killed and seventeen wounded. In a further telegram the Consul reported that a courier had just been despatched to Peking and might be expected to return in sixteen days.

The Journal and Advertiser's Shanghai correspondent cables that 3,000 Russian troops have arrived at Neu-Chwang from Port Arthur. Their advance is blocked by 10,000 Chinese regulars, well-armed and drilled.

The transport Ballarat, with the 3rd Madras Infantry, and the Wardha and Patiala, with the 22nd Bombay Infantry, arrived at Hong Kong on Monday. The troops were landed at Kowloon. The Itaura and Warora have sailed for Taku. The Dutch cruisers Koningin Wilhelmina and Piet Hein also arrived, the former from Batavia. The Lizard has left Queensland for China.

Wednesday, July 25.

The Russians are reported to have undertaken the operation of the railway from Tien-tsin to Taku, and they control the telephone, telegraph, and railway services. A regiment of the 7th Bengal Infantry arrived on the 17th at Tien-tsin, and Japanese reinforcements were coming in daily. The Japanese Army at Tien-tsin now numbers 15,000. The 34th Pioneers are ordered to proceed to China, in place of the 14th Sikhs, whose departure is cancelled for the present owing to an outbreak of cholera.

Gen. Li, commanding the Peitang Forts near Taku, informs the British officer commanding at Tong-ku that a runner who left Peking on the 14th inst. reports that at that time the city was in a state of absolute anarchy. The troops were fighting the Boxers, and the latter were getting the better of the struggle. The Maxim ammunition of the Legation Guards was exhausted, and the Europeans were using their rifles sparingly. Not long before the messenger's departure from Peking, the anti-foreign Chinese mounted a number of guns on the walls commanding the Legation. The Guards rushed out and silenced the guns. A few Chinese Princes were desirous of protecting the foreigners, but they were in a minority.

The France Militaire is able to guarantee "the most absolute authenticity" of the following details regarding the French troops for China:—It was considered at first that an infantry brigade accompanied by some mountain batteries of 3.1in. guns and a section of marine artillery transformed into a detachment of engineers would be sufficient to represent France in the European concert in the Far East. And these troops, consisting in the main of the 16th, 17th, and 18th Marine Infantry with all its accessories necessary to mobilise a brigade, are already at Tien-tsin or well on their way there. It is decided now to raise the number of troops to 15,000, or to a division with troops of all arms attached. The second infantry brigade will consist of four battalions of Zouaves of 1,000 each, and a line regiment of three battalions formed by volunteers taken from various regiments. There will be two squadrons of cavalry probably furnished by the 2nd African Chasseurs. Besides the four mountain batteries already sent, there will be another four, all manned by the marines, three batteries of field artillery of 3in. guns, and two batteries of 4.7in. howitzers (120 court). It is considered that the marines are not sufficiently experienced to handle the new French field guns; the last five batteries, therefore, will be manned by volunteers from the various field artillery regiments. All volunteers whose time will be up next September will receive a bonus of £4. There will be two companies of engineers, in addition to the two sections of marine artillery acting now as engineers, and a railway section. There is also some talk of sending a balloon section.

Thursday, July 26.

Another message has been received at Tien-tsin from Mr. Conger, but it carries the story no further than the letter from Sir Claude Macdonald. Like the latter, it is dated the 4th inst. It states that Chinese soldiers are "shelling the Legations daily," and that "there is grave danger of a general massacre." Assurances of the safety of the Legations continue to be received. One states that they were safe on July 10, another on July 14, and a third brings it down to July 22; all are from Chinese sources. Li Hung Chang states that the Government is willing "to guarantee the retreat of the foreigners at Peking to Tien-tsin."

From Tien-tsin it is reported that some friction has arisen among the commanders, owing to the control of the railway having been assumed by the Russians. Admiral Seymour is said to strongly disapprove of this action. The French also are endeavouring to obtain control of the river tugs. British residents are much exercised by this action, and protest strongly that it constitutes a menace to British interests.

Tien-tsin has been divided into four parts and occupied in the following manner:—From the West Gate to the South Gate by the English; from the North Gate to the West Gate by the French; from the East Gate to the North Gate by the Japanese; and from the South Gate to the East Gate by the American forces. The towns and villages on the left bank of the Pei-ho and the Lutai Canal have been occupied by the Russians.

Advices from Manchuria state that Russian troops from Nikolsk and the Sungari River are hastening to the relief of Charbin. Gen. Gerngross is organising the defence, and there is hope that the situation will shortly improve.

Gen. Gaselee and his staff arrived at Wei-hai-Wei on Wednesday. The 34th Pioneers will proceed to China in place of the 14th Sikhs. The latter regiment will embark when it is free from cholera. The Austro-Hungarian war vessels Kaiserin Elizabeth and Aspern have left for China.

Friday, July 27.

All the news from the Chinese provinces points to continued unrest. There is much uneasiness in the Yang-tse ports, and it is feared that the Chinese troops will not be long restrained. The Cantonese are suspicious of the British troops at Hong Kong, and are preparing to defend the coast. Outbreaks against missionaries are reported from Southern Hunan. A Roman Catholic Bishop, three Fathers, and a number of native converts have been murdered.

Fighting between Russians and Chinese is still in progress all over Manchuria and on the Amur. The Yalu valley has been occupied and plundered by the Chinese, and the Russians forced to retreat. Blagovestchensk was still being bombarded on the 23rd.

Gen. Dorward has sent the American Commander a letter in the following terms:—

"I desire to express the high appreciation of the British troops of the honour done them in serving alongside their comrades of the American Army, and of the high honour accorded me by having them under my command. I blame myself for the mistake made by the 9th Regiment in taking up their position, not remembering that troops fresh to the scene of action, and hurried forward in the excitement of attack, were likely to lose their way. Still, the position they took and gallantly stuck to all day undoubtedly prevented a large body of the enemy from turning the right of the attacking line, and inflicting serious loss on the French and Japanese."

The Indian Contingent having arrived at Tien-tsin, all the British Naval Forces, with the exception of the men from the Terrible, have been withdrawn and sent back to the Fleet.

The 2nd Bengal Infantry left Bombay yesterday for China on the Zamania. The transport Palamcottah has arrived at Hong Kong from the north with two naval officers and 17 seamen wounded. They have been sent to the naval hospital. The transport Vadala, with the 1st Madras Pioneers, has also arrived. The transport Jelunga left Colombo on Wednesday for China.

The Duke of York, in accordance with medical advice, did not attend the distribution of prizes on Thursday in last week to the cadets on board the Thames Marine Officers' training ship Worcester, as recent sickness to a considerable extent in that vessel rendered His Royal Highness's visit undesirable. The Duke of Argyll consented to take his place, and remarked that being a land-lubber he could not speak with the authority and knowledge of an experienced sailor like the Duke of York. His Grace hoped that before long the additional cadetships for the Royal Navy, promised by the Admiralty, would be granted; and expressed his gratification at "old boys" from the Worcester doing well in the world, some of whom had distinguished themselves at the front in South Africa. The Duke urged on the cadets the importance of discipline, by which true independence could only be developed and maintained.

Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle's naval career having virtually come to an end, he is about to devote himself to aerial investigation, and intends ascending in a balloon with the Rev. E. M. Bacon to investigate air currents and the use of the Morse code in signalling from mid-air to mother-earth. This gallant flag-officer, at the age of sixty-four, evidently has activity of mind and limb superior to many who are younger in point of years.

Admiral the Hon. Sir Arthur Cochrane commissioned the Warrior in August, 1861, as her first captain. She was then the largest fighting ship in the world, and escorted the Princess of Wales, then Princess Alexandra of Denmark, in 1863, to the Thames. "The Princess is much pleased" was signalled from the Royal yacht to the Warrior. This once famous vessel is now to be utilised as a depôt and storeship for the torpedo flotilla at Portsmouth. Her name might with advantage be re-introduced in a modern battleship.

Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock appeals for funds in aid of the Royal Naval Scripture Readers' Society. In consequence of the large increase of our Navy, the present staff of lay helpers is inadequate, and the Admiral hopes that the necessary increase will be met by subscriptions, which may be sent to the secretary, 112, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Stephenson was present with the Duke of York at Wolverhampton on Monday last, when His Royal Highness laid the foundation-stone of a free library and opened a wing of the Orphanage Infirmary.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Squadron, is to assemble the vessels under his orders by the 13th prox. at Spithead, to await the visit of the Shah of Persia.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron, has had the honour of receiving from the Emperor of Austria a photograph of His Majesty, bearing the Imperial autograph and enclosed in an artistic frame of gold.

Commodore Francis Powell, Senior Naval Officer at Hong Kong, was present last week at the interview between Li Hung Chang, Viceroy of Canton, and His Excellency the Governor of Hong Kong, at the latter colony.

Captain W. H. May, of the Excellent, attains the age of fifty-one on Tuesday next, and on the 10th prox. completes three years in his present appointment, but will not immediately vacate it.

Captain the Hon. Foley Vereker's retirement need not have occurred until 1902 for non-service, as he was relieved in command of the Research in April, 1895. Since then he has been professional member of the Fisheries and Harbour Department of the Board of Trade, a post that was offered Rear-Admiral Pelham Aldrich prior to attaining flag rank. As Captain Vereker is only fifty years of age he has several years to devote to service in the Civil Department of the Government, should he care to avail himself of such employment.

Captain H. P. Routh, of the Juno, returns to Portsmouth from St. Vincent, Cape Verd, to refit that cruiser, and grant leave to his ship's company.

Captain Lewis Wintz, of the Goliath, arrived at Hong Kong on Saturday last, having taken thirty-one days to make the passage from Malta, which place he left on June 15. The Isis and Dido left the latter port on June 23, and covered the same distance in twenty-three and a half days, reaching Hong Kong five days before the Goliath, and a day and a half less than the postal period of twenty-five days from Malta.

Captain A. W. E. Prothero, of the Arrogant, left Las Palmas on Monday for Devonport.

Captain F. F. Fegen, of the Leander, is reported from New York to have landed a detachment from his ship's company at Panama on Saturday last to aid the wounded of the Government forces, they having been obliged to attack the rebels outside the city. This is not the first occasion of the gallant officer assisting the Republics of the Western Coast of America.

Captain Sir Edward Chichester, Bart., Principal Transport Officer in South Africa, was, at the recent banquet at which he was entertained in Cape Town, presented with an illuminated address and a massive silver model of the clock-tower at the docks (enclosing a clock with chimes) by the commanders of hired transports and several citizens whom the gallant officer had met both officially and privately. Sir Edward, in acknowledging this token of goodwill, remarked that when he had his legs under his own mahogany, and the model in front of him, he would be reminded of pleasant hours spent in South Africa.

Captain Charles Wyndham, of the Osborne, is the recipient of a valuable gold cigar-case from the Khedive. Surgeon A. R. Bankart has the Order of the Osmanieh of the Fourth Class conferred on him, and the ward-room officers' mess has been presented with a massive silver cup by his Highness in remembrance of the period he recently remained on board the Royal yacht.

Captain C. H. Cochran, of the Pegasus, arrived at St. Vincent, Cape Verd, on Saturday last from Bahia, and proceeds to Chatham to commission the Sappho in place of his present command.

Commander Henry Savile, of the Alert, left Halifax on the 8th ult. for the Orinoco, calling at Bermuda, St. Lucia, and Trinidad, to inquire into the circumstances attending the murder of the British Consul at Ciudad Bolivar. His visit, from which he has not yet returned, does not appear to have afforded pleasure to the Venezuelans, although no British war vessel has ascended the river for nearly a quarter of a century.

Commander Alfred Grant, of the Racoon, rejoined the flag of Rear-Admiral Bosanquet at Mauritius on Monday last.

Commander Arthur Ravenhill, of the Porpoise, annexed Iniue, or Savage Island, situated 160 miles north-east of Tongatabu, in April last.

Commander David Beatty, of the Barfleur, who was wounded at Tien-tsin last month, has been able to continue at duty, no fracture of the parts affected—the left hand and shoulder—having occurred.

Commander Herbert Lyon, of the Owragoa, is to temporarily transfer himself and officers and ship's company to the Cleopatra, in consequence of the defective state of the boilers of his present command.

Lieut. (Senior) Arthur Halsey, of the Philomel, commanding a naval contingent with Lieut.-General Clery's force in South Africa, is highly commended by that officer for bringing a 12-pr. to bear on the enemy near Bushman's Spruit on the 18th inst., by which a ridge was cleared, and the enemy obliged to withdraw therefrom.

Lieut. Maurice Hopkinson, of the Arrogant, is about to resign his commission and accept an appointment under the Cape to Cairo Railway administration.

Sub-Lieuts. J. F. H. Cole, after two years' and G. L. Massey, A. C. Goolden, and C. E. Cundall, after fifteen months' service in their present rank, have been promoted lieutenants for the positions they attained in the examinations at the Royal Naval College and at Portsmouth.

The prize for the highest score in rifle shooting by the midshipmen of the Mediterranean Squadron last year was won by the late L. G. Rodney Lloyd (then of the Isis)—the promising young officer who died of fever at Kimberley at the end of last April, when in charge of the Doris searchlight party.

Inspectors of Machinery W. J. Canter, of the Devonport Reserve, and G. H. Weeks, of the Medway Reserve, have been promoted chief inspectors from April 1 last, on augmentation of the list of the latter rank.

Sir Henry Norbury, Director-General of the Naval Medical Department, has been elected honorary member of the Royal College of Surgeons on the occasion of the centenary of that distinguished body of scientists.

Fleet-Surgeon Samuel W. Vasey's transfer from the Barfleur to the Centurion is in consequence of the death of Fleet-Surgeon Thomas M. Sibbald, of the Commander-in-Chief's flagship, on the 13th inst. from quinsy, at Taku. The deceased officer joined the Centurion in 1898 in the vacancy caused by the death of Fleet-Surgeon C. Macaulay, of that battleship. The flagship in the Far East has, therefore, lost two senior medical officers during her present commission.

Fleet-Paymaster F. H. M. Whitfeld, who has been unemployed for the past eighteen months in consequence of ill-health, is now placed on the retired list. Although he has been fourteen years a senior commissioned officer he never had the advantage of a home appointment.

Fleet-Paymaster Joseph Chaster, of the Victorious, and Chief Engineer T. R. Reynolds, of the Barham, invalided from Malta, arrived home on Saturday last in the P. and O. steam ship Egypt.

Staff-Paymaster F. H. Smith has been selected to serve on Vice-Admiral Ernest Rice's Committee to investigate the present system of victualling the fleet, and other matters in connection with seamen's rations. As his service hitherto has almost entirely been with the secretariat of the Navy, it would have been better had an accountant officer, who had solely devoted himself to the commissariat afloat, been selected for a purely professional duty. Appointments of this nature do not tend to increase the respect in which the recommendation of the Committee will be held.

Major-General Mackay Heriot, R.M.L.I. (retired), commanding the Plymouth Brigade of Infantry Volunteers, commenced a month's camping out on Saturday last at Hay Tor, with a force of 3,500 men. Major F. M. Eden, R.M.L.I. (retired), is brigade-major.

Captain R. D. Beith, R.M.L.I., has been allowed to take up the appointment of Superintendent of Gymnasia, North-Eastern District (York), subject to recall for service afloat.

Captain E. J. Stroud, R.M.L.I., has been granted an extra certificate in musketry at Hythe.

Lieut. R. O. Paterson, R.M.A., of the Majestic, obtains promotion to Captain, at the age of twenty years and two months, in the vacancy caused by the death of captain W. J. Whiffin, of the Goliath, at Aden. Advancement at such an early age has not previously occurred in the artillery branch of the Royal Marine Forces, as the subaltern officers promoted last year were older than Captain Paterson when they obtained their companies.

In his report on the attack upon the Taku Forts Admiral Kempff says that Admiral Bruce telegraphed to him asking for his opinion. Admiral Kempff replied that he was not authorised to take the initiative in any act of war against a country with which the nation to which he belonged was at peace, and that his power was limited both by regulations and recent instructions to the protection of American interests. The captain of the Monocacy received similar orders to protect American interests. Admiral Kempff, who has been warmly commended by the Secretary of the Navy for the course he took, added that in case of an attack by the Chinese Imperial troops he should consider this as a declaration of war, and would act accordingly.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times states that arrangements have been made to enable the German troops to send cheap telegrams to their relatives at home. A list has been drawn up of about 100 messages such as would usually be sent. To each of these messages is attached a number which has a word corresponding to it in the official code. A soldier who wishes to telegraph will only need to tell the authorities his own number and the number of the message he wishes to send. The corresponding words will then be telegraphed to Berlin and the message forwarded in full to his relatives. For such telegrams officers will be charged six marks, the ordinary cost of telegraphing a single word; non-commissioned officers and men will only pay three marks. Messages relating to wounds and sickness will be forwarded at the expense of the naval administration. The Imperial Post Office has already announced that all letters to and from the troops serving in China will be carried post free. He adds, and many will agree with him, that the consideration shown by the German Government for the anxieties of the parents and relatives of its soldiers might well be imitated by other Powers.

It has now been decided that the new American battleships shall have guns placed upon the super-imposed turret system, as in the Kearsarge and Kentucky. The Navy Board has apparently come to this decision because of the technical success which attended the trials of the Kentucky. Captain Chester, in command of the ship, said he was now more than ever convinced that the double turret is a success. The heavy pieces of the main battery were fired at all angles and elevations. Despite the strain that the extreme elevation imposed upon the gun carriage, nothing gave way. As a final test, the four guns of the forward turret, two 13in. and two 8in., were fired simultaneously, and within two degrees of the extreme elevation. The ship quivered from end to end. The blast is described as having been something terrific, but the guns, carriages, and turret stood the strain. That the super-imposed turret works well may be freely conceded, but the success of the Kentucky does not by any means settle the question of the advisability of placing four guns in one turret. It is at least obvious that the whole four may be put out of action by a single lucky shot, and, if the two 8in. guns which are super-imposed upon the turrets of the 13in. guns are placed there to the disadvantage of guns in the other part of the ship, the policy may well be questioned. At any rate the Board, which has investigated the stability of the turrets in the Kearsarge, had no hesitation in expressing high approval of them, and its recommendation has been fully endorsed by the decision to repeat the arrangement in the new ships.

The Spanish cruiser Estramadura, recently launched at Cadiz, is the vessel built out of subscriptions made by the Spanish colonists in Mexico. Her displacement is 2,030, length 290ft., beam 36ft., and draught 14ft. Her armour deck is composed of two layers of plates each an inch thick. She carries four Hortoria 5.6in. quick-firing guns, four Krupp 4.2in. quick-firing guns, four 2.2in. guns, and two machine guns, but no torpedo-tubes. Her two engines are vertical and triple expansion, with eight Thornycroft boilers, developing 7,000 h.p., and giving her a speed of 20 knots. It is stated that the cruisers Alfonso XII., Alfonso XIII., Conde de Venadito, Isabel II., Marques de la Ensenada, Temerario, Martin Alonso Pinzon, Vincente Yanez Pinzon, Marquez de Molins, and General Valdez, and the torpedo-boats Eulalia, Pilar, Condor, Aguila, Seguira, Cuervo, Tarifa, Retamosa, Rigel, Ejerato, and Oastor, as well as five old coast defence ships, will be sold out of the Service, or be devoted to harbour service.

Subig Bay will probably not be the site of an American coaling station in the Philippines. Reports received by the U.S. Navy Department show that it is not suitable, because it is distant from points where skilled labour is to be found. The harbour of Manila is not satisfactory, because of lack of proper depth of water, and this difficulty also presents itself at Cavite. The naval authorities are, however, said to have discovered a site not far from Manila. Pending the final selection of a site no steps will be taken for placing a dry dock in the Philippines.

The United States Congress has authorised the purchase from the Spanish Government the floating dry dock at Havana, and the officials at the Navy Department are making the final arrangements for the purchase of the structure. The price to be paid has been agreed upon by the two governments, and no delay is expected to occur before the dock passes into the possession of the United States. It is understood that the dock will be sent to Key West or Pensacola. The Alabama battleship is to be ready for her official trials by the middle of next month.

An inspection of the Greek Fleet has shown that only three armoured vessels and the armoured gunboat are fit for service. The Greek press accordingly proposes that a lottery should be started to obtain the means for building new vessels and reconstructing the old ones, a proposal from which, it is said, the Government is not averse, as it is anxious to bring the fleet up to the strength of the Turkish one. It is further stated that a number of wealthy Greeks living abroad have raised a subscription, which has already brought in money enough to cover the expense of buying two large armoured vessels.

NON-FLAMMABLE WOOD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—My attention has been called to a paragraph in your issue of the 14th inst., which seems to convey a wrong impression with reference to the use of non-flammable wood in Her Majesty's Navy. I therefore enclose you a copy of a letter received from the Secretary to the Admiralty in reference to this matter, and trust you will give it the same prominence as was given to your former remarks.

H. RUSSELL,

General Manager.

The London Non-Flammable Wood Company,
Ltd., Regent House, Regent Street, W.,
July 20, 1900.

Admiralty, S.W., July 3, 1900.

SIR,—I have laid before my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty your letter of June 29 respecting a statement that has gone forth that the Admiralty intend using no more non-flammable wood.

In reply, I am commanded by their Lordships to state that there appears to be some misunderstanding on the subject.

My Lords had no intention of cancelling any existing contracts for this wood—contracts which must take a considerable time to complete; but they do not propose to place any more orders until further experience has been gained in the ships now fitting with this wood.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) EVAN MACGREGOR.

To the London Non-Flammable Wood Company, Limited, Regent House, W.

FROM January next Bristol is to be the port of departure to, and arrival from, the West Indies, Messrs. Elder, Dempster, and Co. having contracted to maintain a line of steamers at a speed of 15 knots, and the Great Western Railway Company undertake to run special trains from Paddington to Bristol in two hours with mails and passengers.

A REVISED estimate of the sum required in the year ending March 31, 1901, to defray the expense of the Ordnance Factories has been issued, the difference between this estimate and that originally issued in February last being no less than £141,000. The total sum now mentioned is £204,000, the increase being distributed over the following votes:—Wages and police, £1,000; materials and stores, £1,000; machinery obtained by contract, £52,000; buildings, £87,000.

ORDERS have been given at Aldershot that all convalescents arriving there for duty are to be medically examined before being allowed to do any military work.

RIFLE CLUBS.—Lieut.-Col. A. P. Humphry, a member of the Council of the National Rifle Association, has reported to that body upon his recent examination of rifle clubs and ranges in Switzerland. The great advantages of the Swiss Clubs, which have a close connection with the military system of the country, he states to be—recognition for the purposes of the military regulation rifle practice; the supply of Government ammunition below cost price; the possession by the men of Government rifles in their own homes; the small expense at which ranges can be made and worked; the custom of shooting on Sundays, when men are free from work; and the great popularity of rifle shooting and belief in its value for national defence, and (partly as a consequence) freedom from the competition of athletic sports of other kinds. The following among other advantages are stated to facilitate obtaining ranges:—Obligation on the part of the public to provide ground; absence of insistence on an ideal standard of safety to the public; and the non-requirement of long ranges. If the Rifle Club movement is to be made a success in England the Government will, of course, follow Switzerland's example, otherwise the attempt can only result in disaster.

PICKERING'S

"KHAKI-BLANCO"

For cleaning and renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather, or White Canvas, and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "Khaki-Blanco," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied. "Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour and always looks like new.

White belts and other military equipment, buckskin and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "Khaki-Blanco," and this will in no wise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

THE War Office is calling for the names of Volunteer subaltern officers who are willing to accept duty with Royal Reserve regiments.

IMPERIAL WAR FUND.—We regret to learn that all grants to Widows and Orphans by the Imperial War Fund are now compulsorily suspended for want of funds. Five hundred widows have received grants of £10 each, and £1 for each child, and the names of 700 more are registered. These latter cannot now be dealt with by the Imperial War Fund, which is, however, prepared to administer any funds entrusted to it. The Imperial War Fund has paid out over £8,000 in grants to widows, orphans, and dependent relatives of men who have lost their lives in South Africa. It has received £5,000 from various sources, but has been compelled to sell out £3,000 of its original small capital stock of £4,681. This fund is admirably administered, and too much credit cannot be given to Lieut.-Col. Tully as indefatigable hon. secretary.

GRATUITY ON DISCHARGE.—An ex-soldier specially re-enlisted under Army Order 48 of 1900 will be entitled to the gratuity of £10 when discharged under these circumstances:—On the termination of his engagement; or on account of his services being no longer required; or through medical unfitness not attributable to his own misconduct. Soldiers discharged for the benefit of the public service, or as not likely to become efficient soldiers, or as unfitted for the duties of the corps, or through medical unfitness due to causes within their own control, will receive such proportion of the gratuity as corresponds to the number of completed calendar months' service since re-enlistment. A soldier discharged directly on account of misconduct is not entitled to any portion of the gratuity. In the event of a soldier's death before discharge, the gratuity, which would have been issuable to him on termination of engagement, will be credited to his estate.

DECEASED SOLDIERS.—It has been brought to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief that in several instances relatives of soldiers whose deaths have not been notified by telegram have applied to officers in charge of attestations for verification of a death report received by post, and have been informed incorrectly that the rumour of the soldier's death is untrue. It is pointed out that it is inevitable that there should be some cases in which casualties are omitted from the telegraphed lists, and that it must not be assumed that non-receipt of telegraphed notification is proof of the incorrectness of a rumour. In all such cases it should be sufficient to inform inquirers that no corroboration of the report or rumour has been received; and officers must avoid committing themselves to an answer which, if subsequently found to be incorrect, is calculated to cause additional pain to the inquirers.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

Will subscribers please note that only those subscriptions which are sent direct to the Manager of the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE, 3, York Street, Covent Garden, W.C., are dealt with by him? Subscriptions paid to London or to local newsgates do not reach the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE Offices, and consequently inquiries concerning missing copies, &c., should be sent to the Agent to whom the subscription is paid, and not to the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE Offices.

Subscribers, by sending their subscriptions direct to the Manager, will ensure regularity in the despatch of their Journals and an earlier delivery than the majority of Agents are able to effect. The rates of subscriptions, post free, from the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE Offices are:—

PROGRESS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

THE most striking event of the last few weeks, and unquestionably one of the most important, has been the offer of unconditional surrender by the Free State General Prinsloo to Sir Archibald Hunter. To be sure the facts, as first made known, have had to be considerably toned down, but there is no doubt that this handing in of arms by the Free States Commander marks a decided change for the better in the situation as a whole. There have been for some time past reports of dissension in the enemy's ranks and the dissatisfaction is not likely to be lessened as the Boers learn, as they must sooner or later, with what a deluge of misrepresentation they have been kept together. Once let the truth become known and faith in the late Presidents will be entirely lost. The end will then soon come. There is no worse policy for the leaders of undisciplined troops like these brave Dutch farmers to play than that of misleading information as to the true position of affairs. Yet it is to be feared that credulity has been played on to an enormous extent for some time past by the ex-Presidents, who are certain now the truth is known to suffer for their sins. The operations leading up to General Prinsloo's surrender have been marked throughout by unremitting care, patience, and perseverance. They were skilfully conceived and most gallantly carried out. The enemy when brought to bay made a vigorous and courageous stand, disputing the ground held by the converging columns with great determination. Lord Roberts, in a telegram from Pretoria on Sunday, gave some interesting particulars of the events that immediately preceded this partial collapse of the Free Staters. On the 27th ult. the occupation of Fouriesburg by General Hunter was reported. Mr. Steyn had for a long time successfully defied Generals Rundle and Brabant from this central retreat among the mountains south of Bethlehem, and its possession by the British was of first moment, so far as the campaign in the east of the Orange River Colony was concerned, especially as Sir Leslie Rundle had already driven the enemy from Commando Nek, the chief exit to the south. On the 26th ult., General Macdonald's Highland Brigade fought during the entire day in the Bethlehem Hills, and only succeeded as night fell in closing Naauwport Nek against the escape to the east of the Boer waggon train. Twice on Sunday was General Hunter's advance checked by the enemy, who defended with desperation two of the northern passes, which were cleared and taken at length by the 2nd Batn. Scots Guards, 1st Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, 2nd Batn. Wiltshire Regiment, and 1st Batn. Leinster Regiment. With the effectual closing of the passes leading from the Brandwater Basin the Boer general, finding escape impossible, was doubtless only too ready to negotiate terms of surrender. We believe we can now look forward to the early occupation of Harrisburg and Vrede, the last remaining towns of the former Free State still in the enemy's hands, and for intercommunication between the Orange River Colony and Natal through the Drakenberg. Sir Archibald Hunter's brigades will then be free to take part in the subjugation of Christian De Wet, while to Sir Leslie Rundle and General Brabant it may fall to complete the excellent work they have been doing on the Basuto border since their advance to the relief of Wepener in the early days of April by a continuance of their progress round the east of the Orange River Colony until Harrismith and Vrede are in their possession.

From a Lorenzo Marques telegram of the 27th we learned that Lord Roberts was in possession of Middleburg on the previous day, the enemy being in full retreat on Machadodorp. So far as we know the force under Louis Botha, which is opposed to that of the Commander-in-Chief, does not exceed a few thousand men, and as no serious stand is now being made by the Boer commander, a continuance of hostilities might well be pronounced farcical, were it not that the leaders of the Boers still affect to believe in the possibility of intervention in favour of their cause. This information was confirmed by Lord Roberts himself in a telegram on Saturday from Pretoria, whither he had returned from the front. The advance from Eerste-Fabriken to Middleburg was as rapid and brilliant, though less stoutly opposed, as his previous great forward movements since he entered the Orange Free State. The distance, about eighty miles, was traversed in four days, a rate of progress very creditable indeed for infantry, especially as it was maintained in the face of very inclement weather, entailing severe hardships on the force. The return of Lord Roberts to Pretoria may have been due to the apparent lack of seriousness in Botha's resistance, and to the unsettled condition of the districts west of Pretoria. General French is reported to have occupied Pan Station, ten miles to the east of Middleburg, his cavalry and mounted infantry, together with General Pole-Carew's Division of infantry, being apparently deemed sufficient to cope with the retreating Boer force. This view, moreover, is supported by the return to Pretoria of General Ian Hamilton, who has brought back his column, notwithstanding the rough time they have had, looking "very fit and workmanlike." Machadodorp, supposed to be the next objective in the east, is fifty miles from Middleburg, and whether the advance will now be pushed home without intermission or a temporary halt be made, must depend on the efficiency of the arrangements for keeping open the communications.

Meanwhile the Commander-in-Chief, from his more central headquarters at the capital, will doubtless take immediate steps for the complete and final suppression of the commandoes infesting the difficult country in the Megaliesberg Hills between Pretoria and Rustenburg, where General Baden-Powell is said to be practically invested, and even still further to the west as far as Zeerust, now threatened, according to report, by a small commando, composed, there is reason to believe, of forsworn burghers. The total of the militant burghers now in the Transvaal is not great, but split up into guerilla bands they are capable of causing an indefinite amount of annoyance, and even of neutralising the operations of much larger bodies of less mobile troops. General Botha's total force, widely scattered, is not supposed to exceed 6,000 men. Delarey is credited with 1,500 near Rustenburg, and Grobler with 500 in the bush veldt, north of the capital and the eastern railway. A Laffan's telegram of the 27th stated that a column under Colonel Hickman, proceeding apparently towards Rustenburg, found the enemy in force on the Crocodile River. Some skirmishing took place, but the British were not in sufficient strength to push the attack. Presumably more than one strong commando is at large between the Megaliesberg Hills and Potchefstroom, as Lord Methuen was engaged during the greater part of Sunday when on the march to Frederickstad en route to Potchefstroom. General Smith-Dorrien had a bout with the enemy on Tuesday, of which particulars were given in a despatch from Lord Roberts issued from the War Office yesterday. Of this action details appear elsewhere.

The rapidity of Louis Botha's flight before the British columns, and the comparative smallness of his force, give to his movements the character of a ruse to draw Lord Roberts from his base of supply, and lay bare his line of communications to predatory attacks from the northern veldt, where scattered parties of the enemy are known to be in hiding. The astute Boer general may have hoped also to give the attack on Rustenburg an indirect support by preventing its relief with an adequate force. The capture of Rustenburg, with General Baden-Powell in command of its garrison, would, even at this eleventh hour of the war, be deemed an achievement atoning for many past failures. It is satisfactory to learn that De Wet with his flying commando captured one train only between Kroonstad and the Vaal. The date of this feat was the 21st ult., and the actual loss to the British in prisoners was two officers and 100 men of the 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers. The new centre of disturbance formed by this bold and resourceful commander, who has been localised by report in an entrenched position near Reitzburg, a few miles south of the Vaal, must now be taken in hand and destroyed. With Generals Broadwood and Little holding him from the south, reinforced possibly by Sir Archibald Hunter, while Lord Methuen on the north of the Vaal menaces his rear, Christian De Wet should be at last effectually surrounded and brought to bay, with neither chance of further escape, nor valid excuse left him for longer delaying his unconditional surrender. The Pretoria-Natal railway, though now open to through traffic to Durban, is still subject to the attacks of guerilla bands. Lord Roberts has reported that during the night of the 26th the post at Vlaklaagte Station, fifteen miles west of Standerton, was twice attacked, but the enemy were successfully repulsed without having effected any damage. The attempts still made to wreck Sir Redvers Buller's line have compelled him to divide his strong force into many detachments, and this no doubt prevented him from giving to Lord Roberts a more effective co-operation during the advance on Middleburg. They will also explain General Clery's sudden return to Greylingstad, after marching eighteen miles north to Groot Spruit in support, apparently, of Lord Roberts's right flank. On the whole, we have reason to be satisfied. A study of the map will show how important the positions are which our troops hold. The present condition of guerilla warfare cannot last long, if only the public at home can be satisfied to wait patiently. Lord Roberts has placed his pieces with masterly judgment, and the least he can hope for, after all he has done, is the confidence of his fellow-countrymen in the last act of the drama, in which he has sustained the principal part so ably.

THE ALLIES IN CHINA.

THE reference of the leading journal to the divided command of the allied armies in the Crimea was not well inspired. "Very important joint operations, as, for example, in the Crimea," says our contemporary, "have been carried out successfully without any commander-in-chief, and there is no reason why they should not be so conducted" in China. Anyone at all acquainted with the facts of the case in 1854-5 would shudder at the notion of a Raglan-St. Arnaud combination on an enlarged scale being applied to the armies of the Great Powers in conducting what Mr. Gladstone would have termed "warlike operations" against the Chinese armies. A dip into Kinglake will open the eyes of those who do not know to the infinite dangers and disadvantages of dual commands. St. Arnaud, if one believes Kinglake, made an attempt to get the command of the English army from Lord Raglan before they left Turkey, and at the Alma, according to the same authority, Lord Raglan deliberately led St. Arnaud to believe that he would act in accordance with St. Arnaud's plan for the attack on the Russians, when he never intended to pay the least attention to it; indeed, after the battle was won, the all but fatal difference between the two generals as to the pursuit of the defeated Russians led to the three days' halt which saved Sebastopol, to the flank march, to Inkerman, Balaklava, the Tchernaya, the trenches, the assaults, and the fall of the south side on September 8, 1855—concerning each of which, and on many occasions besides, divided counsels entailed cruel losses of time and men. Quidquid delirant reges plectuntur Achivi. When French and English generals led an allied army to Peking, there was by no means cordial co-operation between them. To send six little armies—British, French, Russian, German, Japanese, American, with Italian and Austrian contingents—out into the Flowery Kingdom, each under an independent commander, to advance on Peking, seems most ill-advised. As an imitation of Chinese methods there might be some excuse for it, but the fact of the existence of the difficulty about the chief command reveals a rift in the lute. The Concert is disturbed by discordant notes, which will be heard with great pleasure by Li Hung Chang and the Peking officials and their creatures, who have been counting on such discords. There is no supreme direction over the generals as there was when Baron Gros and Lord Elgin represented France and England in 1860. The Ambassadors are prisoners—not dictators or negotiators—and if they fall into the hands of the Chinese there can be no doubt that they will be used by them as pawns in their game, as they certainly are guarantees for caution on the part of the Powers in dealing with those who have inflicted on all of them such indignities and outrages. It is evident that the Court of Peking will pose as benevolent guardians who have rescued the Legations from the violence of rebel conspirators, and who are deserving of thankful consideration, instead of condign punishment, as soon as the allies have approached the city, and the Chinese may hold a powerful lever over our action at the supreme moment. The interesting and valuable despatch of the Times correspondent at the British Legation, which appeared last Thursday, records a noble defence which deserves and necessitates the most strenuous efforts of the allied armies to effect the speedy liberation of the heroic garrison.

Army Notes.

The assassination of the King of Italy is likely to be identified with the closing year of the century when its material triumphs are forgotten. Even in the stormy days of Europe's historic past it would be difficult to find a parallel for such a dastardly crime. Here was a gallant and kindly gentleman, a hard working and conscientious ruler, a devoted husband and father, and the bullet of an assassin found him as though he had been the most tyrannical despot of his time. If ever a king deserved well of his subjects, it was the late King Humbert. When the dread shadow of cholera lay over the land, and there was danger of a panic, he walked through the hospitals to revive his people's failing courage. When Italy was struggling under the load of debt she had incurred by her wild ambition, he gave up half of his income until the tide of disaster turned. And at all times and in all places he has proved himself to be the admirable head of a constitutional State. That he is laid low in the midst of his usefulness is a crime against civilisation even more than it is a blow aimed at monarchy, as it is understood in this country. Nihilism in autocratic Russia is the result of a political; system anarchy in free self-governing Italy is an anomaly. Unfortunately it exists, and the release of Sipido with acclamation has given it new life. To his people and to the House of Savoy the sympathy of the British Empire goes out with no uncertain voice, for almost alone among the nations of Europe Italy has steadily maintained an attitude of friendliness towards this country throughout our troubles in South Africa. It is worthy of note that King Humbert and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, whose death has occurred this week were both born in the same year, 1844.

Although happily events in the Far East have been less terribly tragic than was at first reported, they have undoubtedly diverted much of the attention of the country from South Africa; and from the seat of war itself come indications of daily increasing weariness as the months pass by and the campaign still drags on, with desultory fighting here and there. Scattered over an immense area, and broken up into innumerable brigades and detachments, enduring all the discomforts of war and irritated by attacks difficult to foresee or to defeat, the main army of Great Britain finds itself after nearly ten months of hostilities, and at a most critical time, held tied and bound in South Africa. Happily the spirit of the troops and their morale continue to be excellent, and there need be no fear of any falling off in that respect. The task we have set ourselves, though heavy, is being surely, if slowly, accomplished. We sincerely hope with Mr. Wyndham that the provision of £61,000,000 to cover the expenses of the war to the end of February may exceed the requirements, and that before that time the country may be able to greet the returning troops, and give them a welcome that will make them think lightly of the hardships they have endured so gallantly and with so fine a spirit.

When the quality of the Boer as a guerilla fighter was doubted, it was never imagined that he would be left by an advancing army in possession of his horse, rifle, and guns; neither was it supposed that rebellion would be made as paying to-day as it was in the past. It is, however, true that his staying power has surprised the people who know him best. Christian de Wet is a type absolutely new in Boer warfare, and, therefore, one more instance of the extraordinary military adaptability of this nation of farmers. The cause is not far to seek. British generals have to hold a long line—in General Rundle's case a hundred miles—against an enemy familiar with every inch of the country, and mobile to a degree undreamed of at Aldershot. Unfortunately, we have taken no pains to discount these advantages. "Neutrals," transformed into loyal British subjects by taking an oath, whose sacredness they respect not, are allowed to join commandoes in the field as though the work of pacification were still to begin. Whitewashed burghers are left in places of trust, so that they are in a position to give information to the enemy. To this cause we owe the disaster to the Derbyshires; and Lennox, the man implicated, was only given five years' penal servitude! As for the burghers supposed to be neutral they are in constant communication with their friends in the field, supplying them with food, intelligence, and clothes, possibly even with shelter. In such circumstances guerilla warfare is bound to be successful, at any rate up to a certain point. The nature of General Prinsloo's surrender is proof sufficient, if proof were needed, that the spirit of the Boer remains unbroken even in the Orange River Colony. Happily General Hunter, acting under Lord Roberts's orders, refused an armistice, or the whole of the enemy would have escaped in the footsteps of De Wet. They dared not cross the Basuto border, or they would have been exposed to the hatred of the Basutos with many wrongs to avenge, and the Boer, in this respect, showed a discrimination of evils. In these circumstances the long and difficult task of General Rundle should soon be finished. In holding General Prinsloo personally responsible for the surrender of his army and artillery, Lord Roberts is merely obeying a sound military principle.

A staff officer lately in the field in South Africa sends us his views on those of Mr. Winston Churchill published in the Morning Post. It is only fair perhaps to allow our worthy correspondent to express himself in his own words:—

 "Mr. Winston Churchill, who has so well upheld his reputation as special correspondent of the Morning Post in South Africa, having now returned to England, has been interviewed on the subject of the war and its lessons. Mr. Churchill is an old cavalry officer, and he is naturally only too ready to defend his own arm, which has been accused of not having done as much as was expected of it. But how could it? Mr. Churchill's reply is in effect that cavalymen in South Africa were not armed for the work they were required to perform. 'What use,' he asks, 'were lances, swords, and carbines against men of the stamp of the Boers, all cavalry of the best type, i.e., good riders, good shots, and trained scouts.' It will be a revelation to many to learn that the Boers possessed these qualities, for at the beginning of the war, as we know, the contention was that mounted troops were not wanted in South Africa at all, and it was with difficulty the War Office could be persuaded to accept Colonial offers. It would almost seem that the Boers have turned out to be everything that it was thought in official quarters) that they were not, and have failed signally in all the qualities in which was believed they would excel. This being the case, it would scarcely be desirable for us to alter the whole of our military arrangements on the strength of the lessons which this war has taught, otherwise we might cut a very poor show in our next big campaign, which may be against an army very differently constituted to that which ex-Presidents Kruger and Steyn have put into the field. There is no denying that the Boers have scored tremendously over our troops in some respects. And why have they done so? Only because their methods have been so unconventional. To argue, therefore, that the sword and the lance are useless toys, because they have proved to be so in South Africa—the argument would scarcely hold good in the case of Blandlaagte—is very unsound reasoning, and I trust will not be taken too seriously. I can imagine no teaching better calculated to lead to mischief from all I have seen, even in this campaign. As an old cavalry officer Mr. Winston Churchill does not view with favour the employment of mounted infantry so largely, but, if we are to accept the official accounts, the mounted infantry have been of the greatest value. The occasions certainly have been many in which the Imperial Yeomanry and the Colonials have not only led the pace but rendered very valuable service. Generals French and Sir George White do not, to my knowledge, support the views of the late representative of the Morning Post under this head. Nor does Sir Redvers Buller, who has expressed himself in very different terms in his published despatches with reference to the Imperial Light Horse, which corps has been unequalled as a fighting machine. As for Lord Dundonald, his brigade, which has done really all the difficult mounted work in Natal—and done it admirably, too—is composed almost exclusively of improvised cavalry. Lord Dundonald is a cavalry officer of wide experience, and yet he also is of opinion that mounted infantry are an invaluable adjunct to cavalry, especially in a campaign like that in which we are now engaged. Having been in a position to know what many of the generals in the field think, I am sorry to say I differ entirely from Mr. Churchill."

The military strength of England is despised by our friends on the Continent in peace time, and held up to scorn in the event of a great war such as that going on in South Africa. Nevertheless, when anything has to be done in the interests of civilisation and the world at large, it is on England that the burden of the duty falls. In Egypt and in Crete, to go no further back, it was this country which put an end to an intolerable situation and restored order, though all the other Powers were equally concerned in the business. In China it looks as if history meant to repeat itself again. At the present moment England is engaged in a great war, which looks up the flower of her Army, and she has a small war on her hands in Ashanti. All her great rivals, with the exception of America, are free from any serious complication, and Germany is in the happy position of readiness to face any emergency. Nevertheless, England is better prepared to take part in an advance on Peking than any other of the Powers. Why is this? Russia, whose military strength has lain like a weight on Europe and Asia for twenty years, should surely justify her claim to supremacy in the Far East by showing hampered England the way. Germany, too, which laughed recently at our disasters in South Africa, should set us an example. France has pointed out our military shortcomings over and over again. Is she more ready than ourselves? The military strength of Europe is once again content to be led by despised England, working with the United States and Japan. Truly there is nothing that tries nations, as well as individuals, like war.

"Administrator" wrote to the Times the other day a letter, which was printed in large type, on the subject of "Army Administration." The purport of his communication was to show that the Secretary of State for War confuses two distinct issues—the organisation of the Army and the system under which that Army is administered. His lordship has undertaken that "We shall approach these questions with minds unbiassed by preconceived notions, and with the determination to ask Parliament for the means of giving effect to any changes which are proved to be necessary" when the war in South Africa is over, and we are in position to obtain "ample opportunity of conferring with distinguished soldiers, who will be able to give us most valuable evidence on points of importance." To this decision "Administrator" takes exception. The charges against the War Office, he contends, "have been definitely formulated, and are supported by the masses of evidence officially published, and recently corroborated by painful experience." We hold no brief for the War Office. We are among those who think that the policy pursued for years past by the heads of that department in resisting all criticism has been in the highest degree damaging alike to the department itself, the Army, and the Empire. We recognise with satisfaction the tendency which has existed for some time to reverse that policy. As we understand Lord Lansdowne, he does not say that the office over which he presides is a perfect one, or that the system is beyond improvement, but he does favour the idea of our not tampering with the organisation that we have, until we can feel that we have brought to a really successful issue the war in South Africa at least. As to the wisdom of that policy there ought to be no question. The adoption of "Administrator's" suggestion would be worse than madness, and no wonder War Office officials say that their critics are impossible when they will go to the length that this correspondent has done. Would the heads of any large business undertaking regard with favour a proposal emanating from shareholders for a complete rearrangement of their system whilst engaged in executing a big contract? We have no hesitation in saying that the idea, if mooted, would be scouted as suicidal. Yet this is what some would have the War Office do.

Mr. Seddon's Colonial Army scheme is an important development. Time was when Canada led the Empire; to-day it is Australia; in a few years' time, it is to be hoped, the proud distinction will belong to South Africa. Last July Queensland set the magnificent wave of Colonial loyalty rolling towards South Africa by the offer of troops. New Zealand was the first to land a contingent in Cape Town; she is the first to devise a scheme for the organisation of a Colonial Army and Naval Reserve. Not only has it been presented to Parliament, but it has been referred to a Select Committee, and forwarded to the Home Government and the governments of Canada and Australia. That a conference must be called to discuss it is obvious. The scheme is an excellent one, and has much in common with the scheme advanced by Lord Brassey, but it is more detailed and on a bigger scale. It is, however, mainly important as the second great step taken by the Colonies towards hearing their share of military and naval responsibilities. The first was the voluntary offer of contingents during the present campaign in South Africa. Hence we must suppose that the Colonials are very much in earnest. That Mr. Seddon's scheme will find favour in Australia and the Dominion there is little doubt. It is so entirely adapted to Colonial conditions that no other is likely to take its place. The only point which is likely to provoke discussion is the basis of payment, which, with goodwill on both sides, should not prove a serious obstacle to agreement. An army of mounted infantry, 100,000 strong, unequalled the world over as scouts, riders, and shots, and a Naval Reserve recruited from the hardy fishermen of the Atlantic Coast, are additions to England's material strength which any other Power would be overjoyed to receive.

The Premier of New Zealand, Reuter's agent at Wellington telegraphs, disapproves of the action of the military authorities in South Africa in giving discharges to the members of the New Zealand Contingent. He says that the men were sent out as soldiers, not as policemen, and he fully expected that they would continue as such until the conclusion of the war and then return to New Zealand. The objection is most reasonable. If a British force were sent to New Zealand, the Home Government would naturally object to men being taken from their regiments, and provided with positions in the colony without permission being first obtained. It is a matter which might easily be arranged, but any high-handed action on the part of the Home Government might result in so much mischief that we trust the explanations will be satisfactory. We cannot bring ourselves to believe that offers have been made to the men to accept service in South Africa permanently without due representation having been made to the Government of New Zealand, for, if such has been the case, someone must have blundered egregiously.

Mr. McNeill objects to the employment of the general manager of the London and South-Eastern Railway on the Commission inquiring into the hospital arrangements in South Africa, because he is a member of the Army Railway Committee. We should not like, of course, to set our opinions against those of such an eminent authority on military matters as Mr. McNeill, but, in our humble opinion, Lieut.-Colonel Harrison is a man beyond all others fitted to sit on the Commission, because he is a member of the Army Railway Board. That Board is only a consultative one, and, apart from the very valuable advice which Colonel Harrison will be able to give to the Commission, the insight he will gain into the difficulties of railway transport in war cannot fail to be of great benefit to the Army Railway Committee.

Mr. Balfour on Thursday night confirmed the statement we made some weeks ago that the Government propose to ask Parliament for a grant for pensions for the widows and allowances for the children of men who have lost their lives in South Africa. The exact amount of such pensions and allowances has not yet been settled, but they will be quite irrespective of the money available for this purpose as a result of public subscriptions; the latter will be applicable for such additions to the scale of pensions as may be found desirable after inquiry by local committees. The decision arrived at by the Government will, we are sure, commend itself to everyone interested in the Service. It has long been a scandal that the widows and children of men who have given their lives for their country should often have to seek relief from the rates. Parliament will not be asked to make any grant this session, and between now and next year the Government might very well consider the expediency of improving the scale of pensions given to the wives of commissioned officers. The scale at present is absurdly low.

Although the text of the Report of the Select Committee on War Office contracts has not yet been made public, the general effect of the findings of the Committee has leaked out. The conclusions arrived at do not promise to be very definite, but that, perhaps, was inevitable, considering the nature of the matters that had to be investigated. The report is described as "exculpatory," and in this it only realises the expectations of those who have followed the proceedings of the Committee and have had the advantage of listening to the evidence taken. The Committee, we understand, find that there is no evidence of corruption on the part of Government officials, but they do not seem entirely satisfied with the present system of giving out contracts. It seems, in fact, a matter of general remark that to obtain a War Office contract you have to "know how to go about it," as some of the witnesses put it, and that in order to get your goods passed you have to "know how to do it." We do not suggest that there has been anything in the nature of direct bribery, but it might be well with a view to prevent defective stores being supplied to our troops that effect should be given to the proposal that the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, should in future be made applicable to officials in public departments instead of, as at present, to municipal bodies only. As we suggested some time ago, too, Lord Russell of Killowen's Bill directed against the giving of Commissions might also do good if only the Government could see their way to take it in hand and pass it into law. Another matter that demands attention is the reopening of contracts, and we cordially endorse the suggestion that where tenders are allowed to be reopened for any reason in the case of one of a number of contracting firms, all the other firms should be afforded a like opportunity of revising theirs. The committee are said to recommend in their report that, in order to avoid any appearance of pressure or favouritism, it is desirable that members of Parliament should not attend at the War Office or Admiralty with reference to contracts or interview Government officials on the subject. This is a very wise proviso, which members of Parliament interested will, we hope, take to heart. On the whole, the inquiry, though not quite so conclusive as might have been wished, has served a useful purpose, and has tended to clear the air of some of the tittle-tattle and scandal that was only too rampant a short time back. It has established the fact that where bribes have been offered to officials, and such attempts at corruption have been brought to light, the offending firms have had their name struck off the War Office List. We shall have something more to say on the Report when the text of it lies before us, but, meanwhile, we would wish to testify to the thorough and businesslike way in which the Committee has done its work. It has shown a degree of intelligence and despatch not always met with in similar bodies, and in composition was thoroughly representative, consisting as it did of five barristers, four military men, two ship-owners, one engineer, one railway director, one railway contractor, and one journalist. The Committee's report is a further proof of Lord Lansdowne's ability and honesty of purpose.

Lord Rosebery's proposal that when the Commander-in-Chief happens to have a seat in the Upper Chamber he should be encouraged to state his views on military matters is a subject rather for constitutionalists and politicians to decide than for military men. The discussion that took place in the House of Lords last night was, however, of interest to all who are concerned for the welfare of the Service. The Lords did not pronounce any decision on the subject, but the arguments for and against the expert advisers of a civilian Secretary of State making their opinions public were brought out very fully. There is no doubt, as Lord Rosebery said, that the word of the Commander-in-Chief as to the adequacy or otherwise of our national defences at the present moment would carry great weight. But, on the other hand, there is no contesting the Prime Minister's point that if anyone holding Lord Wolseley's position is to express his opinions at all it must not be only when he is in agreement with the Secretary of State, but also when he disapproves of the policy that is being pursued. There is danger, too, of the Commander-in-Chief being turned into a political partisan. On the other hand we hardly agree with Lord Lansdowne that if a Commander-in-Chief disagrees with the military policy of the Cabinet on some vital matter he can make his feeling public by resigning his post. This is not always feasible. Let us put a hypothetical case. It is conceivable that Lord Wolseley might not have agreed with Lord Lansdowne in the measures taken at the outbreak of the war in South Africa. We hardly think the action of any Commander-in-Chief would be approved who threw up his post in such a crisis. Rather would his action be condemned as unpatriotic. The whole question raised by Lord Rosebery, however, is very debatable, and as we have said, is one rather for constitutionalists than for military men.

Not for the first time Lord Wemyss entered a protest in the House of Lords last night against the Government's proposals for increasing the efficiency of the auxiliary forces. The views held by the noble lord on military matters are now fairly familiar. He regards the Militia Ballot as the panacea for all evils, and in his zeal is disposed to overlook political and other difficulties that stand in the way of the realisation of his dreams. His lordship also seems unable to see any merit in any scheme that falls short of his ideal. Lord Lansdowne's proposals for making the Militia liable for foreign service find no favour in his eyes, and though by doing so he laid himself open to the charge of slaying the already slain, he could not forbear sending a parting shaft last night at the plan put forward by the War Office earlier in the session, but now dropped for enabling Volunteers willing to do so to also accept liability for service abroad. These matters have been fully discussed in the past and we are inclined to follow Lord Lansdowne's example in not considering them in detail again now. We desire, however, to cordially welcome the Secretary of State's assurance that in the measures to be taken for providing the forces more adequately with artillery, the lessons of the South African War are not to be overlooked, regard being had for the need of guns of position.

There is much to be said in favour of the breaking up of the amalgamated Militia units which took effect from Wednesday last. The corps affected are the 3rd and 4th Batns. Royal Lancaster Regiment, 5th and 6th Batns. Liverpool Regiment, 5th and 6th Batns. Lancashire Fusiliers, 3rd and 4th Batns. Scottish Rifles, 5th and 6th Batns. Worcestershire Regiment, 3rd and 4th Batns. South Staffordshire Regiment, 5th and 6th Batns. Manchester Regiment, and 3rd and 4th Batns. Highland Light Infantry. We fail to see any good that could have resulted to the Service by the mixture of personnel; indeed, the regiments concerned must in some respects have been placed at a considerable disadvantage. There was this to be said at least in favour of the old arrangement, that in case one battalion was abroad the other could be a feeder to it. But this one excuse for continuing the system was removed when both the 3rd and 4th Batns. Royal Lancaster Regiment were sent on active service to South Africa. We feel convinced that in the end the break-up of the battalions and creation of distinct commands will prove acceptable, even if at present there exists a feeling in certain quarters that interests may suffer. As we have pointed out more than once, it only required a general embodiment of the Militia to show how clumsy the double battalion organisation was. Three months of permanent duty have sufficed to bring home to those in authority the necessity for a change which might well have been brought in before the battalions came up in May last.

All doubts on the subject of the South African war decoration have now been removed. Lord Lansdowne denies the truth of the report which has been widely circulated, that a separate war medal, or decoration, is to be issued to Colonial troops. The Colonial forces will receive the South African medal, which will be bestowed upon the whole of the troops, British and Colonial, and it will be a medal usual in such cases. With regard to the question of honours, it has been decided that a fair proportion of the rewards which may be granted will fall to the Colonial troops. As yet, however, it would be impossible, of course, to form any estimate as to the extent of the rewards. This can only be determined when the campaign is over and the final despatches are received from the officer in chief command. Some seem to think that information ought to be forthcoming as to the intentions of the Government. All we can say is that those who take this view are not only very unreasonable but very ignorant of the usual causes of procedure in such cases.

RIFLE RANGE FOR LONDON.—The General Purposes Committee of the London County Council have prepared a scheme for providing the London Volunteers with a rifle range up to 1,000 yards at Lea Marshes, Ponder's End. The cost is estimated at £164,000, of which amount the War Office will contribute half.

THE QUEEN, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Duke and Duchess of York have withdrawn their patronage from the Royal Military Benevolent Fund. Mr. Ellis Williams, the hon. treasurer, desires it to be known, however, so as to prevent possible misconception, that the decision is in no way due to any inaccuracy in the accounts of the fund.

THE THAMES DISTRICT MOBILISATION.—The 3rd and 4th Batns. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers go from Aldershot to Chatham on Tuesday next to take part in the experimental mobilisation of the Thames District. The other Militia battalions to be engaged in the mobilisation are the 5th Lancashire Fusiliers and 5th Rifle Brigade at Chatham; the 3rd and 4th Connaught Rangers at Gravesend; 4th Essex from Colchester; and 7th Rifle Brigade from Shorncliffe. The 2nd City of London Rifles went to Sheerness on the 28th inst. to take part in the mobilization, and will be followed by the 3rd City of London, the 15th Middlesex, and the two Tower Hamlets Volunteer battalions. These corps, with the 2nd City of London, and the Post Office Rifles, previously encamped at Minster, belonging to the East London Brigade, are allotted to the Thames District in the scheme of mobilisation for home defence.

UNIVERSITY CANDIDATES.—The names of those qualified for commissions in the cavalry and infantry of the Line, after examination by the Civil Service Commissioners, are:—K. J. Campbell, M. L. S. Clements, N. C. Duncan, F. Etheridge, P. C. F. Gibson, R. Hodgins, R. Hovil, B. S. Jewell, G. F. Hudson-Kinahan, P. L. Leared, C. P. Marten, W. M. Royston-Pigott, A. L. Prince, Hon. H. C. O'C. Prittie, H. K. Sadler, K. H. Stenning, H. S. Winthrop. The medical examination has still to be passed.

THE well-known business of Matthews and Co., of Portsea, naval outfitters, which has been established upwards of 70 years, has recently been registered as a limited liability company, and will henceforth be known as Matthews and Co., Portsmouth, Limited. Since the death of the late Mr. H. G. Matthews, J.P., the business has been continued on behalf of the widow and family, and will henceforth be carried on for their benefit by the company on the same lines as heretofore, the whole of the shares being retained in the family. The conversion is, in fact, of a purely private character, and no shares are being offered to the public. Mr. Matthews, the brother of the late Mr. H. G. Matthews, and his eldest son, Mr. C. E. Matthews, are directors of the new company. The old-established business of Seagrove and Co., of 22 and 23, The Hard, Portsea, which was also the property of the late Mr. H. G. Matthews, has been similarly converted for the same reasons, there being no issue of shares to the public. Mr. C. E. Matthews is also a director of Seagrove and Co., Limited.

CANTEEN AND MESS CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, Ltd., 23, Regency Street, Westminster.—This Society is a union of Cantens and Messes formed for mutual benefit of the Services at home and abroad. It supplies every canteen or mess requisite.

Army Personal.

An Army Order was issued from the War Office on Tuesday to the effect that:—

"The Commander-in-Chief has received the Queen's commands to direct, on the present melancholy occasion of the death of Admiral of the Fleet H.R.H. Alfred Ernest Albert, reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha (Duke of Edinburgh), K.G., K.T., K.P., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., Personal A.D.C. to the Queen, Honorary Colonel of the Royal Marines, second son of her Majesty, that the officers of the Army be required to wear when in uniform a band of black crape round the left arm, as prescribed by the regulations. The mourning will commence from Aug. 2 and be continued until Sept. 13 next."

The late Duke of Saxe-Coburg had held the Honorary Colonelcy of the Edinburgh Artillery Militia since June 24, 1874, and of the 3rd Batn. Black Watch since June 21, 1887.

The Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, and the Duke of Connaught have left England for Coburg to attend the funeral to-day of the Grand Duke (the Duke of Edinburgh). The Duke of Cambridge has gone to Homburg for three weeks to take the waters.

The Duke of Connaught visited the Curragh at the end of last week for three days, and during his stay inspected the Reserve Regiment of Dragoon Guards, under command of Lieut.-Colonel J. P. Douglas. The regiment was highly complimented on its fine appearance.

Princess Henry of Battenberg inspected the Hampshire and Isle of Wight Artillery, of which the Duke of Connaught is Honorary Colonel, at Sandown on the 27th ult. Her Royal Highness was met by Major-Generals Stewart, C.B., commanding R.A. Southern District, and Turner, C.B., Inspector-General of Auxiliary Forces. Colonel Moore-Lane was in command of the regiment, which was greatly admired by all present for its soldierly bearing. At the conclusion of the parade the Princess drove to Beachfield, where the officers gave a garden party. Colonel Moore-Lane was highly complimented by Her Royal Highness on the result of the parade.

General Sir Henry Thuillier, C.S.I., Colonel Commandant Royal Artillery, has just completed his eighty-seventh year. Sir Henry is as active as most men twenty years his junior, and enjoys the best of health.

The will of General Lord Mark Kerr, G.C.B., Colonel Somersetshire Light Infantry, has been proved by his nephews, Major-General Lord Ralph Kerr, C.B., and Mr. A. H. Kerr, the executors, under £21,148 15s. 8d.

The will of General H. Renny, C.S.I., Colonel of the 2nd Batn. Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, of 34, Evelyn Gardens, S.W., who died on April 4, has been proved by Mrs. E. A. Renny, the widow and executrix, under £17,462 9s. 1d.

The Mayor of Newcastle, at the meeting of the City Council on Tuesday, read a letter from Major Baden-Powell, dated Mafeking, June 9, stating that his brother, Lieut.-General Baden-Powell, was highly sensible of the honour which the council desired to pay him by conferring upon him the freedom of the city. He would be glad to accept the distinction, but was unable to fix any date for his visit.

Lieut.-General Sir George Luck, commanding the troops in Bengal, has lately submitted a series of suggestions regarding the reduction of military expenditure in his command, and the Government of India has expressed its indebtedness for many valuable ideas.

The Scots Guards are now represented in South Africa by no fewer than five officers of General's rank, viz.: Lieut.-Generals Sir F. Forestier Walker and Lord Methuen, and Major-Generals Barrington Campbell, Inigo Jones, and Paget.

Many old brother officers and comrades will learn with sincere regret of the death of Major-General Thomas Talbot, late of the 2nd West Indian Regiment. He was one of the best type of officers from the ranks, and seldom has a selection been better justified. If officers of the stamp of the late General Talbot could be more frequently drawn from the ranks the term 'ranker' would never carry a reproach. In twenty years he passed through all the grades from Ensign to Major-General, in which rank he retired on retired pay. He had, at different periods held staff appointments, and saw some fighting in West Africa. There is one peculiarity about his service. Technically he was never a private soldier, as his promotion to corporal bore the same date as his enlistment. As a commanding officer he was a marked success, and the regret at his retirement was universal. He handed over the regiment in first-rate order. The funds of the various institutions were in a flourishing condition. A staff officer who served with him writes:—"I never remember such a scene as when Tommy Talbot left Jamaica on his retirement from the Service. Soldiers and civilians were gathered together to say, 'farewell.' The men of the '2nd West' were in a very excited state. They laughed, embraced, and cried by turns. The officers were sorry to lose a genial, warm-hearted friend, who possessed all the virtues expressed by the word, 'straight.'"

Major-General F. S. Russell, C.M.G., as was expected, has been appointed Colonel of the Royal Dragoons. He joined the regiment as 2nd Lieut.-Colonel in exchange from the 14th Hussars, and commanded it from 1882 to 1887.

Major-General Sir James Maurice will conduct the cycling manoeuvres which are to take place from to-day until Monday next in Sussex. The idea originated with General Maurice, who is a great believer in the military cyclist. Every arrangement has been made for an instructive series of operations.

Major-General Sir William Gatacre opened a Soldiers' Home at Warley on Monday. The establishment of the institution is largely due to the efforts of Mrs. Stephenson, wife of Major-General T. E. Stephenson, who obtained subscriptions of £50 each from Lord Wolseley and Sir Evelyn Wood. In declaring the building open, Sir William Gatacre said he looked on it as one of the signposts along the road towards the soldiers' comfort when they saw such buildings being opened practically all over England and Scotland. It was a sign that not only the Army was taking an interest in the Army, but that the whole civilian population was helping to improve the position of the soldier.

Major-General J. B. B. Dickson, C.B., has been appointed Military Governor of Middleburg since its occupation by Lieut.-General French.

Major-General R. H. O'Grady Haly, C.B., D.S.O., assumed command of the Canadian Dominion Forces at Ottawa on Monday, on appointment, in succession to Major-General Hutton, C.B.

The vacancy on the generals' list caused by the retirement of Major-General F. G. Berkeley is filled by the promotion of Colonel Sir Charles Hotted Smith.

Brigadier-General E. J. Lugard, late King's Own Regiment, completes his period of command of a second class district in India on the 20th inst., and will return to England, his successor on the Madras Establishment being Brigadier-General H. B. MacCall, C.B., D.A.G., Punjab.

Brigadier-General H. L. Dundas, commanding the Infantry Brigade at Malta, who attained the age limit as a colonel on Wednesday, is to be retained on the Active List in the present emergency, and until further orders.

Brigadier-General D. C. Cooper, late Royal Dublin Fusiliers, is stated to have relieved Major-General FitzRoy Hart, C.B., in command at Heidelberg.

The Prince of Wales, as Grand Master of English Freemasons, has appointed Brigadier-General J. Davis, A.D.C., Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, in place of the Earl of Onslow, resigned.

Brigadier-General J. T. Cummins, D.S.O., I.S.C., commanding the Madras District, will command the new brigade which has this week been ordered to proceed on service to China, consisting of the 4th and 20th Punjabis, 6th Bengalies, and a regiment of Hyderabad infantry.

Colonel W. G. Du Boulay completes his term in the rank of Lieut.-Colonel on the 12th inst., and will be placed on half-pay, being succeeded as Commanding R. E., Isle of Wight, by Major W. A. E. St. Clair, who is about to be promoted to his Lieut.-Colonelcy.

Colonel A. G. Raper, A.Q.M.G., who was selected some time ago, takes up command of the troops in Jamaica immediately with the rank of Major-General, vice Major-General H. J. Hallows, whose extended term has expired. Colonel Raper's departure from Headquarters is much regretted, for he has proved himself a Staff officer of exceptional ability.

Colonel R. S. R. Fetherstonhaugh, late King's Royal Rifles, who was seriously wounded in the fighting on the Modder River, and Mrs. Fetherstonhaugh, together with Colonel C. H. B. Norcott, who commanded the 1st Batn. Rifle Brigade, and afterwards a brigade in the operations for the relief of Ladysmith, dined with the Queen and Royal Family at Osborne, on the 27th ult.

Colonel R. Auld, as arranged some time ago, takes Colonel Raper's place as A.Q.M.G. Headquarters.

Colonel S. L. Jacob, C.I.E., R.E., Indian Public Works Department, has been permitted to retire on pension.

Colonel J. C. R. Glasgow, late Suffolk Regiment, who succeeded Colonel E. Nesbitt in command of the 6th Regimental District at Warwick on Monday last, may consider himself lucky in one respect. He was only placed on half-pay after filling a Staff appointment in India in April, and within four months he gets employment. But there is another side to the picture, for he will be fifty-seven on August 24, 1901, so that he cannot hope to escape retirement for age disqualification.

Colonel D. F. Lewis, C.B., A.D.C., late Cheshire Regiment, has resigned his appointment in the Egyptian Army.

Colonel F. H. Plowden, 2nd Batn. Oxfordshire Light Infantry, has been selected to officiate in command of a 2nd Class District in India, and will be brought on to the establishment of A.A.G.'s on the 2nd prox., when Colonel F. S. F. Stokes completes his five years as A.A.G. Mhow District.

It was stated lately that Colonel E. W. D. Ward, C.B., A.S.C., Director of Supplies in South Africa, would come home to join the Headquarters Staff as A.Q.M.G. in succession to Colonel J. T. Skinner, C.B., whose term has expired. The appointment has now been confirmed.

Colonel J. Willcocks, C.M.G., D.S.O., has been promoted to be K.C.M.G. in further recogdition of his services while in command of the Kumasi Expedition. Colonel J. Willcocks received a telegram from the Queen congratulating him and the troops under his command on their splendid achievement in effecting the relief of Kumasi in circumstances of such exceptional difficulty.

Colonel Sir Charles H. Leslie, Bart., I.S.C., Colonel on the Staff, Cawnpore, has been appointed officiating Brigadier-General commanding Allahabad District, vice Brigadier-General Dyce, employed as D.A.G. to Lieut.-General Sir G. Luck, Bengal.

Colonel C. W. Muir, 17th Bengal Infantry, has been appointed officiating Colonel on the Staff to command at Ferozepore.

Colonel the Duke of Argyll, 1st Argyll and Bute Volunteer Artillery, who was formerly a captain in the London Scottish Volunteers, has been nominated for the honorary colonelcy vice Lord Wemyss, resigned.

Colonel the Duke of Fife, 1st Banff Volunteer Artillery, has accepted the presidency of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society.

Slatin Pasha, after a six months' stay in the Soudan, has returned to Austria. He will shortly visit England.

The Countess of Airlie has indicated her approval of the proposal to erect a monument to the late Earl, killed at the head of his regiment, the 12th Lancers, in action before Pretoria on June 11, on some eminence near the family seat of Cortachy, in Forfarshire, and the memorial will therefore take this form.

Lieut.-Colonel C. G. Mansel, I.S.C., commanding 3rd Bombay Cavalry, is permitted to retire on pension.

Lieut.-Colonel J. A. Nunn, C.I.E., D.S.O., has been appointed Assistant to the Director-General Army Veterinary Department, on promotion.

Lieut.-Colonel C. V. B. Kuper, R.A., has received the thanks of the Director of the Indian Army Remount Department for the services rendered by him in the purchase of mules in Italy last year.

Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel C. A. Anderson, R.H.A., who has been officiating as A.A.G. at headquarters, Punjab, has been appointed an A.A.G. on the establishment.

Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel E. S. Childers, now at Malta, has been selected to succeed Colonel C. R. Conder as commanding R.E., Weymouth, the latter being about to be placed on half-pay.

Captain and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel C. V. Townshend has been promoted to a Majority in the Royal Fusiliers from the Indian Staff Corps. This is the first occasion on which an officer of the Staff Corps has been so promoted to a Line regiment since the introduction of the selection system thirty years ago. Colonel Townshend has had a distinguished career for one of his age, and nearly all his service has been spent out of India.

Major H. W. Wilberforce, 2nd Dragoon Guards, has been appointed Chief of the Police at Pretoria.

Major G. A. P. Haines, retired list, 7th Hussars, Governor of the Military Prison at Malta, has been transferred to Dublin in relief of Captain G. S. Haines, who succeeds Lieut.-Colonel H. Waring as Governor of the Military Prison at Gosport.

Majors E. S. May, R. A. G. Harrison, C. T. Blewitt, C. M. Barlow, W. Apsley-Smith, and A. Bell-Irving have been commanding Brigade Divisions, R.F.A., in South Africa, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Major C. V. Wingfield-Stratford, who is about to be promoted, has been selected for the appointment of Commanding R.E., Plymouth sub-district, vice Colonel T. R. Main, who vacates on proceeding on active service to South Africa.

Major E. A. Altham, Royal Scots, who has been on the Intelligence Staff in South Africa since the beginning of the war, is about to resume the duties of his former appointment as D.A.A.G. at Headquarters. Major Althaus joined the staff of the Intelligence Department as Staff-Captain in April, 1897.

Major J. E. Caunter, Lancashire Fusiliers, who has been D.A.A.G. for Intelligence in South Africa since the beginning of December last, has been appointed Professor of Tactics, Military Administration and Law at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst.

Major (Captain) H. R. Beddoes, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, who has been serving with the West African Field Force since June 1899, has, according to a telegram from the Gold Coast, been selected for an independent command in Ashanti. He left Bekwai on the 25th ult. with 400 men West African Frontier Force and 100 West African Regiment, and one 77 millimetre gun and two 7prs. for Kwisa, to garrison that place, open the line of communication, and destroy the Adansi villages.

Major W. C. Hyslop, 1st Shropshire and Staffordshire Volunteer Artillery, is acting as A.D.C. to Major-General T. A. Cooke, commanding at Salisbury Plain.

Major J. G. Hunter, I.S.C., is appointed to the command of the 10th Bengal Infantry, vice Colonel C. W. J. Hingston vacated, and is succeeded as second in command by Major R. M. Maxwell, from the 6th Bengal Light Infantry.

Majors Parsons and Cronin, of the Indian Staff Corps, who went to Peking last year to study Chinese, are officially reported to be safe at Wei-ha-Wei.

Major Crimmin, V.C., I.M.S., has been appointed Health Officer of the port of Bombay, vice Lieut.-Colonel F. F. MacCartie, C.I.E.

Brevet-Major W. G. L. Benyon, D.S.O., 3rd Goorkhas, has joined the Military Secretariat in India as an officiating Assistant Secretary.

Captain C. Jackson, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, has applied to retire.

A CANADIAN OKEHAMPTON.

(FROM OUR CANADIAN CORRESPONDENT).

Beautifully situated on the Bay of Quinte, in the Province of Ontario, lies the Indian Reserve of Deseronto, which Lieut.-Colonel F. G. Stone, R.A., commanding the Canadian Artillery, has selected to be the combined Okehampton and Salisbury Plain of Canada.

In 1899 competitive practice was carried out at Deseronto by detachments from a large number of field batteries. These detachments consisted of the officers, "No. 1's," and gunlayers, the working numbers being supplied, together with guns, teams, and drivers, by "A" Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery. This year, however, a great advance has been made, as many as five complete field batteries being in camp at the same time, and one brigade division following close on the heels of another until the conclusion of the camp. Colonel Stone had organised every detail some time beforehand, so that every battery commander before coming into camp knew exactly what would be expected of him. The staff was composed of officers on the Reserve or unattached lists, there being no officers of the Permanent Field Artillery now in Canada.

The first five days were devoted to strict drill and instruction, with one or two lectures by the camp commandant to prepare officers for the more advanced training which was ahead of them. Then followed three days of more advanced training, brigade division drill, and tactical operations, in which scouting formed a prominent feature. Finally three days of inspection and gun practice, including brigade division practice, wound up the short period of 12 days' training which is allowed for field artillery in Canada. From 50 to 80 per cent. of the men in camp were recruits; the horses being usually furnished by the drivers, who own them.

One of the most novel spectacles was the manoeuvring of a brigade division under the personal command of Colonel Stone. The brigade division was to advance, with a view to occupying a position, to attack a supposed enemy's artillery; the brigade division was moved along a road in column of route, then column of sections was formed in a wide lane under cover, the commander galloping to the front to reconnoitre, placing his adjutant on the centre of the position selected and his sergeant-major 200 yards in rear, to mark the line of target; the commander then returned to bring up his brigade division, forming line, and getting rapidly across the fire-swept zone in that formation. After a short time in action the enemy, being in inferior strength, was supposed to have got the worst of it, and a further advance was made in pursuit. The pursuit was destined to be interrupted, however, for suddenly the brigade division commander, who was about 300 yards ahead, turned abruptly, sounding his whistle, and giving the signal for "Halt—action—front," at the same time his word of command "Cavalry in front—case" was heard as he galloped full speed to get under cover and unmask his guns. In correct line and without a pause, the three batteries came into action with case, and demolished the daring cavalry target, which had emerged from cover not more than 700 yards from the advancing line. It may safely be said that such a sight was never seen before in Canada.

THE names of a large number of officers have been noted at the War Office for service in China, in the event of their being required.

It has been decided not to hold manoeuvres on any extensive scale at Aldershot this autumn, the idea being that greater attention should be paid to brigade training.

THE Royal United Service Institution will be closed for the annual cleaning from Monday next to the 22nd inst. inclusive. The museum, however, will be open as usual.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, July 28.

The War Office shortly after midnight issued a despatch from Lord Roberts which had been received from Pretoria in the course of the evening, stating that Gens. French and Hutton continued their pursuit of the enemy on Wednesday (25th). The former crossed Oliphant's River, and "from the high ground on the east bank could see Middleburg and the enemy retiring" in great disorder, the main road north of the railway being blocked for several miles with horsemen and waggons. The rear of the enemy was then about seven miles off. Gen. Hutton's Mounted Infantry was west of the river, and, as rain was falling in torrents and it was getting dark, it was impossible, it is said, to follow the enemy further. What is spoken of as a "terrible night" ensued. There was a cutting east wind, and so great was the suffering that one officer died from exposure. But the men, we are told, were in good spirits when Lord Roberts saw them the following morning. The despatch went on to say that Gen. Hunter had occupied Fouriesburg, where he found Mrs. Steyn, wife of the ex-President, and several of our men whom De Wet had taken prisoners. Gen. Broadwood was still holding C. De Wet in check near Reitzburg, and P. de Wet, a brother of Christian De Wet, had surrendered at Kroonstad.

Telegraphing from Pretoria, 2.50 p.m., Lord Roberts stated that Gen. French occupied Middleburg without opposition yesterday. This place is 80 miles east of Pretoria and within 60 miles of Machadodorp. The Boers who fled from Middleburg are said to have numbered 600, and went in the direction of Machadodorp.

A despatch received from Lord Roberts, explained the discrepancy in the two reports as to the capture of a train by the enemy. The first report stated that De Wet had captured a supply train and 100 Highlanders near Honing Spruit. A later despatch reported that a train and 200 men, 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, had been captured in the same neighbourhood. Lord Roberts's telegram of to-day shows that the two reports refer to the same incident, and that the first was accurate as to numbers. In other words, the troops in the train were 100 Fusiliers; no Highlanders were taken at all.

The enemy twice to-day attempted to check Gen. Hunter's advance by holding two strong positions on two necks, one of which was taken before dark by the Scots Guards, Royal Irish Regiment, Wiltshire Regiment, and Leinster Regiment. We had only five or six casualties. The second neck was taken during the night by the Scot Guards without opposition, the enemy retiring closer to Naauwpoort.

Gen. Smith-Dorrien reported from Bank Station the release of two officers and 33 men, taken prisoners by the Boers when they wrecked the train near that place on the 19th. The prisoners, who had been well treated, had been sent to Krugersdorp.

Gen. Barton reported from Krugersdorp that he had reconnoitred the railway to Bank Station, where the train was wrecked on the 19th inst., and had been able to replenish the supplies of Lord Methuen's column, which had reached the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom Railway, and was moving on the latter place.

Sir Redvers Buller reported that the railway to Heidelberg had been opened, thus giving direct communication with Natal.

Sunday, July 29.

Particulars came to hand of the occupation of Fouriesburg by the 8th Division under Gen. Hunter 23rd, 25th. Gens. Clements and Paget attacked Slabbert's Nek on the 23rd, and the engagement lasted for two days before a passage could be forced. It was, however, an artillery engagement mainly. Gen. Bruce Hamilton meanwhile attacked Naauwpoort Nek, and had some hard fighting, while Gen. Rundle advanced against Commando Nek. Gen. Hunter came into close touch with the enemy at Retief's Nek, a narrow pass in the mountains, which was strongly held on each side by riflemen concealed in the rocks. Fortunately Rimington's Scouts brought intelligence of the trap which had been laid. The 2nd Batn. Black Watch were sent to force the path under the gallant Major Wiltshire, who was very severely wounded. They succeeded in getting possession of some kopjes, but found the pass itself too strongly held to be carried in broad daylight. Gen. Hunter decided to remain inactive until dusk, and then a sudden rush of the Highlanders proved successful, the enemy flying before the bayonet. During the action the 1st Batn. Royal Sussex Regiment and 1st Batn. Highland Light Infantry much distinguished themselves by an advance across a plain under a heavy fire. The attack was renewed on the 24th, Lord Lovat's Scouts, Rimington's Guides, and four companies Highland Light Infantry having done some good work during the night in driving the Boers back. The three corps at daybreak pushed forward, but found the head of the ravine still occupied. The 2nd Batn. Seaforth Highlanders were ordered to creep up close to the head of the ravine, and was then directed to charge. The Volunteer company made a sudden spring forward and the whole battalion followed it, travelling so fast that the Boers were put into a state of panic and ran to the horses as fast as they could go. Gen. Hunter, who was loud in his praise of the splendid work done by the Seaforths, followed the enemy through the nek and met Gens. Paget, Clements, and Rundle at Fouriesburg on the very day that Lord Roberts had planned for the junction to be effected.

Monday, July 30.

Lord Roberts telegraphed during the night that, as the result of the successful operations of Gens. Hunter and MacDonald on the Basuto border, the Boers under Commandant Prinsloo had surrendered unconditionally. He made overtures to Gen. Hunter for surrender on terms. The only terms the general felt disposed to offer were that the general and his men should be treated as prisoners of war, not rebels, as all Boers still fighting in the Orange River Colony are technically. Seeing that no better terms could be obtained, Gen. Prinsloo expressed himself ready to lay down his arms.

Lord Roberts, in his despatch, reported that Gen. MacDonald fought a brilliant rearguard action from early morning until dark on the 26th, nine miles outside Naauwpoort in the Bethlehem Hills, resulting in his effectually blocking Naauwpoort Nek to the Boer wagon traffic.

Describing Gens. French and Hutton's march on the 25th in circumstances of exceptional severity, Lord Roberts mentions that one officer had died of exposure. The special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Balmoral, in a telegram published to-day, refers to the matter. He says: "We are just now experiencing most extraordinary weather, consisting of thunderstorms and deluges of rain, accompanied by intense cold. 2nd Lieut. Maclaren and three men of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders have died of exposure, having marched without overcoats, and great numbers of horses and transport animals have also succumbed to the severe climatic conditions."

Tuesday, July 31.

A telegram was received from Lord Roberts during the night and issued this morning. In this it was stated that "Lord Methuen reports from Frederickstad, on the 29th, that he was engaged with the enemy the greater part of the day, during his march of 18 miles. Casualties few. He intended to move to Potchefstroom yesterday (30th.) Baden-Powell reported that one of his cyclists and the post cart were captured by the enemy near Rustenburg, and that 2nd Lieut. R. B. Wilson, Yorkshire Hussars, and Lance-Corpl. James McClure, Victorian Bushmen, died of their wounds on the 26th."

Lord Roberts went on to say, "Ian Hamilton's Column, consisting of Mahon's and Pilcher's Mounted Infantry, M Battery, R.H.A., the Elswick Battery, 1st Northumberland Volunteer Artillery, two 5in. and two 4.7in. guns, the King's Own Scottish Borderers, Berkshire, the Border Regiment, and the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, marched through Pretoria to-day (30th), from the front, looking fit and workmanlike. Buller reports that in Hildyard's attack on Amersfort, on 25th inst., the following troops greatly distinguished themselves:—Mounted Infantry under Gough and Stewart; the 13th and 69th Batteries; the 1st King's Royal Rifles, and the 2nd Batn. Gordon Highlanders. The Volunteer company of the last named corps he specially mentions for its splendid behaviour."

Later in the day, at 12.15 p.m., Lord Roberts telegraphed that Gen. Hunter had reported surrender of Gens. Prinsloo, A. J. Villiers, and Crowther personally to him yesterday, and also 986 men, with 1,432 horses, 955 rifles, and one Krupp 9-pr. "Some of the leaders in more distant parts," the despatch went on to say, "are hesitating to come in, on the plea that they are more or less independent of Prinsloo. I have directed Hunter to resume hostilities at once against them and to listen to no excuses."

Particulars come to hand later of the surrender of Prinsloo. From these we gather that about 11 o'clock the troops were drawn up in two lines on the hills overlooking the valley, and the Boers rode in between the ranks, throwing down their rifles as they passed. Fifteen hundred horses, two guns, 50 waggons, and many carts were surrendered. Gens. Prinsloo and Crowther were received by Sir Archibald Hunter and treated with every courtesy.

Lord Roberts telegraphed that 1,200 more of the enemy surrendered to Gen. Hunter yesterday, and with them two commandants—Rouse and P. J. Fonternehl—whilst Commandants Deploy, Potgieter, and Joubert, gave themselves up to Gen. Bruce Hamilton, who had collected 1,200 rifles and 650 ponies, and one Armstrong gun. Lieut. Anderson, a Danish officer in the Staats Artillery, also handed up his sword. Gen. Olivier with five guns, had broken away in the direction of Harrismith. A supply train escorted the 2nd Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry, had unfortunately, Lord Roberts went on to report, met with an accident on Monday near Frederickstad on the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom Railway. The enemy had taken up some of the rails, and the train went off the line; 13 men, including the engine-driver, were killed and 39 injured. "Gen. Smith-Dorrien had told off a special patrol to ride along the line to prevent any train passing over very damaged parts; and a court of inquiry has assembled to ascertain why this order was not carried out."

Mrs. Botha, wife of Commandant-General Botha, was the guest of Lord Roberts at dinner at Pretoria this evening.

Wednesday, Aug. 1.

Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton left Pretoria to-day for Rustenburg. He met with slight opposition up to the time he reached Vitbaal Nek, but had an officer and five men wounded, whilst two men were reported missing.

Intelligence from Standerton that numbers of the enemy are surrendering daily in the neighbourhood.

Gen. French has greatly strengthened his position at Middleburg, where all is said to be going well. "Great misery prevails among the Boers, and the general belief is that Botha will surrender directly De Wet is disposed of."

Thursday, Aug. 2.

Lord Roberts telegraphed during the day from Pretoria that he had heard from Gen. Smith-Dorrien through Krugersdorp. Gen. Smith-Dorrien at the time his message was sent was encamped near Frederickstad. On Tuesday morning a Boer came into his camp with a flag of truce and demanded his immediate surrender or an attack would be made in half an hour. "Before a reply could be returned a heavy fire was opened," the message goes on to say, "on our pickets." Gen. Smith-Dorrien drove the enemy off before the arrival of Lord Methuen, to whom he had signalled to come to his assistance. His losses were two killed and seven wounded. "The brunt of the attack," the General writes, "fell on the City of London Imperial Volunteers and the Suffolk and Bucks Yeomanry. The former were most ably handled by Col. MacKinnon, and did excellent work." Lord Roberts reported that "Hunter states that 750 men surrendered to him with 835 horses and 35 mules. The numbers that surrendered to Bruce-Hamilton have not been received."

Friday, Aug. 3.

The special correspondent of the Standard telegraphs from Pretoria that Commandant Gen. Botha is negotiating for surrender, whilst the action of Commandant Prinsloo has so seriously altered the whole position of affairs that Gen. De Wet is betraying the greatest anxiety for the fate of his troops, and will probably be only too ready to follow Botha's example.

KAY'S UNIVERSAL STORES.—The directors of Kay's Universal Stores report a very large increase in the company's business during the past six months—in fact, the greatest turnover in any six months during the company's existence, and the business continues steadily on the upward grade. New departments, opened in the autumn of 1899, have proved most successful in extending and developing the company's business. A full 6 per cent. dividend is about to be distributed, and there is every prospect of a larger final dividend in January next.

ROYAL PATRIOTIC FUND.

The Secretary of the Treasury has informed the Commissioners of the Royal Patriotic Fund that the Government proposes to ask Parliament to approve of the grant of small pensions by the State to the widows and orphans of men killed in action, or dying of wounds received in action, or of disease directly resulting from exposure on foreign service. All subscriptions by the public to the several war funds will then become available for such additions to the uniform State pension as may be found desirable.

The Sub-Committee of the Royal Patriotic Fund, under the presidency of Lord Davey, have had drawn up an actuarial report on the South African Fund placed at their disposal by the Lord Mayor. The report says:—

"The Transvaal War Fund now amounts to about £400,000, and weekly allowances will have to be provided for about 2,000 beneficiaries, viz., 400 parents and 1,600 widows of deceased soldiers.

"Let it be assumed that the average age of the beneficiaries is as follows:—

200 fathers, of the average age of 50 years.
1,600 widows, " " 30 "
"Then, if interest can be obtained on the fund at the following rate, the maximum weekly allowance to each of the beneficiaries would be as stated:—
Interest 3 per cent., weekly allowance	4s. 1d.
" " " " " " " " " " " "	4s. 3d.
"If, however, the average ages be five years less, viz.:
Fathers, 45 years.
Mothers, 45 "
Widows, 25 "

the maximum weekly allowances will be as follows:—

Interest 3 per cent., weekly allowance	3s. 10d.
" " " " " " " " " " " "	3s. 10d.

"In making the calculations it has been assumed:—

- (1) That during the whole currency of the fund interest will be realised at the average net rate specified (free of any deduction for income tax or otherwise, and calculated on the whole fund invested and uninvested).
- (2) That it is not necessary to make any deduction from the weekly allowances to meet expenses of administration.
- (3) That it is not necessary to leave any margin for fluctuations in the rates of interest and mortality, losses and expenses on realisation of investments, and for contingencies generally.
- (4) That the weekly allowances will not be continued to orphans or others after the death of the original beneficiaries.

"Some deduction will certainly have to be made for expense of administration, and on this point the experience of the Patriotic Fund will no doubt be a guide. It would also seem to be necessary in the case of a fund which will have to be worked for fifty years or more to make some provision against the contingencies referred to in Clause (3) above.

"It may further be pointed out that results based on estimated average ages are necessarily rough and uncertain, and before finally fixing the amount of weekly allowance some investigation based upon the actual ages of the beneficiaries should be made."

A Conference of representatives of the various war relief funds was held at the Mansion House on Tuesday, when it was resolved to give effect to the recommendations of Lord Justice Collins' Committee for the better administration of the funds. For this purpose it was decided to appoint a Central Consultative Council of not less than 50 members, comprising the Lord Lieutenants of Counties, Lord Mayors and Mayors, Lord Provosts and Provosts of towns, and representatives elected by the principal central and provincial funds. A motion by Lord Rothschild that the Council should consist of the Patriotic Fund Commissioners and representatives of the other funds was rejected by a large majority.

THE Committee of the Soldiers' Daughters' Home make an earnest appeal for £6,000 for the purpose of increasing the accommodation of the home at Hampstead which provides for 180 girls, but is already full. It is desired to make provision for a number of girls who have lost their fathers in South Africa. Subscriptions may be sent to the secretary of the Home, 5, Robert Street, Adelphi, W.C.

NAVY.

Capt. Bernard Murton Strouts, R.M.L.I., has been killed in the defence of the Legation at Peking. Born May 27, 1870, he joined the Royal Marines Sept. 1, 1888; became Lieut. Sept. 27, 1889; and Captain Sept. 15, 1897.

Capt. Claude William Robertson, R.M.L.I., was killed on the 22nd ult. in the action at Magatir's Pass. He joined the Royal Marines as Lieutenant 1889, and obtained his company 1898. He served under Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Rawson in the Benin Expedition, 1897; was mentioned in despatches (medal and clasp). In the same year he embarked for the Katoomba in Australia, and in March last volunteered for South Africa, being placed in command of a squadron of New South Wales' bushmen. Major-Gen. Baden-Powell now reports his death during a very successful operation against the Boers.

Capt. Henry Talbot Richard Lloyd, R.M.L.I., was killed in action at the capture of Tien-tsin. Born Feb. 10, 1872, he joined the Royal Marines as 2nd Lieut. Sept. 1, 1890; became Lieut. July 1, 1891; and Captain April 26, 1899.

Paymaster-in-Chief Henry de Ridder died at Great Yarmouth on the 21st ult., aged 62. He became Assistant-Paymaster 1859, Paymaster 1869, and retired as Paymaster-in-Chief 1892, in consequence of ill-health. His last service was in the Invincible, at Southampton.

ARMY.

Major-Gen. Noel Hamlyn Harris, Colonel retired list, Royal Artillery, died suddenly at 13, Birchinn Place, on the 29th ult., aged 68. He joined the Army Aug. 14, 1854, became Captain June 22, 1860, Major July 5, 1872, Lieutenant-Colonel Nov. 13, 1880, Colonel Nov. 13, 1884, and retired with the rank of Major-General Dec. 9, 1885. He served in the Crimean campaign from Dec., 1854, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol in the trenches with the siege train, and at the bombardment of April 9 and June 6 and 17. (Medal with clasp, Knight of the Legion of Honour, and Turkish medal.) Served in the Afghan war, 1879-80, and was present in the engagements at Shahjin and Ahmed Kheyl. (Mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp.)

Major-Gen. Thomas Talbot, Colonel, retired list, 2nd West India Regiment, died at his residence, Rathmines, Dublin, on the 25th ult. He joined the Army July 20, 1867; became Captain Nov. 25, 1874; Major, July 1, 1881; Lieut.-Colonel, Feb. 2, 1883; Colonel, Feb. 2, 1887; and retired with the hon. rank of Major-General, June 29, 1887.

Lieut.-Col. George Shields, Staff Paymaster, retired list, Army Pay Department, died at Tridenham House, Farnborough, Hants, on the 30th ult., aged 61. After several years' service in the ranks, he obtained his commission as Sub-Lieut. in the 12th Regiment from Quartermaster-Sergeant 6th Regiment, Dec. 4, 1872, and after obtaining his company was appointed to the Pay Department, June 19, 1879, obtaining the rank of Lieut.-Colonel June 19, 1889, and retiring in 1898 on attaining the age of sixty. He served in the Afghan War, 1879-80 (medal), and at the time of his retirement was Staff-Paymaster at Aldershot.

Major Sir Walter George Barttelot, Bart., 2nd V.B. Royal Sussex Regiment, commanding the Volunteer Company attached to the 1st Batn., was killed in action at Retief's Nek, South Africa, on the 23rd ult. Born April 11, 1855, eldest son of the late Col. Sir Walter Barttelot, C.B., he was educated at Eton, and served in the 5th Dragoon Guards from 1874 to 1880. From 1880 to 1885 he commanded a troop in the 1st Devon Yeomanry, and in March, 1886, joined the 2nd V.B. Royal Sussex Regiment as Captain. He went out to the Cape in March last command of the Volunteer Company. Sir Walter was a J.P. and D.L. of Sussex and a J.P. of Devonshire. He married, in 1879, Georgiana Mary, only daughter of the late Mr. G. E. Balfour, of Sidmouth House, Devonshire, by whom he leaves two sons and a daughter. The elder son, Mr. Walter Balfour Barttelot, who succeeds as third baronet, was born March 22, 1880. The family has lived at Stopham, near Pulborough, since the Conquest, and is therefore one of the oldest and best known in Sussex.

Capt. Lionel Arthur Edward Ollivant, Royal Fusiliers, serving with the Chinese Regt., was killed in action at Tien-tsin on the 14th ult. Born Dec. 3, 1872, he joined the Royal Fusiliers as 2nd Lieut. Sept. 30, 1896, became Lieut. April 2, 1898, and Capt. May 12 last. He joined the Chinese Regt. at Wei-hai-Wei in February last.

Capt. Frederic Sidney Kent, 2nd Batn. East Yorkshire Regt., died of pneumonia at Pretoria on the 23rd ult. Born Nov. 20, 1871, he joined the Army as 2nd Lieut. East Yorkshire Regt. June 20, 1894, became Lieut. Jan. 27, 1897, and Captain March 28 last.

Capt. William Gloster, 1st Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, was killed in action at Stabbert's Nek on the 23rd ult. Born April 27, 1863, he joined the Royal Irish Regiment from the Militia, May 6, 1885, and became Captain, Feb. 10, 1892. He served in the Hazara Expedition, 1888 (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp).

Capt. Edgar Quartus Robertson, 1st Batn. King's Own Scottish Borderers, was killed in action near Stephanusdrai on the 25th ult. Born Feb. 29, 1868, he joined the King's Own Scottish Borderers as 2nd Lieut. from the Militia, June 8, 1889; became Lieut. Aug. 4, 1891; and Captain May 10, 1899.

Capt. John Stuart Stevenson, Indian Medical Service, died at Lucknow, of sunstroke, on the 20th inst. Born Aug. 24, 1872, the son of Col. W. F. Stevenson, R.A.M.C., now on active service in South Africa, and of Sunnyside, Netley Abbey, Hants, he joined the Army July 29, 1896, and became Captain July 29, 1899.

Lieut. R. B. Wilson, Imperial Yeomanry, has died of wounds received in action in South Africa. He was a son of Col. J. G. Wilson, C.B., 3rd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt., and joined the Yorkshire Hussars Yeomanry on Jan. 3 last in order to proceed on active service. He was previously a Subaltern in the 3rd Batn. York and Lancaster Regt.

Lieut. Arthur Worsley Spottiswoode Pinhey, 1st Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry, died at Poona, on the 30th ult., of cholera. Born April 12, 1872, he joined the Shropshire Light Infantry as 2nd Lieut. from the Militia June 21, 1894, and became Lieut. June 25, 1898.

Lieut. Harry Thornton Reed, Indian Staff Corps (25th Punjab Infantry), died at Khar, Swat Valley, India, on the 29th ult., of enteric. Born Jan. 31, 1875, he joined the East Yorkshire Regiment as 2nd Lieut. from the Militia, Dec. 7, 1895, and was transferred to the Indian Staff Corps, Dec. 31, 1898.

2nd Lieut. Hubert Bertram Drought-Bird, Royal Field Artillery, died at Winburg on the 28th ult., of enteric fever. Born Sept. 27, 1878, he joined the Army June 23, 1890.

2nd Lieut. William Victor St. Clair McLaren, 1st Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, died at Pretoria on the 26th ult. of syncope, brought on by exposure. Born May 24, 1877, he joined the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders from the 4th Batn. Scottish Rifles, June 3, 1899.

ARMY COMMISSIONS FOR MILITIA OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In the forthcoming September examinations officers at home with four months' training are to be granted 30 marks for every day's actual service with an embodied Militia corps. Are those "days of actual service" to include time with battalion prior to their obtaining their certificate of proficiency (Army Form E., 527)—that is to say, for the six weeks or so of inefficiency spent in preliminary drill, even though it was with an embodied corps? If so, surely the same privilege should be granted to officers who did their preliminary drill before embodiment. They, too, should have their 30 marks per day for the six weeks or two months spent in gaining their certificate of proficiency. Not only were those of the latter class debarred from study (the sole reason for the marks being given at all) during their drill period previous to embodiment, whereas those of the former class had all that time free for reading, but they were of far more use in their battalions when they did join. They were at least efficient! It is hardly fair that this should be allowed to work out to their disadvantage.

THE VICTORIAN REGIMENTS.

(WITH COLOURED SUPPLEMENT.)

The troops of Victoria have distinguished themselves in South Africa. The Colony has always shown military spirit. The forces consist of a permanent regiment of Royal Australian Artillery and Militia corps, a Field Artillery brigade, Metropolitan and Western District brigades of Garrison Artillery, a section of Engineers, with submarine mining company and a field company. The other military organisations are the Victorian Mounted Rifles, the Victorian Rangers, the Army Service Corps, and the Militia Ambulance Corps.

At the outbreak of the war, the Assembly expressed the sympathy of the Colony with the Imperial Government. The first contingent consisted of infantry and mounted infantry units, and Colonel J. C. Hoad, A.A.G. on the Permanent Staff, accompanied the forces and did good work in organising the troops at the seat of war. The second contingent consisted wholly of mounted infantry, while the third was formed of the Bushmen, and the scenes which marked the departure of successive contingents will long be remembered in the history of the Colony. The Colony is the home of many men accustomed to life in the open, and probably there are no better horsemen in the world.

The Victorians were first employed on the northern frontier of Cape Colony, and saw a good deal of service in the Naauwpoort and Colesberg district. Some of the Victorians were in the reconnaissance of February 9, under Captain Salmon, of the Mounted Rifles, in company with Tasmanians and other Australians. The Boers, at the time, were threatening our flanks and Colonials were despatched to check them, but had to retire under a heavy fire and got away their horses amid a hail of bullets up to our outposts. In this affair the best military qualities were shown, and the retirement was admirably conducted. The Victorian Mounted Rifles were again heavily engaged on February 12. Another detachment of Victorian Mounted Rifles was with the force which invaded the Orange River Free State. They marched with General Babington to Ramdam in January—the place where General French afterwards made his rendezvous for the relief of Kimberley—and in the general advance they moved to Bloemfontein with Lord Roberts, and were very prominent in service up to the fall of Pretoria.

THE Duchess of Sutherland desires it to be known that the concert held in London on the 4th ult., under her auspices, and in co-operation with the Highland Association of London, in aid of the Highland Brigade Families Fund, resulted in a surplus of £800, which will be devoted to providing for the needs of widows and fatherless.

CAVALRY.

2nd Life Guards.—The funeral of Capt. Lord Kensington, who died of wounds in Bloemfontein on June 24, took place in St. Bride's Churchyard, Pembroke-shire, on Monday, in presence of a large assemblage of tenantry and people from all parts of the district. Early in the morning the body was placed in the church and covered with the Union Jack. The burial service was read by the Bishop of St. Davids, assisted by the Rector of St. Bride's. The chief mourners were Lady Kensington (mother) and four sisters. One brother—the heir to the title—is in South Africa, and two others are in British Columbia. The officers of the regiment sent a beautiful cross of lilies, inscribed "In fond remembrance." A service in memory of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who have died in the campaign from wounds or disease was held simultaneously in the chapel of the Regent's Park Barracks. The officers who succumbed, in addition to Lord Kensington, were Capt. Peel and Surg.-Capt. Fawcett. The number of non-commissioned officers and men who have died from the one cause or the other is ten. The officers of the regiment were represented at the service by most of those in town. Lieut.-Col. Cunningham, who was accompanied by Mrs. Cunningham, represented the Prince of Wales as Colonel-in-Chief. There were also present as connected with the regiment: Lieut.-Col. Neeld and the Hon. Mrs. Neeld, Major Longfield and Mrs. Longfield; Capt. Ames, Hankey, Burt, Entwistle, and de Crespigny; Surg.-Lieut.-Col. Young, &c. Major-Gen. Trotter, commanding the Home District, attended with the Hon. Mrs. Trotter. Among others present were the Duchess of Buccleuch, Lady Mary Trefusis, the Marquis of Hamilton, Lord Frederick Hamilton, the Duke of Roxburghe, Lord Henry Vane Tempest, the Countess Ellesmere, Lady Blanche Edwardes, Gen. Sir M. Biddulph, Sir O. and Lady Crespigny, Col. Hume Spry, and Col. Ricardo. The band was in attendance, and assisted in the musical portions of the service, which was conducted by the Rev. C. H. Murphy, the chaplain. It consisted of the ordinary burial service, with the omission of the committal portion, a hymn and two collects being inserted before the grace, and it closed with Chopin's Funeral March.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Capt. Wilson, who has returned from South Africa, is on leave, but it is understood will rejoin his regiment in due course for duty.

4th Dragoon Guards.—The Lee-Enfield carbines sent out to India for the 11th Hussars have been handed over to the regiment.

5th Dragoon Guards.—Corpl. FitzGerald, to whom a commission has been given at the recommendation of Lord Roberts, is the well-known author of "Climbs in the New Zealand Alps" and "The Highest Andes." His expedition to Aconcagua, with his companion, now Sergt. Stuart Vines, of the Imperial Yeomanry, gained the world's record of height in mountaineering. Mr. FitzGerald and Mr. Vines, returning to their club one night after the theatre, heard of the Government's call for Volunteers, and both enlisted in the Imperial Yeomanry the next morning. His detachment of the Lothians and Berwickshire, has been in Gen. Hunter's command during the war, and is now under Gen. Smith-Dorrien.

9th Lancers.—Lieut. Durand has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Saxon on the 25th ult.

10th Hussars.—Lieut. Shearman has been invalided from the Cape and sailed in the Saxon on the 25th ult.

12th Lancers.—A memorial service to the late Lieut.-Col. the Earl of Airlie, who was killed at the head of the regiment near Pretoria, was held on Thursday at Cortachy Castle, Forfarshire. The service was conducted by the Rev. John Strachan, minister of Cortachy. Among those present were the Countess of Airlie, Ladies Edith, Helen, and Mabel Ogilvy, Lord Ogilvy, (the heir), the Hon. Bruce Ogilvy, and the Hon. Patrick Ogilvy, the Dowager Countess of Airlie, Lady Blanche Hozier, Lady Maude Whyte and Mr. Whyte, Viscountess Cranborne, the Earl of Arran, Mr. Freeman-Mitford, the Hon. John Ogilvy, and Mr. James Cheape, of Strathlyrum. A large number of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the 3rd (Dundee) V.B. the Black Watch, of which regiment Lord Airlie was hon. Colonel, attended.

13th Hussars.—Capt. Ogilvy left England on Saturday last for South Africa in command of reinforcements in the Winkfield. He was accompanied by Lieut. Spencer.

14th Hussars.—Capt. Gage has been invalided from the Cape and sailed in the Saxon on the 25th ult.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The 146th, 147th, and 148th Batteries R.F.A. were formed at Aldershot on Saturday last. They are to have a howitzer equipment.

No. 2 Co. Southern Division R.G.A., half No. 15 Co. Southern Division, and half No. 15 Co. Western Division, left Cape Town on the 21st ult. in the Antillian for China, where they are due on the 18th inst.

Major A. Eardley-Wilmot, R.H.A., has passed the examination qualifying for the rank of Lieut.-Col.

Major F. H. Ward, B. Battery R.H.A., and Lieut. W. H. Bartholomew, 50th Battery R.F.A., are granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate.

2nd Lieut. R. H. Lascelles, R.F.A., invalided from South Africa, sailed in the Gascon on the 25th ult.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The 4th Balloon Section, numbering three officers and 75 men, will embark at the Royal Albert Dock on the 11th inst. in the Bombay, for China.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—A reinforcing draft of 400 men will leave for South Africa next week to join the 2nd and 3rd Batns. Capt. Glyn, 3rd Batn., invalided, left Cape Town in the Moravian on the 24th ult.

Coldstream Guards.—A reinforcing draft of 200 men will leave England next week for South Africa, to join the 1st and 2nd Batns.

Scots Guards.—2nd Lieut. Fox, 3rd Batn., has brought credit on the regiment in a way which will be fully appreciated by the 1st and 2nd Batns. in South Africa, as he has succeeded, for the first time in the history of the race, in placing the Wingfield Sculls, a contest which carries with it the Amateur Sculling Championship of England, to the credit of the Brigade of Guards Rowing Club. He accomplished this, too, in a record time of 22 mins. 54 secs. Strange to say Mr. Fox only recently took up sculling while an undergraduate at Oxford, where, however, he won the University Sculls in record time. He has also gained the amateur championships of France and Ireland, and at Cookham defeated A. D. J. Goldie, who won the Colquhoun University Sculls at Cambridge, a race which carries with it the amateur championship of the Cam. In the Diamond Sculls at Henley he has been less successful, being defeated in 1899 by Blackstaffe, while this year from the worst station he lost to Howell by three-quarters of a length.

Irish Guards.—Orders have been given for the establishment to be increased from two to three companies. Major Nugent has arrived home from South Africa invalided, and will in due course join the regiment for duty.

Royal Guards Reserve Regiment.—The regiment, commanded by Col. A. Broadwood, was inspected on Tuesday at Wellington Barracks by Major-Gen. Trotter. The battalion, which has recently completed its musketry training at Pirbright Camp, mustered about 550 strong, a considerable number of the men being on guard or other duty, the seven strong companies on parade being three of Grenadiers and two each of Coldstream and Scots. The men were well set-up, showed great steadiness, and marched past in excellent style. The general also inspected the quarters of the battalion.

Royal Scots (1st).—Details remain at Belfast, the order for their removal having been cancelled.

Queen's (2nd).—We regret to find that, through an error in the press, we last week robbed the 3rd (Militia) Batn., of the credit which is due to it in regard to the sale of kits of comrades who had succumbed to enteric fever. The incident, as we said, showed how true comradeship is in the historic "Queen's." Sergt. Hall, who wrote from Beaufort West, belongs to the 3rd, not the 2nd, Batn., as was stated. It is, indeed, most gratifying to find the Militia battalion of the "Queen's" so well upholding the credit of their regiment.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—2nd Lieut. Blair, 1st Batn., just promoted from the ranks of Lumsden's Horse, has been invalided from the Cape, and left in the Moravian on the 24th ult.

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment (6th).—Capt. Davenport, 6th (Militia) Batn., A.D.C. to Sir Alfred Milner, has arrived home from the Cape.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—Capt. McMahon has arrived home from South Africa.

Kings' Regiment (8th).—2nd Lieut. Dinnew, 2nd Batn., promoted from the ranks of the South African Light Horse, has been invalided home from the Cape, and sailed in the Tagus on the 24th ult.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—At Colchester on Sunday morning last, Major-Gen. Sir William Gatacre presented the Royal Humane Society's medal to Capt. Gascoyne, 4th (Militia) Batn., for rescuing a drowning man at Norwich, and the good conduct medal to Sergt. Mace, of the same battalion. Sir William Gatacre congratulated the recipients and reminded the battalion that pluck and good conduct had brought the British Army renown. Lieut. Stracey, 1st Batn., has been appointed Station Staff Officer, Deesa.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—Lieut. Bromhead, 2nd Batn., left England on Saturday last with reinforcements for South Africa in the Winkfield.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—Capt. Holbrook, 1st Batn., Station Staff Officer, Neemuch, has been appointed officiating D.A.A.G. Bombay command. Lieut. Wood, 1st Batn., has been appointed extra A.D.C. to Lord Northbrook, Governor of Bombay.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Lieut. Marten, 4th (Militia) Batn., attached to the 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and left in the Tagus on the 24th ult.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Capt. (local Major) Morris, D.S.O., who has returned from Ashanti, landed at Plymouth on Thursday from the Bornu. He is the officer who forced his way from Kintampo to the assistance of the besieged garrison at Kumasi, and then assumed command of the troops. He afterwards successfully conducted Sir Frederick and Lady Hodgson and escort to the coast. He was wounded in the operations, but has now recovered, although the bullet has not been extracted.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—Capt. Aitken, 6th (Militia) Batn., has been appointed Military Commandant of Hopetoun and Graspan District, Orange River Colony. Lieut. Spafford and 2nd Lieut. Ward, 6th (Militia) Batn., are on passage home from the Cape in the Gascon, which sailed on the 25th ult.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—A correspondent writes to us from India asking if there is any valid reason why his battalion, the 1st Cheshire, should be always out of it when there is any active service. "All ranks," our correspondent says, "feel that a great injustice is done them. It is over fifty years since the battalion to which I belong had any chance of adding to its honours, yet there is not one which would more gladly receive an order to embark for China or the Cape. It is most disappointing to stand by quietly and see corps after corps adding to its battle roll, and to know that for your own there is no chance of getting to the front. Every regiment in the Service cannot of course see active service, but it does strike one as unfair that when there are rumours of British troops being sent to China no mention is made of the Cheshires. Are we again to be left out in the cold. We consider it such an injustice that I hope you will allow me to ventilate the matter in your columns, as perhaps then somebody in authority may be induced to take up our case and give us the chance for which we are all yearning. I can answer for it that the rank and file feel deeply the position in which they are placed in never even being mentioned for anything that is going on in the shape of campaigning, although it is admitted that a better ordered regiment is not to be found." [Our correspondent's growl is fully justified and reflects credit on a distinguished regiment.—Ed.]

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Capt. Phillips, 3rd (Militia) Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 25th ult., in charge of invalids coming home in the Saxon.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Details remain at Belfast for the present, the order for their removal having been cancelled.

Scottish Rifles (26th).—Lieuts. Sandilands and Edden have been granted leave from India to England for six months each on medical certificate.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Capt. Coke, who lately vacated the adjutancy of the 2nd Volunteer Batn., has been posted to this battalion, and leaves shortly for South Africa.

Black Watch (42nd).—Lieut. Lord George Murray, second son of the Duke of Atholl, who with his two brothers has been serving in South Africa, arrived at Blair Castle the other day and received a most cordial welcome. He was going to India when the war broke out, and volunteered to go to the front in any capacity. His services were accepted, and he was fortunate enough to be attached to the 1st Batn. Gordon Highlanders.

Northamptonshire Regiment (48th).—Major Hill, V.C., has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months, on urgent private affairs.

Middlesex Regiment (57th).—Capt. Collinson and Haslehurst have been transferred to the new 4th Batn., and are on passage home from the Cape in the Tagus, which sailed on the 24th ult. 2nd Lieut. Feilman, appointed from the 6th (Militia) Batn., is also a passenger in the Tagus.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—2nd Lieut. Seymour, 1st Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Tagus on the 24th ult.

Wiltshire Regiment (62nd).—Lieut. Stoddart has been appointed Quartermaster of the Chinese Regiment with which he is serving as a subaltern.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Capt. Webb is on passage home from the Cape in the Gascon, which sailed on the 25th ult.

Hampshire Regiment (67th).—Lieut.-Col. Briggs has been granted an extension of command for twelve months from the 29th inst.

Highland Light Infantry (74th).—Capt. Andrews has arrived home from the Cape in charge of invalids in the Manchester Port, on promotion from the 1st Batn.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—Lieut.-Col. Macbean, commanding the 1st Batn., wrote from Pretoria on June 6 to Col. Douglas Duncan, commanding the 1st Volunteer Batn., to congratulate all ranks of the Volunteer battalions on the splendid conduct of the Volunteer Company attached to his battalion on active service.

"Their conduct," he says, "has been universally excellent, and the way they have stuck out in all the hard marching we have had, and all the time on short rations, has astonished me—because one cannot hide the fact that they have been accustomed most probably to a better class of food than our men get, and might feel the want of proper food—also that they are not so trained in marching. But in spite of all this they have done splendidly. In the action near Johannesburg on May 29, they really covered themselves with glory, and proved themselves perfectly fitted to rank as real veterans. They were in support of H Company on the left, and were under a very heavy fire, as you will have gathered from the reports already published in the papers. In both bayonet charges they went as straight as a die, and would, I believe, have been charging still if there were any Boers left. The whole battalion was full of their praises after the fight. Col.-Sergt. Campbell did exceedingly well, leading the company in the final charge when all the officers were down. He is an unusually good non-commissioned officer. I can hardly expect that all of the company I recommended for rewards for gallantry on that occasion will be proud recipients, but I have no doubt a good many will. Our brigade has been broken up. Since we left Graspan on Feb. 13, we have marched 630 miles, taken part in the capture of 10 towns, fought in 10 general actions, and on 27 other days. In one period of 30 days we fought on 21 of them, and marched 927 miles. The casualties have been between 400 and 500, which is not a bad record. We are at present taking care of Lord Roberts, and are bivouacked near his house all by ourselves."

The following extract from the battalion order by Lieut.-Col. Macbean, dated Florida, May 5, is also sent:—

"The commanding officer wishes to add his congratulations to those already addressed to the battalion by Major-Gen. Ian Hamilton, C.B., D.S.O., and Major-Gen. Smith-Dorrien, D.S.O., in the gallantry they displayed in yesterday's action. He doubts if the history of the battalion contains any record of a more splendid attack culminating in a more brilliant charge. It gives him much pleasure to hear of the gallant bearing of the Volunteer Service Company and their extreme steadiness under fire."

Capt. Duff has been recommended specially for a direct commission in the Line. It has been intimated that the Secretary of State is prepared to submit the officer's name, if he is willing, to be appointed to a regiment of Dragoon Guards.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (76th).—Lieut. Noyes has been granted leave from India to England for nine months on medical certificate.

South Lancashire Regiment (82nd).—Capt. Carlyon, who has been serving with the 1st Batn. (40th) in South Africa, left Cape Town on the 24th ult., in charge of invalids, in the Tagus.

Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (93rd).—Capt. Marshall has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on urgent private affairs.

King's Own Light Infantry (105th).—Capt. Taylor left England on Saturday last for South Africa with reinforcements in the Winkfield.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th).—Major Cox has passed the examination qualifying for the rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. Tharp, 1st Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed for England in the Tagus on the 24th ult.

Army Service Corps.—Cols. Parkyn and Oughterson desire to announce that no further gifts are required for the corps in South Africa. Lieut.-Col. Clayton has written that the supply is sufficient, that there has been a large distribution, that as soon as the Army halts further consignments will be forwarded to the front, and that a reserve will be kept at Cape Town for the use of invalids on their way home.

Reviews.

THE MAGAZINES.

The United Service Magazine, among several papers of Service interest, has one memorandum by E. H. Parker, on "The Forces Arrayed Against us in North China," in relation to the unpleasant consequences of the "Boxers" outbreak, and of the movement against the foreign devils, culminating in the murder of the German Minister and the actual attack on the foreign Legations in Peking. Mr. Parker affirms positively that the Manchu and Chinese troops stationed between Tien-tsin and Peking cannot exceed 100,000 men, for the riff-raff levies who may have joined them since hostilities commenced are of no account, especially if it be true that the Allies have destroyed the military stores in the arsenals, and he gives most minute accounts of the many leaders and "camps" at the various stations, which, however, must be read in connection with Mr. Parker's previous paper in the magazine. "Rex," in a "scorcher" on our officers, furnishes the second part of his paper on our Army, to which we may refer hereafter. Dr. Miller Maguire not only shows that obligatory military service was in the old days in this country, but promises to try to prove that it would be a blessing to all classes in this country.

There is not too much war, but just war enough in Blackwood, and what there is is particularly good. "How we Escaped from Pretoria," by Capt. Haldane, is the first instalment of an exciting and even thrilling narration of the adventures of that officer, and carries us from the time of his capture in the armoured train near Estcourt, until the moment when, with two companions, he found himself on the point of making his escape from captivity. Brief accounts of this escape have already appeared, but nothing as full and complete as this bids fair to be. Perhaps the most astonishing point about the matter is that for the better part of a month the three gaol breakers, after they were supposed to have got away, were still living in the prison, but under its floor, and during this period they were continually in communication with their comrades above. The articles on the war operations in South Africa, by a military contributor, are continued, this being the ninth of the series. The charges brought by Mr. Burdett-Coutts in connection with the medical arrangements are dealt with at some length, and the writer is evidently inclined to believe them, although he will not allow that the responsibility rests either with Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, or the executive medical officers. With regard to the medical administration at the base, his opinion is that there was a lack of organisation and of inelasticity, strongly suspicious of red tape. His commentary on the operations includes the occupation of Pretoria, and is brought up to the date of the capture of Bethlehem. The second article, on "Distracted China," loses somewhat of its value as we read it in the light of the more recent events. The writer holds that the disorder which obtains is due, at least in part, to much of the heedless talk about the breaking up of China and the partition of the Empire. This, he says, was translated and published among the people, and made use of by political agitators and the fomentors of anti-foreign feeling. His view is that the course taken by Sir Claude Macdonald, and probably dictated from Downing Street, was more likely to encourage the Empress and her friends than to defeat their intentions. He concludes a thoughtful article thus:—"A very general spirit of reform is abroad in the central and southern provinces of the Empire, and the maintenance of the Emperor on the throne would have been welcomed throughout the country as a guarantee that measures calculated to advance and strengthen the Empire would be carried out. If, then, we had taken a strong line on that occasion, we should have had with us all the intellectual and progressive sections of the people. But we did nothing, and the result has been that we have thrown the whole weight of political power into the hands of the anti-foreign party, with the results which we now have good reason to deplore." Incidentally, the abortive expedition of Admiral Seymour, in which he fought seven pitched battles, and succeeded in making good his retreat in the face of an overwhelming force with but trifling loss, is described. An account of the massacre of the foreigners on July 6, now known to be apocryphal, is accepted as accurate.

In the National Review the Hon. Arthur Stanley writes on the sick and wounded in South Africa, and, while expressing his regret that the controversy should have been conducted on both sides with unnecessary violence, shows cause for inquiry. He is convinced that good will result from the investigation, and believes that the result will be to show that the provision made at the outset of the campaign by the War Office was entirely insufficient, and that the subsequent preparations were conducted on much the same lines. "If those who have brought the charges against the hospital administration are proved to be in the wrong, then the Army will have gained by the knowledge that implicit reliance may be placed on the excellence of the arrangements made for the sick and wounded; if, on the other hand, the charges are held to be proved, then the military authorities will have a splendid opportunity of revising the whole system, and setting their house in order against the next campaign." One reform he strongly supports—namely, the creation of two branches in the Royal Army Medical Corps; one branch whose duties shall be purely medical, another branch which shall deal solely with questions of administration. "Some Lessons of the Boer War" are deduced by the military critic of the Westminster Gazette. Briefly they are (1) want of concentration in Natal, (2) the need for more powerful guns to accompany a field army, (3) the value of the pom-pom, (4) the differentiation and utilization of cavalry and mounted infantry, (5) the modernization of infantry tactics in the face of new weapons, (6) the necessity for improvement in rifles and ammunition, and generally in the personal kit and impedimenta of the army as a whole. Finally, he says, "among not the least important lessons of the war we may count that we have learnt which of our leaders are capable, and which are unfit for aught but the routine of a Government office." Naval men, and, indeed, all who are interested in the important subject of manning the Navy, will read with pleasure and profit Sir Cyprian Bridge's article on "Facts and Fancies about the Press-gang." It is, as might be expected, a very valuable contribution to an attractive subject, although we cannot say that it is entirely convincing. The Admiral's contention is that impressment failed completely to effect what had been expected of it. "In the great days of old our fleet, after all, was manned, not by impressed men, but by volunteers. It was largely due to that that we became masters of the sea. The National Review has also articles upon the "Economic Revolution in Germany," American affairs, and a number of other topical subjects.

The proposal made in the July number of the Nineteenth Century for the formation of a kind of vigilance committee to see that the Government deals aright with the lessons of the South African War, have elicited such a satisfactory response as to warrant the belief that an association for the purpose may be very shortly established. It is intended to hold a public meeting when the holiday season is over, at which definite proposals may be submitted for adoption. The views of a number of well-known men as to the scope and meaning of the phrase "ordinary business principles" as used in connection with the subject of administrative reform are published. The writers generally acquiesce in the following as the three main and cardinal points of conduct without due observance of which any business is likely to go astray:—(1) Personal responsibility, (2) payment by results, (3) promotion by merit. Lord Northbrook questions the value of the Government proposals for increasing our infantry, and submits for consideration two proposals:—That the present Militia Reserve should be abolished, and that all future engagements for the Militia should be for service at home in time of peace, and abroad in time of war. He advocates the introduction of these changes at once, and, further, that a real Militia Reserve should be constituted, composed of men who have completed their Militia engagements, so as to form depots to keep up the strength of Militia battalions on foreign service. Mr. Frederick Greenwood and Professor Dicey deal with the Yellow Terror under the respective titles of "The Chinese Revolt" and "Vengeance and Afterwards." Both writers deprecate any direct intervention in Chinese affairs on the part of England, after the complete vindication of our outraged honour. Punishment for murderous lawlessness of course there must be, and to be fitting and politic it should be severe, says Mr. Greenwood, but afterwards it will be most wise to think once, twice, and thrice before committing England to any scheme of conquest and partition. And Mr. Dicey ventures to advise his fellow countrymen not to allow their just and righteous indignation to blind them to the risk of impetuous action, and to avoid putting out their arm further than the point at which it can be withdrawn with safety and without loss of dignity. Other interesting articles in the Nineteenth Century deal with the "New Commonwealth," an "American View of the Boer War," and "How to Breed Horses for War."

PRINCE ALFRED.

"DEATH," says the Latin poet, "strikes with impartial tread at the palaces of kings and the hovels of the poor." This week the world, whilst reeling from the shock occasioned by the vile assassination of the King of Italy, has been startled by the news of the death of another reigning Sovereign who was suddenly called away by the attack of a fell disease, of which there had been little public knowledge. But, in this country, when the intelligence of the Duke of Coburg and Gotha's death was flashed through the land, men's thoughts immediately turned to the effect the blow would have on the aged Sovereign who in her long life has been so sorely tried by the loss of the nearest and dearest. Not less dear than any of them was the Prince Alfred, so close to his mother's heart, — the English Prince who was summoned to a throne almost from the deck of British man-of-war, and who so well played his part as German Sovereign. The newspapers which had at first given expression to the unworthy fear when the Royal Duke ascended the throne that he would prove a lukewarm champion of Imperial unity and hostile to Prussian ascendancy have hastened, in recording his death, to admit the injustice of their apprehensions, and to declare that he showed himself to be a most loyal German Sovereign, and a faithful guardian of the people over whom he ruled. But we may be allowed to express the belief that it was with no great eagerness he grasped the sceptre that had fallen from his uncle's hand and resigned the glorious service in which he had attained a distinction which stood highest in the opinion of those officers who knew him best as a British Admiral. Known as "our Sailor Prince" by the people of England, he was especially a favourite with them. His attachment to the Service was recognised with enthusiastic pleasure in the fleet by sailors who served with the son of their Queen as a boy of fourteen, and who saw him ascending the ladder step after step till he became Admiral of the Fleet. He retained to the end the aptitudes of his early life. A very keen and artistic angler, devoted to shooting, an excellent rifle shot, he missed no occasion when he visited this country of returning to his ancient "amours" the river and the forest. At his Royal seat of Rheinhartshausen he loved to entertain and to show his English friends that they had nothing in their moors to vie with the great red deer of the German woods, not to speak of wolves and other big game, whilst he ever cultivated the musical studies in which he delighted, and in which he achieved remarkable distinction.

The widowed Duchess, "the Russian flower," whose hand was ever gracious to the poor, and whose name "was blessed," as Tennyson wrote, "within the narrow door," will receive no truer sympathy than the Queen's, who, in this year of awful trial, when the Empire is tried by war, pestilence, and famine, and foreign ill-will, has undergone this affliction. The young Prince Charles Edward will be under the direction of his sister's husband, and the prayers of the people who share the sorrow of their Sovereign will ascend to heaven for the happiness and prosperity of the grandson of the Empress-Queen, whose heart is mourning for the death of the sailor Prince.

The late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha had for some weeks been suffering from a disease which must ultimately have had a fatal termination, but he died rather suddenly last Monday at the Castle of Rosenau, near Coburg, from paralysis of the heart. The numerous messages of condolence on their bereavement which have been addressed to the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha testify to the loving and respectful sympathy felt throughout the country.

In accordance with his own wish, but also conformably to the custom in our Royal family, Prince Alfred was intended for the Navy from his earliest years, and his education was accordingly shaped with this object. In his fourteenth year he was placed under the care of the Rev. W. R. Jolly, at Alverbank, near Portsmouth, in order to be prepared for the examination. At this time he is described as a bright amiable boy, very capable, and thoroughly interested in the profession he was about to adopt. A lithograph of the period, showing him in his midday's jacket, cap, and dirk, "half blushing and looking very happy," certainly gives this impression. The young Prince's first ship was the Euryalus, a fifty-gun frigate, commanded by Captain J. W. Tarleton. In this vessel he visited the Mediterranean and afterwards South Africa, and every opportunity was afforded him of gaining professional experience; his captain, indeed, struck by his talents, foretold for him a brilliant career in the Service. Of this, his first visit to a British colony, the Prince Consort wrote to Baron Stockmar on April 27, 1860:—

"It will be a strange and noteworthy circumstance that almost in the same week in which the elder brother is to open the great bridge across the St. Lawrence in Canada, the younger will lay the foundation-stone of the breakwater for the harbour of Cape Town at the other end of the world. What a cheering picture is here of the progress and expansion of the British race and of the useful co-operation of the Royal family in the civilisation which England has developed and advanced."

It is noteworthy that only when the Prince was on shore was he accorded Royal honours; on board ship he did his duty and was treated as an officer of the ship. This arrangement excited considerable astonishment in the minds of some native chiefs, who, visiting the ship, found the Prince with his shoes and stockings off superintending the operation of washing decks. They could hardly believe that this was the son of the Queen of England, and afterwards wrote to Capt. Tarleton:—

"But one thing we understand, the reason of England's greatness. When the son of her great Queen becomes subject to a subject, that he may learn wisdom; when the sons of England's chiefs and nobles leave the homes and wealth of their fathers, and with their young Prince endure hardships and suffering in order that they may be wise and become a defence to their country; when we behold these things we see why the English are a great and mighty nation."

This incident has a curious parallel in a story told of William IV. when a midshipman in 1780 on board Admiral Digby's flagship at Gibraltar. The Spanish Admiral boarding the ship was astonished at seeing a son of the King of England acting in his capacity as midshipman of the watch and performing the duty of a petty officer. He is said to have exclaimed, "Well does Great Britain merit the sovereignty of the seas, when her Princes of the Royal blood are content to learn their duty in the humbler stations of her Navy."

The next ship to which the Prince was appointed was the screw line of battleship St. George, Captain the Hon. Francis Egerton. In this ship the Prince saw service on the home station and in the West Indies. During the commission he performed the regular duties of a midshipman, and added to his reputation for thoroughness in all he undertook. He was clearly a typical midday, and, as Sir George Grey described him, "a noble young fellow, full of life and fun." It was at this time that Prince Alfred was elected King of Greece, a country where he was personally known, his ship having visited the Piræus. Dynastic considerations and a convention between Great Britain, France, and Russia prevented the offer being accepted, and the invitation was declined, probably without reference to the personal feelings of the Prince. In the following year, on February 24, 1863, he received his commission as a Lieutenant, and joined the Racoon corvette, under the command of the late Count Gleichen. Three years later he was promoted to the rank of Captain, and given the command of the Galatea. Just previously he had been created a peer as Duke of Edinburgh, dropping the title of Prince Alfred, by which he had been known to the public, and by which title the announcement of his having chosen a naval career had been received by the nation with an outburst of delight.

The cruise of the Galatea was a lengthy one, Australia, Japan, China, and India being visited in turn. It was marred by one unhappy incident. In the beginning of 1868 the Galatea was in Sydney Harbour, and the Duke attended a picnic at Clontarf, Port Jackson, in aid of a sailors' home. While walking on the beach with Sir William Manning, an Irishman named O'Farrell drew a revolver, and running up to the Prince fired at him, wounding him slightly in the back. The Duke was taken to Government House, where the bullet was extracted, and after a somewhat protracted illness he recovered. O'Farrell was put on his trial, convicted, and executed in the following month, his crime being attributed to the Fenian conspiracy. An account of this cruise in the Galatea was written by her chaplain and published.

On his return home the Duke's engagement to the Grand Duchess Marie Alexandrovna, only daughter of the Czar Alexander II., was announced, and the wedding was celebrated with great pomp in the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg, according to the rites both of the Greek and Anglican churches. The late Dean Stanley, by request of the Queen, performed the English marriage service. In the following March, when the Duke and his bride made a public entry into London they were received with loyal acclamation and every demonstration of popular goodwill. Five children were born to the Duke, of whom only one was a son, the young Prince who died in February last year at Meran, to the great grief of his parents.

The Duke's second command was the Sultan, which he took up the Mediterranean in 1876, when Sir Geoffrey Hornby was the Admiral on the station. Hitherto he may be said to have been acquiring that more general knowledge of his profession which was to form a groundwork for the special training now to begin. It is particularly as a handler and leader of fleets that the Navy has looked up to the Duke, and, as he himself said, he was in this matter a pupil of Sir Geoffrey. There are many naval officers who consider that the late Duke became in his turn but little inferior as a tactician to that eminent officer. Certain it is that he made the best possible use of his two years in the Sultan and of the experience which he subsequently gained as a flag officer.

The Duke became a Rear-Admiral on November 12, 1876, and held successively the following posts: Superintendent of Naval Reserves, when with his flag in the Hercules he took the Reserve Squadron for an annual cruise; Senior Officer in command of the Channel Squadron, in the Minotaur; and Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean in the Alexandra. In all three posts he proved his capacity to command, and it was the unanimous estimate of all best qualified to form an opinion that the squadrons under him were in each instance in a very high state of efficiency. One more appointment he held after relinquishing the command of the Mediterranean fleet, that of Commander-in-Chief at Devonport from 1890 to 1893. In August of the last-named year, by the death of his uncle, Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, the Duke of Edinburgh succeeded to the Duchy and took the oath of loyalty to the constitution in the German Emperor's presence. Practically his active connection with the Navy came to an end here, and the Navy lost an officer of whom it was justly proud. Knowing his devotion to the Service his brother officers knew that it was with no light heart the Duke was thus compelled to sever the tie which bound him closely to the profession of his choice. In some sense he may have felt himself compensated when, in June, 1897, her Majesty presented him with a bâton as Admiral of the Fleet.

The announcement of the death of the Duke of Edinburgh has been received with profound regret throughout the country, but by none will he be more sincerely mourned than by those with whom he served under the White Ensign. The Naval Service knew him and respected him as a capable officer who knew his duty and did it.

But they loved him also for the many acts of individual kindness which were known to them, but to few outside the profession. At Malta and at Devonport particularly, where the home life of the Duke was by his position as the Naval Commander-in-Chief more generally revealed to the outside public, his popularity and that of the Duchess and her daughters with all classes are a speaking testimony to their amiability, unaffected courtesy, and kindly worth.

On succeeding to the Dukedom in 1893, the Duke surrendered his Parliamentary grant and his position as Privy Councillor, but the Duke and Duchess spent a part of every year at Clarence House, which they made their English home and entertained their friends during the season. The Duke was Colonel of the 1st London Artillery Volunteers, the Edinburgh Artillery, the Royal Marines, the 2nd Battalion of the Black Watch, and the 84th Austro-Hungarian Infantry Regiment. He was a Knight of St. John of Jerusalem, Honorary Admiral of the German Navy, and held the Black Eagle of Prussia, the St. Andrew of Russia, the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour, the St. Stephen of Austria, the Elephant of Denmark, the Golden Fleece and Charles III. of Spain, the Annunciation of Italy, the St. Hubert of Bavaria, and the Osmanieh of Turkey. His Royal Highness belonged to the Travellers', White's, Marlborough, Pratt's, the United Service, the Army and Navy, the Naval and Military, and the Junior United Service Clubs. The Duke leaves four daughters—the Princess Ferdinand of Roumania, the Grand Duchess of Hesse, the Princess of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, and the Princess Beatrice Leopoldine Victoria.

Navy Notes.

In answer to a question last week, Mr. Goschen indicated that an official residence for the First Sea Lord was likely to be provided within the new Admiralty buildings, the decision resting, it would seem, upon the amount of accommodation available. Hitherto the First Sea Lord has been very properly provided with a house suitable to his high rank and official position a mile or so distant from Whitehall, and there is surely no sufficient reason to believe that he ought to be tied to the Admiralty offices night and day? In no business in England does the wise proprietor or senior partner consent to live over his office, for he is well aware that this would involve the interruption of his most sacred hours of rest and liberty. Even when reading family prayers before breakfast, or when partaking of his nightcap before retiring to rest, he would often be worried with telegrams and messages. So with the First Sea Lord. Let him most strenuously resist the desire of over zealous Members of Parliament to keep him chained to the desk after working hours. He can do no less in the interests of his successors. Besides all this, there is not much "home comfort" about the average public building. Why should a First Sea Lord live in Whitehall, if the Commander-in-Chief may live in Grosvenor Square?

A few months ago Russia was found to be storing large quantities of Welsh coal at Port Arthur, and now we learn that the French Government is receiving large consignments of this fuel and is storing it at Lens. There seems to be no doubt at all as to this fact, nor is it reasonable to doubt that the coal is designed as a reserve for the French Navy. Is there no means of appealing to the patriotism of our coal owners? Free Trade is a great blessing in some respects, but when it comes to supplying foreigners with the best Welsh coal for their ships of war to the detriment of our own people, is it not almost time to pause? We have learned from our own experiments how greatly the efficiency of torpedo boats is increased by the utilisation of the best coal, and yet our Government appears to be powerless to check the export of a coal that is unequalled in Europe for any quarter of the world. And, whilst foreign governments are thus accumulating stores of Welsh coal, it is far from certain that the reserves at the disposal of the British Admiralty are sufficiently large. Two years ago a strike of miners obliged the Admiralty to cancel the naval manœuvres. Since then, some steps have been taken to increase the reserves at the home ports, but the British coaling stations abroad are nearly all supplied on a hand-to-mouth system, especially those on the Cape route. At Ascension Island and St. Helena there is hardly ever sufficient coal to supply a squadron, and there is no reserve for merchant steamers. It is time this matter were looked into, for the difficulties of replenishing the reserves of coal in time of war will be serious.

At the Victoria Institute recently Professor Edward Hull read a very interesting and suggestive paper on "The Coal Resources of the United Kingdom at the Close of the Nineteenth Century." The importance of this subject to a great naval Power is sufficiently obvious, and, although there is probably no danger of exhausting our coal-fields within the next two hundred years, it may be found needful to put some check upon the export of anthracite coal. The largely-increased exports of Welsh coal during the past few years is a serious matter from the naval standpoint. Both France and Russia are accumulating large stores of this coal, and there is none to equal it for the use of torpedo craft and warships generally. Free trade principles and the rights of the colliery owners are the arguments against checking the export, but, as Professor Hull pointed out, it would be within the legitimate power of the Government to impose a tax upon every ton of coal exported to Continental states. A tax of 5s. would increase the revenue by about ten millions sterling, supposing, that is, that the export continued at the present rate of 40,000,000 tons annually. And this enormous export, it should be noted, is chiefly confined to Welsh coal. Last year our total output of coal of all kinds was about six times as great as the quantity exported but the output tends to increase very rapidly, and has nearly doubled since 1866, when a Royal Commission reported on the subject. In another thirty or forty years the output and export may again be doubled, unless steps are taken to check this lavish export which benefits the coal owners but not the State. Professor Hull urges the appointment of another commission to inquire into the resources of the coalfields, and to report whether or not the export should be checked in the naval and commercial interests of the country. A century ago no statesman would have believed it possible that England would come to rely upon imported food-stuffs; and to-day our politicians ridicule the exhaustion of our coal mines. But, because the mines cannot be exhausted in our own day, have we the right to disregard the dangers that threaten our descendants? Assuredly not.

The Admiralty have decided to extend the provisions of the Criminal Evidence Bill to naval courts-martial procedure, which implies that officers and men brought to trial will be enabled to give evidence in their own defence. In civil law, great importance is attached to this reform, but it is not by any means certain that naval procedure will be conspicuously benefited by the coming change. In the Navy, the officer or man brought to trial is most commonly accused of some breach of discipline which has to be proved by the evidence of witnesses. In these cases, at least, the testimony of the accused person could be of no material value, since the prisoner would scarcely have the effrontery to attempt to prove an alibi if charged with striking a superior officer, for example. In collision cases, however, it is possible that trial may be shortened by the direct evidence of officers brought to court-martial, but, on the whole, it is not easy to suggest any usual case in which the evidence of the prisoner will be particularly useful. In a recent court-martial connected with a robbery of public funds the officer brought to trial contended in his defence that his personal evidence would have thrown light upon the mystery. But how could it have done so? If a man is charged with embezzlement, will he in future endeavour to prove that somebody else has taken the money? If so, naval court-martial procedure will only be encumbered by the change. The Admiralty have probably yielded to legal pressure in consenting to adopt this measure, for the War Office having already made the change it could hardly be resisted.

Admiral Francis Close, speaking from personal experience of West African fever, mentions the advantage of hair pillows over those stuffed with feathers. The latter absorb and retain heat, while the former is a non-conductor, and the gallant Admiral suggests that only those made of hair should be sent to South African hospitals. We hardly agree, however, with him that hair in pillows never get hard, as we are reminded of a correspondent who endured much fever in the Bight of Biafra, begging his servant to pick and repack the resting-place of a fevered head.

In view of the severe criticism to which water-tube boilers in the Navy are exposed, it is worth noting that the cruiser Pelorus, Captain Hulbert, which has just returned to England from South African waters, has been three and a quarter years in commission without developing any defects of a serious character in her Normand boilers. She has steamed during her commission upwards of 50,000 miles, and, although her boilers now require overhauling, she is still quite efficient, and is ordered to be out of the dockyard hands by August 20. The first part of her commission was spent in the Channel Squadron, whilst more recently the Pelorus has been actively engaged off Delagea Bay in patrolling that coast. Her officers have boarded 167 vessels during the war, but the two ships which they sent to Durban were both released by the Prize Court, which caused great disappointment to the crew. The Pelorus is interesting in quite another way as the cruiser in which Mr. Rudyard Kipling gained most of the material for his popular "Fleet in Being." The novelist took a cruise in her in the summers of 1897 and 1898, and he paid a visit to his old friends among the officers in April last when the Pelorus was at Simon's Bay. The Pelorus and her sister ship the Pactolus are fitted with "small tube" boilers, which are widely different in construction, though not in principle, from the much-abused Belleville type.

Captains Percy Scott and A. H. Limpus gave in combination an interesting lecture at Hong Kong during the stay of the Terrible, in which the former described the mountings of the famous 4.7in. guns, and the latter how they were utilised by the naval brigade to which he was attached, under Captain Jones. So much has been already written about these mountings that it is unnecessary to follow Captain Scott's lecture in detail, but some of the facts he mentioned have not been published in the English newspapers. It was Captain Scott, for instance, who succeeded in flashing messages into Ladysmith by means of a naval searchlight mounted on a railway truck, with a locomotive boiler and a dynamo attached. This was effected from Frere, a distance of no less than twenty-three miles. Again, when General Buller was about to make the final attack on the Boers' position on the Biggarsberg range, he wired to Captain Scott on a Wednesday to ask if he could mount a 6in. quick-firer and let the army have it by the following Monday. The task was accomplished within the time specified, for the gun left Durban on Sunday morning. This gun, criticised by a certain M.P. as "merely picturesque," threw 560 shells into the enemy's position. So at least a Boer prisoner stated. Another interesting fact mentioned in the lecture was the use made of carrier pigeons by the Ladysmith garrison. In one case a photograph, too heavy for one bird to carry, was cut into four pieces for transmission to General Buller. All four birds reached Durban within half an hour of each other—a distance of 170 miles.

Mr. J. Cockburn writes from "The Abbey," North Berwick, with reference to the letter which appeared in our issue of July 21 from the late Captain Roderick Dew:—"I am in possession of one of the guns mentioned as captured. This gun was given to me by my father-in-law, Major Dew, late 88th Regiment, a brother of Captain Roderick Dew. The inscriptions on the gun are curious. Two raised signs show that the gun was cast in an iron mould, the others, which are cut into the metal, give directions as to the charge of powder (Chinese, Yok=medicine), the size of ball, the date of making, and the name of the maker and his assistants. I shall be pleased to show it to anyone who may be in this neighbourhood, who is interested."

THE CHINESE CRISIS.

Sunday, July 29.

Admiral Seymour arrived at Shanghai on Thursday last. The Centurion, Undaunted, and Dido were at Wu-Sung. The following warships were at Shanghai: Daphne, Alacrity, Hart, and Woodcock (British), Castine (American), Holland (Dutch), Surprise (French), and Takao and Akagi (Japanese).

A message from Sir Claude Macdonald, dated July 6, reached Tien-tsin, stating that the Legations were under constant fire, and could hold out for 14 days only. Another despatch, dated July 24, states that the foreigners were defending themselves in the Northern Cathedral, near the Forbidden City.

A Chinese force, stated to be 10,000 strong, has taken an entrenched position to the north of Pei-Tsang, where it is being kept under observation by Russian cavalry.

Part of the expeditionary force for the Far East left Bremerhaven yesterday, in the transport steamers Batavia, Halle, and Dresden. The German Emperor, accompanied by Prince Eitel-Friedrich, Prince Adalbert, and the Imperial Chancellor, delivered a farewell address to the troops.

The French official journals publish a decree prohibiting until further orders the export from France, Algeria, and French Colonies and Protectorates, of all weapons of war destined for China and contiguous countries.

The transport Nevasa, with a detachment of Bengal Sappers, a native field hospital, and transport details, arrived at Hong Kong on Thursday. The transport Vandala has proceeded north.

Monday, July 30.

The British Consul states that Admiral Seymour is going up the Yang-tze to investigate the state of affairs at the various river ports. The Imperial Telegraph Department announces that the following sections have been entirely destroyed by the rebellious population, namely:—Pingyan, Paotingfu Chamsien, Kaifeng Hauchon, Tien-tsin and Tien-tsin-Kalgan. There are indications of an incipient rebellion at Taiwongho. The Italian cruiser Pieremosa and the Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Theresa have arrived at Hong Kong on their way north.

Shanghai is reported quieter. There is slight uneasiness among the foreigners but no excitement. The Chinese show no signs of uneasiness. There has been no display of animosity towards foreigners. Three additional foreign warships arrived on Saturday. There are now 2,500 Chinese troops in the Wu-sung forts and 3,000 at the arsenal, while more are arriving hourly in small detachments.

Canton remains tranquil. The Chinese Customs cruiser Li-kin has proceeded to Hoi-hau, in the island of Hai-nan, for the protection of the foreigners there.

At Tien-tsin the British, Russian, and Japanese Commission, who have taken over the control of the city, offer every encouragement to peaceful citizens to return. At least 200,000 poor natives remain in the suburbs, but all the merchant and business classes have entirely disappeared. One of the most serious difficulties to be confronted will be the question of providing against famine. On the Taku Railway the Russians are employing the traffic staff previously engaged in the work, and the traffic there is now proceeding as smoothly as hitherto. The Russian artillery has been strengthened by the arrival of six 15-centimetre mortars, which are expected to render invaluable assistance in the advance to Peking. Gen. Fukushima's pertinacity in dealing with the situation has been especially noted, and it is mainly due to his efforts that the city is in such excellent condition. The Japanese general's ability has been generally acknowledged and commended, and his intimate knowledge of Chinese tactics has proved of invaluable assistance to the allies.

Tuesday, July 31.

The news from China this morning is distinctly more hopeful, containing as it does authentic evidence that the Ministers in Peking were safe so recently as July 21.

The Admiralty has received the following message from Peking from Rear-Admiral Bruce:—

"British Legation, Peking.

"June 20 to July 16, repeatedly attacked by Chinese troops on all sides; both rifle and artillery fire. Since July 16 armistice, but cordon strictly drawn both sides of position. Chinese barricades close to ours. All women and children in British Legation. Casualties to date, 62 killed, including Capt. Strouts, R.M.L.I.; that (sic) number wounded in hospital, including Capt. Halliday, R.M.L.I. Rest of Legation all well, except David Oliphant and Warren, killed, July 21.—Macdonald."

The German Consul at Tien-tsin telegraphs, under date of July 28, as follows:—

"The German Secretary of Legation at Peking, Below, writes on July 21:—

"Thanks for your news of 19th. The condition of Cordes is satisfactory. The remaining members of the Legation all right. Detachment of guards lost 10 killed, 14 wounded. Houses Legation much damaged by cannon fire; are held by us. Attack of Chinese troops on us ceased since July 16. Speediest possible advance of relief troops urgently necessary. According to trustworthy report the body of Von Ketteler has been buried by Chinese Government."

Herr Cordes, who is mentioned in the above despatch, was the interpreter who accompanied Baron von Ketteler when he was murdered, and who escaped, though wounded.

The Marathon has arrived at Hong Kong. The British transports Sirha, with the Madras Sappers printing section, 39th Field Hospital, and special service officers; Duke of Portland, with the 63rd Field Hospital and 30th Bombay Infantry, and Sirawa, with the 63rd Field Hospital and 26th Bombay Infantry, have also arrived at Hong Kong. The Sirha proceeds north. Major Jeffreys, of the Engineers, goes with it. The Duke of Portland will disembark her troops at Hong Kong. The Hong Kong Regiment has been warned to hold itself in readiness to proceed north on the arrival of reliefs. A telegram from Chifu states that the 14th Infantry Regiment, United States troops, from Manila, has arrived at Taku.

Wednesday, Aug. 1.

The following telegram from Gen. Dorward was received at the War Office yesterday:—

"Chifu, Tuesday.

"Tien-tsin, July 14.—City captured this morning from south-west, after 16 hours' hard fighting, by 4,000 Japanese, British, American, and French troops, including 40 Austrians and Russians, acting at the same time from north-east. Captured 11 guns. Chinese army round Tien-tsin now practically dispersed. Settlements safe from daily shelling. City divided into four quarters for purposes of administration, British, American, Japanese, and French. After capture of city British troops pushed on as fast as possible to north suburbs, seized one river steamer, 200 junks, which will be useful for advance to Peking. Our loss: Royal Marines, Capt. Lloyd, killed in action; Major Loke (? Luke), slightly wounded; 16 men wounded.

"Royal Navy: Lieut. Field, slightly wounded; five men killed in action, 19 wounded.

"2nd Royal Welsh Fusiliers: Five killed in action, 12 wounded, in addition to seven wounded by shell, railway station.

"Hong Kong Regiment: Nine wounded.

"Hong Kong Company Railway Artillery: Two killed in action, five wounded.

"Chinese Regiment: Capt. Ollivant killed in action; Major Pereira, Colour-Sergt. Purdon, slightly wounded; three men killed in action, 13 wounded.

"American losses: 9th Infantry, Col. Liscombe and four officers killed in action, 14 officers wounded; 22 men killed in action, 68 wounded. Marines, four killed in action, 21 wounded. Other nations' losses, about 400."

In the House of Commons last night Mr. Brodric stated that latest advices from Gen. Gaselee show that he contemplates an immediate advance, in which he hopes for the co-operation of the allied forces. It is also reported that the Americans and the Japanese are rushing preparations, and will be ready to advance on Peking soon after the arrival of the troops. Russian and Japanese cavalry are scouting to the north of Tien-tsin, and will probably take Yang-tsun shortly.

Thursday, Aug. 2.

Another letter from Sir Claude Macdonald, dated Peking, the 25th ult., is said to have been received at Taku. On the 20th ult. the Chinese Government urged the Foreign Ministers to leave Peking, but they refused.

An official telegram received in Brussels states that the march of the allies to Peking has begun and that they expect to reach the city in a week. A reconnaissance by the British last Saturday discovered that the Chinese outposts extended over a line five miles in length, crossing the river and railway. Their troops were well entrenched.

The transport Salamis, with the Victorian naval contingent, has left Melbourne for Sydney, where she will embark the New South Wales contingent, and then proceed to Hong Kong. The 2nd Infantry Brigade has been ordered to disembark at Hong Kong, and form a flying column for service in any part of China.

The situation in Manchuria continues to give rise to anxiety. There has been heavy fighting at Niuchwang, without any decisive result. Charbin seems to be seriously threatened by large forces of Chinese. News from the Amur is more satisfactory. The Russians have crossed the river near Blagovestchensk and dispersed the Chinese.

Friday, Aug. 3.

Despatches were received on June 27 at Tien-tsin from Sir Claude Macdonald, Sir Robert Hart, and Mr. Conger, dated the 21st. Sir Claude Macdonald's message states that a brilliant sortie was made on the 3rd inst. by the foreign troops, 1,000 Chinese being killed. "We have provisions," continues the despatch, "for many weeks, but little ammunition. If the enemy continue to shell us as they have done we cannot hold out long, and a complete massacre will follow. We hope that relief may come soon. We are glad to hear of the victory at Tien-tsin, but regret the terrible cost."

It is reported from Tien-tsin that the Japanese vanguard, on the punitive force, has been repulsed with a loss of 150 killed and wounded. The Russians are reported to have captured the forts 10 miles from Tien-tsin, in the direction of Peking.

A fourth British transport bringing Indian troops has arrived at Taku. Seven hundred and eighty United States cavalry deflected from Manila were also due.

Admiral Seymour left Shanghai on Wednesday in the Alacrity, for Nanking, to consult the Viceroy Liu. He had previously wired to the Viceroy notifying him of his intended visit to Nanking. In reply Liu declared that he was unwell and could not see him. Admiral Seymour insisted, and Liu then wired, "I am instructing a Chinese warship to proceed down the river to escort the Alacrity to Nanking, in case of a misunderstanding in passing the forts."

It is reported that the Russians bombarded the forts on Niuchwang plains and occupied them on the morning of the 26th inst.

A telegram from General Grodekoff to the Minister of War, dated Wednesday, says:—In order to relieve the posts of Novokijevskoje and Posjet, which are threatened by the strong Chinese garrison of the fortress of Hun-chun and Savelovka, I ordered a detachment, under General Ajgustoff, to take Hun-chun. On July 29 the advance was carried out and an engagement was fought. The Chinese resisted stubbornly, but on the 30th Hun-chun was taken. The Russian loss was two officers and six men killed and four men wounded. Many guns were captured from the Chinese.

The Bogue forts are engaged in target practice and the Canton authorities are enlisting recruits at nine dollars a month. This is double the usual pay.

Orders have been given at Simla for a third brigade to proceed to China. It is to consist of the 4th and 20th Punjab, the 6th Bengal, and one regiment of Haidarabad Infantry. The last-named regiment will embark at Madras. The remainder of the brigade will embark at Calcutta. The transport Canning has arrived at Hong Kong with the 4th Batn. of the 1st Goorkhas, the 66th Native Field Hospital, details, and supply column. The transport Nation, with ordnance park, transport mules, the 39th Native Field Hospital, native general hospital, and special service details, has also arrived.

The transports Rhein and Adria left Bremerhaven on Thursday for China, having on board the staff of the expeditionary corps under Lieut.-Gen. Lessel, a field post, and Engineers. The Emperor and Empress, with their retinue, visited both vessels as they lay in the Weser previous to their departure, and were enthusiastically greeted by the crews and the public. According to present advices, the Chinese fleet is partly at Hong Kong and partly in the estuary of the Yang-tze River.

Navy Personal.

The accompanying telegrams on the subject of the death of His Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha have been forwarded to us from the Admiralty:—

From His Imperial Majesty the German Emperor to the First Lord of the Admiralty, London:—

"In the name of my Navy, I beg you to accept the expression of our sincerest sympathy at the death of the Duke of Coburg. The fine qualities he developed during his brilliant career as Duke of Edinburgh in H.B.M.'s Navy has made him popular with the sailors of both nations.

"WILLIAM, I.R.,
"Admiral of the Fleet."

Reply of the First Lord of the Admiralty:—

"On behalf of the British Navy, I thank your Majesty most sincerely for the expression of your Majesty's sympathy at the death of His Royal Highness Admiral of the Fleet the Duke of Coburg, and for the eloquent testimony to his qualities as a naval officer, and his popularity with the sailors of both nations, which your gracious telegram conveyed.

"G. J. GOSCHEN."

The following telegram has been sent by the First Lord of the Admiralty to H.I.H. the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha:—

"On behalf of the Navy I beg to offer your Imperial Highness their heartfelt sympathy on the death of Admiral of the Fleet H.R.H. the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Duke of Edinburgh, K.G. Devoted as the Duke always was to the Naval service, and counting among them many personal friends, his loss will be keenly felt. May I associate myself personally with their expression of sympathy?"

The following reply to the above has been received:—

"I am deeply touched by your very kind telegram. Please accept for yourself and the Royal Navy my warmest thanks.

"MARIE."

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Frederick Richards, Captain Sir Berkeley Milne, Commander R. S. P. Hornby, Lieut. R. A. Norton, R.N., Colonel T. W. Dowding, R.M.L.I., and Fleet-Paymaster H. H. Rickard have been directed to represent the Navy at the funeral of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha at Coburg. Fleet-Paymaster Henry Hosking Rickard, who has thus been selected to represent the civil branches of the Navy in the deputation, held a unique position with reference to the late Duke. Not only was he his "Captain's Clerk" in the Sultan and the Black Prince, but he acted as his secretary in each of the four commands which his Royal Highness held as an admiral.

Admiral Henry Christian (Commander), Captains T. K. Hudson (Lieut.) and E. L. Green (Mate), Paymaster-in-Chief A. Whitehouse (Paymaster), Deputy Inspector General Charles Morton (Assistant Surgeon), and Lieut.-Colonel T. Vaughton-Dymock, R.M.L.I. (Captain), are officers still living who served in the grades shewn in brackets on board the Euryalus, under Captain J. W. Tarleton, while his late Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh made his first sea cruise as a midshipman. In all probability there are several others, but in the "Navy Lists" of that period only commissioned officers were inserted.

Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Bart., Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, had the honour of entertaining the Princess Henry of Battenberg at luncheon on Monday last, on the occasion of Her Royal Highness visiting the local Soldiers' Convalescent Home. On the previous Saturday afternoon, Sir Michael and Lady Culme-Seymour gave a farewell reception in the grounds of Admiralty House, which was numerously attended. The gallant admiral will not, however, immediately vacate his command.

Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Seymour, Commander-in-Chief in China, left the Peiho last week for the Yangtze and arrived at Shanghai, leaving his flagship, the Centurion, at Wusung, her draught of water being too great for the anchorage at Shanghai. The Admiral has since left in the Alacrité for Nanking.

Vice-Admiral Sir F. G. D. Bedford, Commander-in-Chief of the North American and West Indian Station, proceeds in the early part of September to Boston, U.S.A., in his flagship, the Crescent, accompanied by other vessels of his squadron, and will remain a week.

Captain W. Stokes Rees, of the Thetis, left Simon's Town on Sunday last for St. Helena to relieve Captain A. L. Winsloe, of the Niobe, ordered home.

Captain F. E. E. Brock, of the Highflyer, arrived at and left Seychelles on Sunday last to join the Commander-in-Chief at Mauritius, where the exchange of flagships will take place, and Captain Brock return home in command of the Eclipse. It was erroneously stated elsewhere that the Highflyer was en route for China.

Captain C. H. Cochran, of the Pegasus, arrived at the Nore on Wednesday from the South-east Coast of America, to pay off that cruiser and commission the Sappho at Chatham in her place for similar service.

Captain A. J. Horsley, of the Europa, arrived at Batavia on Saturday last from Albany, W.A., and left on Wednesday for Colombo. He will not, therefore, be detached to the Far East.

Captain H. P. Routh, of the Juno, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday from St. Vincent to refit that vessel, and give leave to his ship's company.

Captain Henry Leah, of the Diana, paid off that vessel at Chatham on Monday last on return from Australia. This cruiser made a very satisfactory passage to and from the Antipodes, and her performance compares most favourably with that of the Europa.

Captain F. C. M. Noel, of the Wallaroo, detached temporarily from the Australian Squadron to the Chinese fleet, arrived at Hong Kong on Monday last. The Mohawk having previously arrived, there is the Lizard still to reach the headquarters in the Far East. Lieut.-Commander J. C. Watson was reported from Thursday Island on the 23rd ult. He previously served in China in the Imperieuse, 1888-89.

Commander David Beatty, D.S.O. of the Barfleur, who was previously reported as wounded at Tien-tsin, has been invalided, and is due at Liverpool, September 12, via New York. Admiral Seymour has telegraphed that Commander Beatty's wounds are in left hand and shoulder with no fracture.

Commander F. H. P. W. Freeman, of the Mohawk, detached from the Australian to the China command, reached Hong Kong on Saturday last.

Commander the Hon. Seymour Fortescue, recently employed as naval A.D.C. on the staff of Field-Marshal Lord Roberts in South Africa, arrived home on Friday in last week by the Union and Castle steamship Briton.

Commander Herbert Lyon, of the Curaçoa, after transfer to the Cleopatra, leaves Devonport in the latter vessel on Saturday next, to cruise round the coasts of England and Scotland, returning by the eastern seaboard to Plymouth on October 2.

Lieut. E. P. McLean, invalided from the Empress of India, arrived at Plymouth on Monday last on the P. and O. steamship Ceylon, and was admitted to the Royal Naval Hospital.

Lieut. F. L. Field, of the Barfleur, was wounded at the capture of Tien-tsin on the 14th ult.

Sub-Lieut. Geoffrey Mackworth, from the Rupert, and Midshipman J. Ford-Anderson, late of the Isis, having been left behind from her when she proceeded to China, both arrived home on Sunday last in the Orient steamship Oceana, invalided from the Mediterranean station.

Captain Claude W. Robertson (not Robinson), R.M.L.I., employed on special service in South Africa, was the officer reported killed last week. The Royal Marine force has lost a young and valuable officer. An obituary notice appears in this issue.

Captain Bernard M. Strouts, R.M.L.I., had the misfortune to lose his life in the recent defence of the British Legation at Peking, between June 20 and the 16th ult., and his brother officer in captivity, Captain L. S. T. Halliday, was wounded. At the capture of Tien-tsin on the 14th ult., Captain H. T. R. Lloyd, R.M.L.I., of the Aurora, was killed, and Major E. V. Luke, R.M.L.I., of the Barfleur, wounded. Captain E. Wray, R.M.L.I., is also mentioned as wounded, but it requires confirmation. Of the small number of officers of this gallant corps serving in China, three have been killed in action in the course of a month—truly a large proportion.

Major-General J. I. Morris, Deputy Adjutant-General of the Royal Marine force, made his first inspection of the Plymouth Division, R.M.L.I., this week.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

LANCER.—The custom died out many years ago.

J. L. D.—Three years.

VOLUNTEER F.O.—Your reading of the paragraph is correct.

DOUBTFUL.—Apply at once through your C.O.

INDEX.—That is the present idea.

CHANNEL ISLANDS.—A special allowance.

C. F. O.—The 92nd (Gordon) Highlanders.

J.—The cases of officers in South Africa will be specially considered in cases of exceptional merit. It would not be fair to place the cadets from Sandhurst at a disadvantage.

W. B.—Your communication has been forwarded to Paris. Thanks. There have been regrettable expressions of adverse opinion respecting the officer's conduct, but gallant soldiers will appreciate his chivalrous career and death.

THE COLT AUTOMATIC QUICK-FIRING MACHINE-GUN
AND DUNDONALD GALLOPING
GUN-CARRIAGE.

Colt Automatic Guns, taking the English Service ammunition of
'303 calibre, and mounted on DUNDONALD GALLOPING CAR-RIAGES, are now being largely used in South Africa, both by Imperial and Colonial troops.

The Dundonald Carriage carries 2,000 rounds of ammunition, loaded in belts ready for immediate use, and is protected by patent armour plate.
The Carriage can be taken into action by one man and horse, and can be unlim-bered and brought into action within the space of thirty seconds, the Colt Gun being then ready to pour out a stream of bullets at the rate of over 450 rounds per minute, or less if required.

The Dundonald Galloping Ammunition Cart is constructed to carry either 7,000 or 10,500 rounds, loaded in belts and ready for transfer to the Colt Guns at a moment's notice. This also can be galloped into action and unlimbered with the same speed as the Gun Carriage, and therefore forms a most valuable adjunct to the Colt Gun and Dundonald Carriage.

The Dundonald General Service Cart. Specially
adapted for South African Service. The lightest, strongest, most serviceable
Two-wheeled Cart made. Constructed with a Steel Frame and Hide Bottom.
Carries over 1,000 lbs. of Baggage, contains over 100 cubic feet covered space,
weighs about 600 lbs.

GENERAL PRINSLOO'S SURRENDER.

THE surrender of General Prinsloo, near Fouriesburg, on the 30th ult., will take a foremost place among the dramatic incidents of the South African War. Far less tragic in its details than Paardeberg, and falling at a period in the campaign when the illusions of the Boers as to their invincibility were well-nigh dispelled, it had less power to produce a staggering effect on the enemy. The crushing blow that this surrender has inflicted on the dwindling resources of the Boers must sensibly reduce the importance and dimensions of any further operations the enemy can carry on. An imposing spectacle was witnessed when General Prinsloo, the chief of Mr. Steyn's army, Crowther, the opponent of Sir Leslie Rundle at Biddulphberg, and De Villiers, his opponent at Rooikrantz, with three commandoes, the first to surrender, filed in between the British lines and laid down their arms before General Hunter on the slopes of the Bethlehem mountains. We are informed that each prisoner had two horses, and some three, for the most part in splendid condition. The command of excellent horses in apparently never-failing numbers has been perhaps the chief source of strength of the enemy, and the absence of them our principal weakness in this campaign. When Christian De Wet made his successful dash from Fouriesburg, eluding Hunter's cordon, each burgher, it is reported, had a led horse to carry stores, and a number of well-horsed light carts, capable of maintaining a very rapid pace, accompanied the commando. The use of led pack-horses, after the manner of the Australian bushmen, accustomed to either pack or riding saddle, has no doubt greatly aided the Boers in their many raiding exploits, and it is an expedient which would have greatly increased the mobility of our own over-worked mounted troops on many occasions throughout the war.

The rudimentary character of Boer military organisation and the slight hold possessed by commandants over their burghers has been exemplified in the disinclination of a large proportion of Prinsloo's force to come in after their chief had surrendered in his own name and theirs. On the other hand, the success of the enveloping movements was so complete that the commandoes at first holding aloof have, with the exception of Olivier's, since surrendered, finding escape impossible. The Winburg and Senekal commandoes, 1,200 strong, surrendered to General Hunter on the 31st ult., and others to General Bruce-Hamilton, who had collected 1,200 rifles, 650 ponies and one Armstrong gun; and on the 8th inst. Lord Roberts reported that 4,130 men had been made prisoners, with the three guns belonging to U Battery R.H.A., and many waggon loads of ammunition. The completeness of this success was, no doubt, due to the suddenness and rapidity of General Hunter's turning movement to the east, by which the Boer waggon-train, winding for some twenty miles along the valley of the Little Caledon River, was blocked, and prevented from gaining the Harrismith road beyond the passes. Not expecting the British in that quarter, the Boers devoted their best efforts to maintaining a rearguard action with the columns closing in from west and north, until, when too late, they found themselves encumbered with their heavy waggons and vast herds of cattle, cut off from the eastern passes, with no alternative left them but surrender. Olivier alone, with five guns and 1,500 burghers, had succeeded in breaking away towards Harrismith. The general satisfaction would be greater had more of the enemy's guns been taken, but on this occasion, as on every other during the war, where a marked success appeared to be imminent, the Boer guns have slipped away, adroitly withdrawn out of action under cover of rifle fire, at the first signs of waning fortune. Some degree of mystery hangs over the guns of the enemy, as to their number and whereabouts. We have learned to respect their power, and to admire their mobility, which has so often made them a vanishing quantity and helped to deceive us as to their actual numbers. It is probable that many have been hidden away or buried, to save them from the British, and it is also possible that they have never been so numerous as has been supposed. The fact, however, remains that they have not been captured.

Lord Roberts on Monday sent home the important and very welcome news that Harrismith surrendered to MacDonald on Saturday, and that on the following day the British cavalry arrived there through the Drakenberg, thus placing Ladysmith in direct communication by rail with the Orange River Colony. The surrender of Olivier with the 1,500 burghers who, repudiating Prinsloo's authority, escaped from Fouriesburg, should now not long be delayed. On Saturday he was in a position between Harrismith and Newmarket road, and was being followed by Rundle; but Olivier has proved his capacity in eluding pursuit, and he may possibly slip away towards Vrede.

Slowly but methodically the surrounding of Christian De Wet seemed to be progressing, but as we go to press the news arrives that he has slipped away again. General Broadwood was tightening the cordon around him from the south, Lord Methuen from Potchefstroom threatened his rear, and Lord Kitchener, moving from the Rhenoster River, and reinforced by part of Brabant's Horse and the Canadian Regiment, had taken one of his flank positions. Reinforcements were reaching both sides, and as the available British forces greatly outnumber those of the enemy, another decisive success was expected. But De Wet escaped once more.

With the exception of the districts stretching from Pretoria towards the western border the general situation is satisfactory. Unfortunately the garrison at Eland's River, holding the line between Zeerust and Rustenburg, consisting of about 140 Bushmen, eighty Rhodesian Horse, and the same number of Rhodesian Infantry, under Colonel Hore, has been attacked, and is believed to have been captured. Lord Roberts, telegraphing on Wednesday night, said he hoped that Sir Charles Warren would have arrived in time to save the post, but Delarey, on hearing of Ian Hamilton's approach to Rustenburg, hurried off west and surrounded the little garrison, which if it has given in can only have done so after a stiff struggle, as firing was heard for several days. Against this incident has, however, to be put a substantial success, secured by Sir Redvers Buller, who has quitted the Pretoria and Natal Railway, and is making across country to the line which runs to Delagoa Bay. He started from Paardekop—between Standerton and Volksrust—on Tuesday drove the enemy out of their hills and reached Amersfoort the same night after a march of eighteen miles. His front extended for more than eight miles, and the enemy hastily quitted their strong positions, which had been carefully prepared, as soon as they found our cavalry menacing their retreat. It is clear that Sir Redvers Buller has now been released from his long period of inaction by the collapse of the enemy's resistance in the Orange River Colony. With the steady advance of the Army of Natal the whole situation should undergo a change. General French is moving towards Machadodorp. Thus the two armies ought very soon to be in position to operate in conjunction. When this is brought about effectually the end will be very near. Of course, for the moment, De Wet's escape from Lord Kitchener's clutches has rather upset the plan of campaign, but the disorganisation of arrangements cannot last for long.

THE HORSE QUESTION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

IT is evident from letters which reach us from South Africa that the frightful mortality, especially amongst the horses of the British forces, has been mainly responsible for the prolongation of the war. The mobility of the Boer forces has enabled them to keep the field because the British troops have been always inferior to them in this respect. Our Colonial troops, although even their mobility has not been equal to that of the Boers, have yet been able to manœuvre at high pressure far more successfully than their comrades of the Regular Army. Several causes have combined, we are assured, to bring about this state of affairs, but the chief of them is, we are told, bad management. Had there been none of the contributory evils, then perhaps all might have gone fairly well; but certainly there could have been no such collapse as has actually occurred had not the effects of hard work and scanty rations, &c., been increased by a lack of common sense in the treatment of their horses by our responsible officers. War cannot be waged without many hardships falling to the lot of both men and horses. Long marches must be performed as a matter of course whenever the necessity arises, but he who demands one ounce of exertion from the horses beyond the minimum that will fully answer the purpose is simply killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. The strategical value of mounted troops lies in their mobility, and, as this becomes noticed, their value descends in the scale more and more nearly to that of infantry; indeed, efficient infantry that can really march their own pace and stick to it are entirely preferable to worn out cavalry, who cannot be depended upon to execute the manœuvres set them to accomplish.

Time after time, as we all know, the Boers have got away safely with guns and convoys—from Poplar Grove onwards—simply because the cavalry who were intended to cut them off were too late. Bad management of the horses, it is to be feared, is at the root of nearly all the failures. Let it be granted, by all means, that hundreds of horses were called upon to work, necessarily as well as unnecessarily, almost immediately after arrival, and whilst suffering from the fatigues of long railway journeys, added to thirty, or even more, days on board some crawling transport. Let it also be granted that the forage ration was in cases inadequate, and did not pretend to be sufficient. It was, as Mr. Wyndham explained last Wednesday to General Laurie, simply a question of transport difficulties, and the amount of the ration depended upon this consideration only. But just because of these disadvantages there was all the greater need to save the horses to the utmost, and give them every possible chance of filling their empty bellies on the grass. "Colonial troops on the march," we are told, "will be seen leading their horses for miles, and at every halt scattering for grazing purposes; whilst in the case of British cavalry the men are not ordered in many instances even to dismount until it is almost time to move on again, and as for any attempt to give the horses a chance of grazing, such a thing is rarely to be observed. Nor, generally speaking, are the horses turned out to graze round the camp, and even when this is done they are constantly being 'rounded up' and get no peace." What our officers fail to realise is that the performance of evolutions at a rapid pace is practised at drill, partly perhaps to produce a pretty effect, but chiefly in order that when there is need for haste on service rapidity can be achieved without confusion. Whoever gallops his horses without reason is a bad horse-master, and a worse cavalry leader. It is because of so much thoughtless absurdity that sickness and death have decimated the ranks of our mounted troops.

Colonel Mahon's march to Mafeking was a fair example in favour of proper management. Colonel Mahon reached Mafeking with only trifling loss after a twelve days' march, with an average exceeding twenty-two miles per day, and nearly every horse in his command was more or less fit for immediate work. M Battery R.H.A., which accompanied the column, managed its horses in the manner that prevails amongst Colonials, and consequently continued also efficient. In proof of this, it is only necessary to say that on June 18, after a march of thirteen miles, covering the advance of General Hunter's division, M Battery accompanied Colonel Mahon in his dash on Krugersdorp, covering fifteen miles in two hours and twenty minutes, and this without sustaining any detriment worth speaking of. But Colonel Mahon holds strongly that the first duty of a cavalry officer is to save his horses for the moment of pressure if it comes, and make every officer and man under him realise the part that his horse plays in promoting the efficiency of his arm. This view, unfortunately, does not prevail in the British Army, and so the Boers have generally managed to get away with their guns. We are scarcely surprised at this, for those who have attended cavalry manœuvres in England do not require to be told how needlessly cavalry are sometimes galloped. We have so much to learn from the Germans in this respect. As a German cavalry officer once remarked to us after seeing cavalry operations at Salisbury, "It is well you are a rich nation; your waste in horses must be enormous. In warfare those regiments would be worse than useless; their horses must be quite done up. How strange it is. I always thought you were a horse loving people, but you evidently are not; it is all too heroic, but to my mind an extravagant waste of power. There is nothing gained by working your horses to death; on the contrary, cavalry under such conditions are worse than no cavalry at all. You will have to alter all that, and then your cavalry will not be approachable." And it seems very much as though the flaw in our system which the German cavalry officer detected has existed to a great extent in South Africa.

EXPERT OPINION IN PARLIAMENT.

THE Earl of Rosebery described the discussion respecting the relations of the Commander-in-Chief with the Secretary of State and the House, which he raised on Friday week in the House of Lords, as most "interesting and fruitful." "Interesting" it certainly was, but it would be difficult to determine in what it was "fruitful." The War Office has a civilian Secretary of State with private and assistant private secretaries, a Parliamentary Secretary with under-secretaries, a permanent Under-Secretary with private secretary and assistant private secretary, a Financial Secretary with private secretaries, an Accountant-General with deputies and assistants, and a Director of Contracts. Next, there is the Military Department—the Headquarters Staff of the Army, at the head of which is Field-Marshal Viscount Wolseley, Commander-in-Chief. These two departments are spoken of generally as "the War Office." When some fiery reformer or angry "tribune of the people" inveighs against "the War Office" and demands its abolition or its reconstruction, because of its alleged incapacity, imprévoyance and general rottenness, it is the military side of the great establishment in Pall Mall which is assailed, though it is the Civilian Secretary of State in the House of Lords and the Civilian Under-Secretary in the House of Commons who speak for and defend the department. It is they who make known to Lords and Commons the measures which "the War Office" considers necessary and expedient for the service of the Empire. The Earl of Rosebery called the attention of the Government and of the country to what he considered unsatisfactory official statements when measures for the defence of the country were explained by the Secretary of State because the Commander-in-Chief did not appear to defend them in the House of Lords. He desires "expert opinion"—not "lurking in the red box" of Lord Lansdowne, but expressed publicly—to reassure men who have not "a blind and venerating confidence" in the methods of the War Office. Now, it would be exceedingly inconvenient, we think, if the Commander-in-Chief, instead of approving, were to declare that he was utterly dissatisfied with the measures proposed by the Secretary of State, and that he had handed in his resignation. It would be, of course, impossible for him to remain at the head of the Army. But suppose that the Commander-in-Chief went further than that. What would the country think of an "expert opinion" to the effect that the constitution of the War Office itself was rotten, and that it was quite impossible for a department so constituted to be efficient?

The War Office proper is Topsy-like; it was not made—it "grew" in the garden of the constitution. The Marquis of Lansdowne repudiated the notion that the proposals of the Government are the results of the labours of the civilian members of the War Office—"a fallacy of considerable currency." Both sides of the house were engaged on them. "Since the war began there has scarcely been a day in which the civilian and the military members of the War Office have not met at the same table to discuss the military steps to be taken." Both soldiers and civilians agreed about them as the best and most effective that could be taken. None of the six Commanders-in-Chief who preceded Lord Wolseley, said Lord Lansdowne, refrained from taking part in the debates of the House of Lords, but they did not do much. The Duke of York spoke only once, and it was on Indian military matters. The Duke of Wellington spoke occasionally, and we may be very sure the civilian side of the War Office had very little to do with his Grace's opinion. Lord Hill made two purely complimentary speeches, Lord Hardinge spoke "occasionally," but the Duke of Cambridge was in the habit of frequently taking part in the debates. Since His Royal Highness was retired from the position of Commander-in-Chief he has insisted over and over again that during the forty years he was at the head of the Army he disapproved of measures which were introduced by the War Office representing the Government of the day. There is a great difference between the position of the Royal Duke, who held office "without limit of time," and Lord Wolseley, who is Commander-in-Chief for a fixed term, but it would not "turn the Commander-in-Chief into a political partisan," and so, as Lord Lansdowne said, "degrade him," if he were to accept measures which he did not altogether consider expedient from a purely military point of view. It would not prevent the Opposition turning out the Government if the War Office, as experts, supported the Secretary of State, as the fall of the Ministry of which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was War Minister proved. The Earl of Rosebery thinks that a few words from Lord Wolseley would be a great comfort and consolation to the people of this country, who have good reason for the uneasiness which prevails respecting the present position of the Empire. There seems to be no comfort, at any rate, in the reflection that there is a body of quasi-experts, at the head of which is the Duke of Devonshire, charged with the defence of the kingdom, and it would be well if they could let us into the secret without telling too much. Lord Lansdowne must not think that he can satisfy doubts and answer all questions by asking those who are rendered uneasy by the utterances of the Government itself to "produce alternative plans" and to indicate the measures they consider necessary to make us safe.

Army Notes.

The session of Parliament which closed on Wednesday cannot be said to have produced any very important military legislation. It has been marked by the introduction of one or two Bills materially changing the character of the Auxiliary Forces, but, beyond this, the measures for the improvement of our military system are held over until such time as the war in South Africa affords the Government an opportunity of considering what is desirable to be done in order to better our military condition, which is now admitted on all hands to be defective. Indeed, we have reason to know that this subject was gone into pretty thoroughly at a meeting of the Defence Committee held at the Foreign Office on Thursday. As yet, however, only the lines of policy have been laid down, as it is recognised that it would be premature to launch new systems until the principal actors in the military drama still in progress in South Africa have returned home to give the Government the benefit of their advice on points of detail, which must necessarily be considered before any final decision is arrived at. The fact of the nation being involved in the first great war on which it has embarked for over forty years has naturally caused private members to devote an increased amount of attention to Army questions. Hence much of the time of the Under Secretary of State for War has been taken up in replying to inquiries as to matters affecting the efficiency and well-being of our forces at home and abroad. On the whole Mr. Wyndham may be said to have played his part well. He has had to bear a burden of responsibility, and has frequently been very sorely tried; but one thing, at least, can be said for him, his proverbial courtesy and good temper and his clear explanations have impressed everybody, even the severest critics of War Office procedure. The War Office may certainly think itself fortunate in having been represented in the House of Commons in a most critical period by an official of Mr. Wyndham's undoubted ability, for on several occasions it would have gone badly with it but for the Under-Secretary's tact in dealing with knotty points and trying explanations. Mr. Wyndham has ridden lightly over all his troubles and difficulties, and so the War Office has come out of the ordeal, all things considered, admirably. But it might have been very different, seeing how strong the feeling of opposition has been, and how much reason there was for the irritation which existed when the House assembled at the beginning of the year. But as all's well that ends well the Session of 1900 may be said to have been a successful one for the office in Pall Mall. It has had to stand at the bar of public opinion, and if it has not quite justified its system, this at any rate can be said for it—it has secured so much confidence that all classes feel certain of the fulfilment of promises next year. Then the Government has pledged itself to produce a large scheme of military reform. It will go badly with the War Office and the Government, too, if that scheme, when it comes to be submitted, is not as far-reaching as it ought to be.

Every day brings forth new proof of Chinese strength. The task of subduing the Boers was a simple matter compared to subduing the Chinese, but should we have succeeded had every general of a division acted without reference to supreme authority? Yet this was the state of affairs at Tien-tsin, and again at Pei-ting. To make confusion worse confounded the Allied Army is composed of representative contingents sent by all the Great Powers, and they make it a point of honour to speak only their own language. As for collisions between Russian and Japanese troops they are a matter of common knowledge. This lack of harmony is merely the echo of discord in Europe. Mr. Brodrick's statement of policy in the House last week has provoked an outburst of anti-English feeling on the Continent, and nowhere is it more violent than in Germany. The truth is the Powers, whose occupation of Chinese territory is the immediate cause of the present crisis, are not pleased that this country should declare itself against a partition of the Chinese Empire, and accuse her of betraying the cause of the Allies. With Admiral Seymour's action in the Yang-tse Valley they are especially dissatisfied. Whatever mistakes the Government may have made in the past, they have deserved well of the country since the safety of the Legations was first in danger. Perhaps their experience in South Africa has given them wisdom, and as the details of the battle of Pei-ting come to hand it becomes more and more clear that, as England was last year in South Africa, so is the world this year in China, with this difference—that it has no friendly territory to use as a base of operations. The lesson is obvious. If a united Empire was necessary to overcome the Boers, a united world is necessary to overcome the Chinese. Meanwhile the selection of Field-Marshal Count von Waldersee as Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies has occasioned satisfaction everywhere—in London and St. Petersburg more particularly—as it is felt that a good moral effect will be produced thereby. It would have been difficult to have made a happier appointment, Count von Waldersee being an officer of recognised European reputation, the man chosen by Von Moltke to represent him during his last years, and who afterwards took the great Field-Marshal's place as Chief of the Staff. We regard the nomination of Count von Waldersee as an event of no little importance, and the spirit in which the announcement of the appointment has been accepted cannot fail to produce a good result.

Colonel Poë in a letter elsewhere reminds us that a detachment of Marines is the garrison of the British Legation at Peking. In all there were about three guns and eighty men. After the destruction of the other Legations, and the consequent concentration of European defence, their numbers were increased by a guard sent up to Peking shortly before the storm burst; but even in the Indian Mutiny an impossible position was never held for the same length of time with fewer men. Possessing no better weapons than machine guns and rifles, they have for six weeks successfully resisted, not only the Boxer hordes, but the trained troops of the Viceroy, armed with the latest inventions of science. The story of Mafeking stirred the spirit of the Empire as it has not been stirred since the days of Cawnpore and Lucknow. But the story of the British Legation at Peking is not unworthy to stand in the same category. The spirit of the defence breathes in the bald statement of facts sent to the Times last week by Dr. Morrison, an Australian-born Englishman, of whom the Empire may be proud. In spite of the horror of the situation, the risk of starvation, and apparent hopelessness of the struggle, there is not a trace of emotion in his telegram, or a sign of suffering. The courage of the garrison is as high as their provisions are low. Colonel Poë is naturally anxious that the splendid gallantry of the Royal Marines should not be forgotten or overlooked. The pity is that the reminder should be necessary. At Graspan there was a detachment of Royal Marines, 300 strong with six officers, of whom a third were left on the field. Unfortunately its heroism received the scantiest public recognition at the time; to-day it is forgotten, with a hundred other like incidents in the history of the corps.

The decision of the Government of India to employ Imperial Service troops in China is a matter of great importance, and shows at once how wise the policy of Lord Dufferin was when he, acting on Lord Roberts's strong recommendation, suggested that steps should be taken to organise and drill these troops on the same lines as are laid down for the regular native Army of India. Already it has been proved conclusively what excellent fighting material is to be found in the ranks of the contingents maintained by the great feudatory princes, for in the North-West Frontier campaign of 1897-98 they were afforded every opportunity of distinguishing themselves, and never once were found to be wanting in soldierly qualities. But this is the first occasion on which they have served out of India. Their employment marks, therefore, a new departure, as these troops will now be ranged among the Imperial forces of the Empire available for service in any part of the world. Hitherto the idea has obtained that such troops were only intended for the defence of India, but with the outbreak of hostilities in China and its sequel of immediate offers of service by native chiefs eager to show their loyalty, the decision is unquestionably a wise one. "If the occasion arises," the Simla correspondent of the Times says, "more regiments might well be sent, as disappointment will be felt by the States whose troops are not selected." Those who saw the contingent of native officers representing the Imperial Service troops who visited England on the occasion of the Jubilee of 1897 will remember what a fine, soldierlike body they were, and will scarcely wonder that the authorities in India have been so ready to avail themselves of the offer of the 1st Jodhpore Lancers, the Maler Kotla and Alwar Infantry, and Bikaner Camel Corps (without camels) for the China expedition. It is something to know that the whole force of Imperial Service troops has been placed at the disposal of the Queen Empress. All ranks are anxious to take the field and prove that they are ready to fight for the Empire. It is a fact of which we may feel justly proud, for there has been no appeal to them for assistance, their offer having been made spontaneously.

We learn from the Revue du Cercle Militaire that four guns of the "Long Tom" class, being the Canet long 6in., were furnished to the Transvaal by the Creusot Works before the war. It was one of these which was damaged on the night of December 7 by the Imperial Light Horse and the Natal Carbineers, who carried away the breech block with them. It appears that Colonel de Villebois-Mareuil wrote to the editor of the Liberté, speaking of the marvellous precision of these pieces, and of their range, about which, he said, a kind of mysterious legend had grown; and, after the war, the great deeds of Long Tom would long be recounted in the farms and trek waggons of the Boers. The legendary Long Tom was the first of these big guns to be brought into action, and its march from Laing's Nek to Ladysmith so astonished the colonel that he was unwilling to recount its Odyssey without the help of photographs. He says it was Léon, who came from Creusot, who, by indomitable energy, and the help sometimes of twenty couples of oxen, and sometimes of the arms of numbers of Boers, that conducted the operation. M. Grunberg, also from Creusot, was at Pretoria and Johannesburg, where he appears to have worked "wonderful cures" in the case of damaged guns. Among others he undertook to repair the damaged Long Tom, which was rather shortened, but was quite good for its shrapnel fire with full charges.

Persistent attempts have been made to show that Kynochs have been unduly favoured by the War Office in the matter of contracts. The suggestion was even made in the House of Commons on Wednesday. Mr. Chamberlain repudiated, however, the idea that he had used his influence to obtain orders for the company of which his brother happens to be chairman. The report of the Contracts Committee bears out what Mr. Chamberlain said. It is there declared emphatically that as regards cordite, the Committee "are satisfied that the orders were allocated with the single object of securing the best results to the public service." It is indisputable that Kynochs secured a preponderance of orders, but this would seem to be because they had specially laid down extensive plant to cope with big requirements, and were therefore in a position to turn out large quantities of cordite more quickly than the majority of firms.

The Contracts Committee have made a suggestion which is deserving of notice. The Committee suggest that it is worthy of the consideration of the War Office whether it would not be possible to supply from Government stores boots or other equipments required by Volunteers or Yeomanry when proceeding on active service, thus ensuring efficient inspection and serviceable articles. This, like most of the Committee's proposals, is a practical means of guarding against an inferior quality of stores, &c., being supplied to the troops in the future. It is, indeed, the only feasible plan; for the proof of the boot is in the wearing, and whilst they are new, it is difficult even for an expert to say whether they are of good material throughout. The report of the Contracts Committee may not be quite so conclusive as might be wished, but if its recommendations are attended to, the labour of the gentlemen who conducted the inquiry will not have been in vain.

Permission has been given for another regiment to change its facings to the colour worn prior to July 1, 1881, the West Yorkshire Regiment being allowed to adopt the buff of the old 14th. The regiments to which the concession of wearing the old facings has been made are the East Kent (3rd) to buff, Northumberland Fusiliers (5th) goring green, Suffolk (12th) yellow, Yorkshire (19th) grass green, and Seaforth Highlanders (72nd-78th) buff. This is a measure which all must approve, and we trust to hear soon that other regiments have moved for a similar privilege. An officer writing from South Africa tells us that the Essex Regiment, which has fought so splendidly, is hoping to find its service recognised by being allowed to take the facings of the old 56th, so that the regiment may once more be known as the "Pompadors." In the same way the Sherwood Foresters would desire, no doubt, to have Lincoln green, the Duke of Wellington's the scarlet of the old 33rd and 76th, the Durham Light Infantry dark green, the Norfolk Regiment (9th) might well resume the old colour, yellow, the Lincolnshire (10th) might prefer Lincoln green to their former yellow, the Devonshire (11th) could well establish a claim to the green of past times, the East Yorkshire (15th) to yellow, the Bedfordshire (16th) to yellow, the Lancashire Fusiliers (20th) to yellow, the South Wales Borderers (24th) to green, the Hampshire (37th-67th) to yellow, the South Staffordshire (38th-80th) to yellow, the Dorsetshire (39th-54th) to green, and the Middlesex (57th-77th) to yellow. In the case of the last four regiments the colour was worn by both battalions before the amalgamation. There would still be enough regiments with white—seventeen. It cannot fail to promote the best interests of esprit de corps if a tendency is shown to yield to the wishes of good soldiers, and it has to be remembered that it is the keenest and best among them who would appreciate the restoration of the old colours.

The North-West Frontier tribes, who took part in the Tirah Campaign, are dissatisfied that they have not received a medal instead of two clasps in recognition of their services. The late Sir William Lockhart, whose influence among them was one of the secrets of his success, promised to do his utmost to persuade the Indian and Home authorities to meet their wishes; but, unhappily, he died before he was able to take up the matter seriously. The consequence is the people, whose friendliness is essential to the continuity of our policy in the North-West, are given a grievance. A small thing, says the official world. It is nothing of the kind. Our neglect of cheap methods of winning the goodwill of Eastern races has more than once led to serious trouble. In this respect we might with advantage sit at the feet of Russia, which never loses a chance of securing support by the bestowal of a decoration. Even among ourselves the question of honours is one of considerable importance; among Orientals it is of the first importance; and if we were a little more imaginative, we should not forget it on those occasions when sound policy requires us to remember it. In India it is hoped that a medal will be issued to those who served in the Tirah Campaign in memory of Sir William Lockhart. Nothing better could be devised. Not only will it satisfy their ambition, but it will keep alive the memory of the leader they loved as much as they admired. If such a little thing will give pleasure to the Frontier tribes, and keep them content for a generation, as we are assured it will, then we should have no hesitation in realising it. A sound policy is often built upon little things, the neglect of which sometimes brings a brilliant policy to naught.

The report of the Select Committee appointed to investigate the allegations of fraud and irregularity in connection with War Office contracts now lies before us, and it proves to be very much on the lines we indicated last week. It is exculpatory in character, though the conclusions arrived at are rather in the nature of a verdict of "Not guilty, but don't do it again." It is pointed out that the discovery of fraud and secret commissions was very difficult for the Committee to arrive at, since any person who had offered or accepted bribes would naturally not come and proclaim the fact. The suspicions of the Committee, however, appear to have been excited, and, though they were able to obtain very little direct evidence on the subject, they allude to the widespread belief in the existence of such bribery. Having regard to this statement, and to the acknowledged prevalence of secret commissions in private commerce, they think there is ground for suspicion that such cases may occur also in the public service, and they have some doubt whether the system under which detailed inspection takes place gives complete security against it. The same doubt prevails very widely in the Service. We hope now that public attention has been called to the matter, the authorities will try and institute some reform. We trust, too, that attention will be paid to the suggestion that more care should be taken to impress upon officers responsible that in passing goods they are not entitled to rely upon the judgment of their subordinates only, but must judge for themselves. It is to be feared that the examination of goods by officers is often of a very perfunctory kind. There is urgent need, as the Committee rightly says, for a more thorough examination of the quality of goods as well as for their quantity. If that had been attended to the hay shipped by the Manchester Port would never have been accepted. The recommendation that the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, should be extended to the Government Service with a view to the prosecution of bribery or similar irregularity we referred to last week. The Committee suggest that an inflexible rule should be maintained of striking off the list any firm guilty of offering even the slightest gratuity or commission to any Government officer or employé in connection with the making or execution of any Government contracts. As a matter of fact this practice already prevails, but there could be no harm in giving contractors plain warning of what to expect if they attempt anything of the kind again.

We do not consider the present an opportune moment for reviving the controversy as to whether the powers of the Royal Commission to inquire into the breakdown of the hospital and nursing arrangements in South Africa are sufficient or not. The Hospital Commission has now assembled, and we are inclined to think that the Member for Westminster was ill-advised in raising the subject again on the second reading of the Appropriation Bill. We are not so much concerned at the present moment, however, with the speech of the Member for Westminster as with the attitude of Mr. Balfour. We have always sought to consider the hospital question on its merits, and as far as might be to exclude the personality of Mr. Burdett-Coutts altogether. The First Lord of the Treasury was wrong, however, in sweeping aside as altogether unworthy of consideration the suggestion that there are many who have complaints to make against the hospital arrangements, but who will yet not voluntarily come forward and say what they know. The British soldier has all the qualities of moral courage, probity, and public spirit attributed to him by Mr. Balfour, and the possession of which will, he thinks, make him unburden his soul to the Commissioners. Mr. Balfour has not come much in contact with military men or he would know that their strongest characteristics is their esprit de corps. It runs through the whole Army, from the general to the drummer-boy. They may abuse the War Office, the Royal Army Medical Corps, and everything else over the camp fire. They will not give evidence against them because they feel that it would be cowardly and unjust. May it ever remain so. The rank and file of the Army do not, in fact, thank Mr. Burdett-Coutts for his interference, as was found by the Commissioners on their visit to Netley Hospital. The Royal Commission would have been well advised if it had not wasted time in trying to learn whether the complaints against the hospital arrangements were well founded or not. It is not even disguised by the Director-General of Ordnance that things were not as they ought to have been; that there was a lack of proper equipment.

"When the work of the Army is ended the work of the War Office will begin," said Mr. Wyndham, in the course of a speech he delivered in the House on Monday. When that time comes we hope regard will be had to the necessity of letting officers have training with full commands, and not the paper commands too many of them have had in the past. It is a matter of general comment that, with a few exceptions, the officers who have been most successful in South Africa are those who have been drafted on to the Cape from India or from Egypt, where, of course, they have real commands. We are glad to learn that Colonel Sir Howard Vincent has given notice of a motion dealing with this subject, which he intends to move in the House next session. Sir Howard's proposal is that the first Army Corps for foreign service should always be kept at Aldershot, and complete in the proportion of arms as in guns, horses, ambulances, waggons, &c., ready for immediate embarkation, and that the General Officer Commanding at Aldershot, with the staff of the district, should proceed with it on the Army Corps being ordered abroad on active service, and likewise brigadiers with their brigades if a part of the Army Corps only is required. He further suggests that upon mobilisation the second Army Corps should take the place at Aldershot of the first.

It is due to the Lord Mayor and the Corporation of the City of London to explain that the appointment of the Duke of York to the Colonelcy-in-Chief of the Royal Fusiliers was in no way due to any influence brought to bear by them. The suggestion that his Royal Highness's connection with the Royal Fusiliers would be appreciated came from the commanding officers of the Line battalions of the regiment. When, however, it was considered by the military authorities, it was recognised that certain difficulties presented themselves owing to the fact that the Duke of York held no rank in the Army, but these obstacles were removed in consideration of the very praiseworthy action of the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London in connection with the raising of the City of London Imperial Volunteers. It was felt that the occasion was one which demanded a generous appreciation of the claims of the Royal Fusiliers, and, at the same time, a proper recognition of the great service rendered by the civic authorities, and so the appointment was made; but the Lord Mayor took no action in the matter, and the honour conferred upon the Royal Fusiliers will be all the more valued on that account. At the same time the connection between the City of London and the Royal Fusiliers cannot fail to be cemented by the fact of his Royal Highness's appointment, and we are glad to learn that at an early date the City of London is likely to take steps in a practical way to mark its sense of the honour conferred upon it.

At the last meeting of the Committee of the Church of England Soldiers' Institute it was resolved to take active steps to establish institutes for the Army in South Africa. As the war draws to a close the troops will be congregated in large garrisons, when institutes will become so important a need for the well-being of the soldiers as to make it imperative that efforts should be made to provide them.

Army Personal.

The Princess of Wales, accompanied by Princess Victoria of Wales, and attended by Sir Francis Knollys and Miss Knollys, paid a visit last Saturday to the Gables private military hospital at Surbiton, which is maintained by Mr. Alfred Cooper as an adjunct to the hospital ship Princess of Wales. The visit was strictly private. Their Royal Highnesses were shown round the wards by Mr. and Mrs. Cooper. The medical and surgical staff, the matron, the nurses, and Archdeacon Burney, who, though eighty-six years of age, always conducts the Sunday service at the hospital, had the honour of being presented. The Princess had brought with her presents for the patients. On each present was engraved the name of the recipient, and the battle in which he was wounded. Her Royal Highness personally presented every gift. About an hour was spent in visiting and talking to the men.

In spite of rumours to the contrary, the Exchange Telegraph Company's Cape Town correspondent, telegraphing last night, says he is authorised to say that Lord Roberts was never better in his life than he is at present.

General Sir Francis Grenfell is en route from Malta on leave. He left in the cruiser Astræa on Thursday for conveyance to Naples. Major-General Lord Congleton officiates as Governor and Commander-in-Chief in his absence.

The nature of the proposed memorial to General Sir William Lockhart will depend upon the amount of the subscriptions received, but three proposals have been made for consideration. 1. A bronze statue to be erected either at Rawul Pindi or Kohat—Rawul Pindi as the headquarters of the Punjab command; Kohat as the starting point of the five expeditions of which General Lockhart was in chief command. 2. An obelisk to be erected at Rawul Pindi or elsewhere, with drinking fountain and garden. 3. Medals for shooting, &c. Sir William Lockhart was everywhere so popular, whilst his services were so distinguished, that a large sum is certain to be realised.

General Sir Power Palmer, since he took up the duties of officiating Commander-in-Chief in India, has been going into the question of recruiting in the Madras Army, and has succeeded in securing the appointment of a committee, consisting of officers of the Madras command, which will shortly assemble for the purpose of inquiring into the system of recruitment in Madras, and how many battalions can be kept up from indigenous tribes.

In consequence of the Duke of Coburg's death, Clarence House, which is officially regarded as a part of St. James's Palace, reverts to the Queen. Her Majesty intends, it is said, to grant it to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, whose town residence has hitherto been a suite of apartments in Buckingham Palace.

Lieut.-General Sir Charles Warren, R.E., left Cape Town on Wednesday for England. Lord Roberts, telegraphing on the same day from Pretoria, said:—"As the western districts of Cape Colony have now been satisfactorily settled by Sir Charles Warren, I am allowing him to return home by the next mail, and placing the whole of the troops in the colony under Sir F. Forestier-Walker's command."

The colonelcy of the 9th Lancers has become vacant by the death of Lieut.-General Sir William Drysdale. There are two general officers who have served in the regiment. Major-General H. A. Busham, C.B., received his first commission in it on November 9, 1858; was transferred to the 7th Hussars July 1, 1859; and was promoted back to it as Captain March 9, 1872, and left as Lieut.-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel December, 1888, after four years in command. Major-General H. R. Abadie, C.B., was brought in as Captain from half-pay, August 16, 1873, and commanded from December, 1884, to July, 1887. Both officers served with the regiment in the Afghan campaign. A former commanding officer, Colonel H. Marshall, still survives. He rode at the head of the regiment from June, 1874, to June, 1879, but not being a general officer he is not eligible for appointment to the colonelcy.

Lieut.-General Lord William Seymour has resigned his command of the troops in British North America.

Major-General S. C. Turner, R.E., is sitting as chairman of a committee at Simla, which has been assembled to discuss and formulate certain proposals on matters connected with the conditions of service of officers of the corps of Royal Engineers in India. The other members of the committee are Majors H. E. S. Abbott, D.S.O., F. G. Bond, J. A. Tanner, D.S.O., and W. J. Bythell, R.E. The committee will consider a proposal from the Secretary of State to abandon the system of continuous service for Royal Engineers in India, but at the same time to preserve sufficient inducements to officers of the corps to prolong their Indian service. The committee will also consider the question of leave rules.

Brigadier-General A. J. F. Reid, C.B., I.S.C., proceeds to China from India in command of the 3rd Brigade.

Brigadier-General J. T. Cummins, D.S.O., I.S.C., proceeds to China in command of the 4th Brigade. He will take with him as his staff Captains A. Nicholls, 2nd Punjab Infantry, and H. W. Cruddas, 38th Dogras.

Brigadier-General H. L. Dundas has been informed that he has been given an extension of his command of the infantry brigade at Gibraltar until October 1.

Slatin Pasha has arrived at Dunbar on a visit to Major-General Sir Reginald Wingate, and a dinner in his honour was given on Monday evening by the Sirdar and Lady Wingate.

Colonel Lord Algernon-Lennox, who was with Mr. Stowe, the American Consul-General, in the train which was derailed by the Boers on the 2nd inst., to the south of Kroonstad, and who was taken prisoner but subsequently released, was the bearer of despatches from Sir Alfred Milner to Lord Roberts. These he has now safely delivered. No official papers or letters were lost.

Colonels R. S. R. Fetherstonhaugh, G. F. Guyon, and R. N. Murray, C.B., having joined at Aldershot, on appointment to the command of brigades, with the rank of Major-General, a redistribution of the troops took effect from Wednesday, and the seven brigades are now constituted thus:—

1ST BRIGADE (Major-Gen. E. S. Brook, C.B.).—2nd Batn. Highland Light Infantry, 4th Batn. Royal Northern Counties Reserve Regiment, 6th Batn. Worcestershire Regiment, 3rd Batn. Royal Irish Regiment and 3rd Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers.

2ND BRIGADE (Major-Gen. R. H. Murray, C.B.).—1st Batn. King's Own Regiment, 3rd and 4th Batns. Worcestershire Regiment, 2nd Batn. Royal Lancashire Reserve Regiment, 3rd and 4th Batns. Manchester Regiment, and 6th Batn. Manchester Regiment.

3RD BRIGADE (Major-Gen. L. J. Oliphant).—1st and 2nd Batns. Royal Home Counties Reserve Regiment and 1st and 3rd Batns. Royal Northern Reserve Regiment.

4TH BRIGADE (Major-Gen. G. F. Guyon).—5th Batn. Worcestershire Regiment, 3rd Batn. Derbyshire Regiment, and 3rd Batn. Gordon Highlanders.

5TH BRIGADE (Major-Gen. T. E. Verner, C.B.).—7th Batn. King's Royal Rifles, 5th Batn. Manchester Regiment, 5th Batn. Leinster Regiment, details of Royal West Surrey Regiment.

6TH BRIGADE (Major-Gen. R. S. R. Fetherstonhaugh).—3rd Batn. Cheshire Regiment, 4th Batn. South Wales Borderers, 3rd Batn. Hampshire Regiment, and 4th Batn. Durham Light Infantry.

IRISH BRIGADE (Major-Gen. J. W. Webber).—4th Batn. Royal Irish Regiment, 4th Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, and 6th Batn. Royal Irish Rifles.

Colonel Lord Dunraven, K.P., 5th Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers, who raised the Sharpshooter Corps of the Imperial Yeomanry, which has been doing such excellent work in South Africa, has returned to England invalided. He served with the corps in the field, and his departure is much regretted by all ranks.

Colonel C. W. J. Hingston, I.S.C., is permitted to reside out of India on vacating command of the 10th Bengal Infantry.

Two more officers still survive who received the Victoria Cross for gallantry in the Crimea, though the absence of their names from the official "Army List" led to the supposition that they had joined the ranks of the majority. We refer to Colonels H. M. Jones, late captain 7th Fusiliers, and W. Hope, late lieutenant 7th Fusiliers. This brings the number of officers still surviving up to ten, three of whom belonged to the Royal Fusiliers.

Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. M. G. Talbot, R.E., has been permitted to accept and wear the 3rd Class of the Osmanieh conferred upon him by the Khedive.

Lieut.-Colonel G. Durrant has been transferred from the office of the Director-General, A.V.D. to the Woolwich District as Principal Veterinary Officer.

Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel W. Cook, I.S.C., has been appointed to the command of the 43rd Gurkha Rifles, vice Lieut.-Colonel Barrett, deceased.

Major L. Graham, R.A., has been appointed A.D.C. to Lieut.-General Sir Robert Low, commanding Bombay.

Major E. J. J. Teale, 2nd Batn. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, has been appointed Chief Constable of Eastbourne.

Major W. Adye, Royal Irish Rifles, resumes his former appointment as D.A.A.G. on the Staff at Headquarters, his health being now completely restored.

Major M. E. O'Donoghue, I.S.C., has been appointed to the command of the 15th Madras Infantry, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, vice Lieut.-Colonel Juxton-Jones, vacated.

Majors H. I. W. Hamilton, D.S.O. the Queen's, has been permitted to accept and wear the 4th Class of the Osmanieh, and Major F. Smith, A.V.D., the 4th Class of the Medjidieh, granted them by the Khedive.

Major (Captain) H. R. Beddoes, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, has fully justified the confidence of Colonel Willcocks, who has sent to the Colonial Office some further particulars respecting the officer's action with the rebel forces east of Dompoassi on the 30th ult. Writing on the 1st, Colonel Willcocks said:—

"Beddoes just returned, having by very good marching through dense forests found rebel camp ten miles to the east of Fomena on July 30. Flying column was three times attacked by approximately 3,500 Adansis and Kokofus, but after stubborn resistance Beddoes has captured large rebel camp, which he completely destroyed, killing many of the rebel forces, and has taken prisoners. Conduct and discipline of all ranks excellent. Regret to report that heavy losses considering our small number. Major Beddoes and Lieut. Phillips, R.A., and also Lieut. Swabey, West India Regiment, severely wounded; and Capt. Monck-Mason, 1st Batn. Royal Munster Fusiliers, and Colour-Sergt. Blair, 1st Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers, both West African Frontier Force, slightly wounded; and also one native soldier killed in action, and six dangerously wounded, six severely wounded, and 17 slightly wounded. Following deserving of special mention:—Major Beddoes, who is a really excellent officer; Capt. Green, 3rd Batn. Royal Warwickshire Regiment, attached for duty to West African Frontier Force, who took over command after Beddoes was wounded; Capt. Neal, Lagos Constabulary; and also Lieut. Phillips, R.A., West African Frontier Force."

Brevet-Majors M. Peake, R.A., and J. K. Watson, D.S.O., King's Royal Rifles, have been permitted to accept and wear the 4th Class of the Osmanieh, and Brevet-Major Sir H. B. Hill, Bart., Royal Irish Fusiliers, the 4th Class of the Medjidieh, conferred by the Khedive.

Captains N. M. Smyth, V.C., 2nd Dragoon Guards, W. A. Boulnois and G. McK. Franks, R.A., and E. S. Herbert, Black Watch, have been permitted to accept and wear the 4th Class of the Osmanieh, and Captains C. B. Bulkeley-Johnson, 2nd Dragoons (Royal Scots Greys), H. A. D. Simpson-Baikie, R.A., C. H. D. Doughty, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, C. Norbury, Worcestershire Regiment, P. R. Phipps, Dorsetshire Regiment, and F. G. Newall, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, the 4th Class of the Medjidieh, conferred upon them by the Khedive.

The death from wounds in South Africa of Captain M. S. Wellby, 18th Hussars, is much to be regretted. The fourth son of Mr. John Henry Wellby, of 1, Sussex Place, Regent's Park, Captain Wellby was only thirty-three years of age. He had travelled largely, and in the course of his journeyings had crossed Tibet and China. In August, 1898, his regiment being then quartered at Lucknow, he obtained a year's leave of absence, and joined Captain Harrington, the British Agent in Abyssinia, at Zeila, about to commence his return to his post at Adis Abbaba. Starting on August 31, they proceeded by way of Harrar, where, however, they were detained for more than a week, only reaching the Abyssinian capital towards the close of October, the journey from Harrar to Adis Abbaba, a distance of 270 miles, having taken nearly three weeks. He then started, without any white companion, on his return journey, through Abyssinia and the country of Walamo, round the great Lake Rudolf, finally getting into touch with the Anglo-Egyptian forces on the Nile at the fort of Nasser, seven months after he had last seen an English face. He had written a highly interesting account of his journey.

Captain S. D. Bullen and other officers of the Royal Garrison Artillery have been ordered to China on special service. Before leaving England they are to go through a course of training in machine-gun construction at the works of Messrs. Vickers, Maxim and Co.

Captain MacGreer, 3rd Batn. Royal Warwickshire Regiment, has been distinguishing himself in Ashanti. When Major Beddoes, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, was severely wounded, the command of the flying column devolved upon him. Captain Greer is now attached to the West African Frontier Force.

Captain J. L. Harrington, I.S.C., her Majesty's Diplomatic Agent at Adis Abeba, has arrived in London from Abyssinia on leave of absence. Captain Harrington states that the political situation in Abyssinia is perfectly quiet, and that the negotiations between her Majesty's Government and the Negus regarding the frontiers are progressing satisfactorily and in the most friendly manner. They must, however, occupy a considerable time, as part of the frontier crosses unknown country, so that much surveying work is necessitated.

Mrs. McNulty, of Bray, Ireland, advertised in the Times of Tuesday week for information, from any comrade, nurse, doctor, or friend, who witnessed his illness and death, respecting a son in the Bedfordshire Regiment, who died on board s.s. Bavarian on June 24, and requested Service papers to copy the advertisement.

Army Foreign.

On the recommendation of the Minister for War the President has signed a decree for the reorganisation of the French Superior Council of War. It will be remembered that when General De Galliffet took office he decided that the Council should be composed exclusively of Generals in active command. General André holds different views. He is of opinion that such an arrangement would result in much inconvenience in war time. He has, therefore, by means of the decree just signed, rendered it impossible for officers in active command to be members of the Council. Availing himself of his opportunity, he has re-appointed General De Negrier to the Council. At the same time Generals Hagron, Dessirier and Fauchot have been appointed to the command of army corps in place of Generals Kessler, Duchesne and Lucas, who are retained as members of the Council, but abandon their functions as army corps commanders. The Council is now constituted thus: President, the Minister for War; Vice-President, General Brugère, Generalissimo of the Army; Generals Saussier, Zurlinden, Pierron, Zede, Duchesne, Kessler, Lucas, and De Negrier. General Brugère, who was Military Governor of Paris, has been relieved of his duties as such.

General de Negrier, on resuming his duties as a member of the Supreme Council of War on Monday, paid visits to President Loubet and the principal ministers. According to the Paris correspondent of the Standard, the general states that in the address he delivered a year ago, and which has been the cause of his temporary retirement, he had no intention of interfering in politics or of attacking the Government of the Republic. As a point of honour he thought it necessary not to make any statement at the time, so as not to be suspected of having selfish objects in view, but to-day, being reinstated without any efforts on his part, he judged it expedient to make such declaration to the Government.

General Florentin has succeeded General De Negrier as Military Governor of Paris. He is an officer of artillery, and held the rank of Captain when the war broke out in 1870. At the battle of Servigny, on August 31, he was seriously wounded in the arm. He, however, was fortunate enough to preserve the limb, which he is able to use by means of an ingenious apparatus. Since the war of thirty years ago he has had no chance of earning distinction in the field, as he has served in none of the Colonial wars. He was first posted to the garrison of Paris in 1898. He is spoken of as a man of great independence, who has studied his profession very closely, and is regarded as a high authority on all questions of artillery; but to the outside public he will be best known as the president of the court-martial which decided that Commandant Esterhazy should be removed from the active list.

Much curiosity is felt as to the construction of the new field piece which was first displayed at the Longchamps Review. So closely, however, is the secret guarded, that of the highest French officers only two or three are entrusted with it. The Paris correspondent of the Morning Leader writing on Saturday last says:—

"I obtained some information from the secretary of the Vickers-Maxim section at the Exhibition. The secretary, who has discussed the gun with many authorities, believes that the advantages claimed for it (1) a breech system something like the Nordenfelt eccentric one, (2) a very long recoil, (3) to counteract the recoil of a new hydro-pneumatic buffer, (4) a great speed in firing. With regard to the eccentric breech, my informant said that as far as he could see there was no advantage in it over the other forms, the ordinary hinge back and the block sliding right out. The speed of firing is doubted. It is said to be 20 per minute. The buffer is the most interesting part, but here the secret is so well kept that even the artilleryman who works it is ignorant of its construction, and if it gets out of order the whole machine is sent back to the Government arsenal. It is worth noticing that none of the great French gunmakers think much of the new weapon. The Schneider firm is particularly contemptuous on the subject."

The German contingent for China consists of two brigades of infantry, each consisting of two regiments of two battalions, one regiment of cavalry, one regiment of field artillery, one battalion of sappers (technical troops), and details. Lieut.-General von Lessel goes in command, with Colonel Guendl as Chief of the Staff. Major-General von Hopfner and Major-General von Kettler command the infantry brigades.

The question of arming the French cavalry with lances is still under discussion. The armament of continental cavalry is now this:—In Italy twenty-four cavalry regiments carry sabre and carbine, the latter with a bayonet a foot long; the ten lancer regiments carry a lance in addition. In Germany the ninety-three cavalry regiments are all armed with sabre, carbine, and lance. In Austria the forty-two cavalry regiments carry sabre and carbine; the eleven regiments of Uhlans who used to carry a lance have ceased to do so. In Russia the 119 cavalry regiments carry sabre and carbine; the fifty-eight dragoon regiments have no lance, but their carbine has a bayonet about 5 in. long; in thirty-eight regiments of Cossacks the men in the front rank carry the lance; the fifteen regiments in the Caucasus have no lance; all the Cossacks carry a pistol and poignard; in the six regiments of the Guards the men in the front rank carry the lance.

Field-Marshal Count Blumenthal, who served with so much credit on the staff of the late Emperor Frederick in the war of 1870-71, has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday.

General Gallieni has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the French Army in Madagascar.

General Voyron, commanding the French Expeditionary Corps to China, has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the force. It is explained that the appointment of General Voyron as Commander-in-Chief is merely a technical measure so as to entitle the general to remain on the active list after the close of the operations in China.

General Dodds has been appointed French Commander-in-Chief in China, in place of the late General Borgnis-Desbordes.

General Dubois has been appointed Secretary-General of the French Presidency and Chief of President Loubet's military household. For the past three years he has occupied the position of commander at the Senate.

General W. Lutlow, of the United States Army, who distinguished himself during the war with Spain, has arrived at Berlin in order to study the system of the German General Staff, which it is proposed to adopt in the Army of the States on its early reorganisation.

Colonel Sumner, the United States Military Attaché in London, has been transferred from his duties to active service in China, and has left England this week by the steamer Hamburg accompanied by Mrs. Sumner, who will remain in Japan.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Aug. 4.

A despatch from Lord Roberts, issued from War Office during the morning, brought information that Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton continued his movement towards Rustenburg yesterday. The enemy were turned off the Magaliesberg range, losing several prisoners, horses, cattle, and two waggons. The 2nd Batn. Royal Berkshire Regiment and 1st Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders were principally engaged.

In a later telegram sent from Pretoria at 12 50 p.m., Lord Roberts reported that Commandant Olivier, who managed to get away from the Bethlehem Hills with some 1,500 men, had informed Gen. Bruce Hamilton that he did not consider himself bound by Gen. Prinsloo's offer to surrender the whole force, and intended to continue the war. He had taken up position between Harrismith and Newmarket road, and was being followed up by Rundle.

The 17 prisoners, Lord Roberts wrote, who were taken by Gen. Ian Hamilton's force on the 2nd inst., "state that only soft-nosed bullets are served out to them. The wounds of our men are in consequence of a very serious nature. I am representing this to Commandant Gen. Botha."

Major-Gen. Knox, who was sent from Kroonstad on the 1st inst. to drive the enemy from the vicinity of the railway north of that place, attacked them on Rhenoster Kop on the 2nd inst. They fled on his approach, and left five waggons and a lot of cattle in his hands.

A train was derailed on the night of the 2nd and attacked 20 miles south of Kroonstad. Four men were killed and three wounded. Col. Lord Algernon Gordon-Lennox was taken prisoner. Some 40 men were also taken prisoners, but were liberated, as was also Lord Algernon Gordon-Lennox, on the representation of the American Consul-General, who was travelling in the train. The men who wrecked the train were followed by mounted infantry. At Holfontein three of them were killed and several wounded. Our casualty, one man wounded.

Lord Kitchener stated to have gone South with the view of assisting in the operations for the capture of Gen. De Wet, who had been reported killed, but was found to be alive and vigorous.

Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, having been informed that Acting Field Cornet Delange, of the Free State forces, had compelled a number of burghers who surrendered at Platrand to rejoin their commando, sent a flag of truce to Delange, who was encamped at a drift on the Klip River, 15 miles distant on the Vrede road, asking him to release the burghers referred to, failing which, the general mentioned, he would take reprisals. Commandant Odendall replied, refusing to release the men, stating that he had acted on the instructions of Commandant-Gen. Botha in arresting all cowardly curs who laid down their arms, and adding that he was prepared to take the consequences. A force under Major Gough, consisting of four companies of mounted infantry with two Pom Poms and four field pieces, left Standerton on Friday night and surprised the Boer laager at the drift early this morning. The troops opened a heavy shell fire and scattered the Boers, who numbered about 300, in all directions. Delange's house was burned and 150 of his cattle were brought in. One prisoner was taken. The expedition is said to have been cleverly managed, "the dispositions reflecting the greatest credit on Major Gough."

Sunday, Aug. 5.

Major-Gen. Dowding, R.A., passed yesterday through Van Reenan's Pass, and to-day occupied Harrismith.

Lord Kitchener, who was with a force south of the Vaal, was joined to-day by a strong detachment of Brabant's Horse and also by Canadian Regiment.

Monday, Aug. 6.

Lord Roberts telegraphed from Pretoria during the day to inform the Secretary of State for War that Harrismith surrendered to Major-Gen. Hector MacDonald on Saturday. Yesterday a squadron 5th Lancers arrived there from Besters, and one of the 13th Hussars from Ladysmith. Railway communication has been opened between Harrismith and Natal, the line having been found but little damaged. Several burghers gave up their arms to Gen. MacDonald, and the country in the neighbourhood is said to be quiet.

Lord Roberts in his telegram said:—

"Lance-Corpl. Ernest Hely, 34th Company Middlesex Yeomanry, and Trpr. Charles Kimber, escaped from Nooitgedacht, where our prisoners are confined, and joined Gordon's Cavalry Brigade south-east of Middelburg on 4th inst. They say the health of the prisoners is good."

Lord Roberts opened a Soldiers' Home at Pretoria—a large and commodious building containing reading, writing, and recreation rooms.

Tuesday, Aug. 7.

Sir Redvers Buller left Paardekop to-day, taking a north-easterly direction. He drove the enemy from strong positions on kopjes and reached Amerspoort same night, having travelled 18 miles, while his front extended eight miles, the enemy numbering 2,000, under Christian Botha. The enemy opened fire at long range on our infantry, who marched forward under cover of a heavy shell fire from the siege and naval guns and a field battery, the hills being swept on all sides. Almost immediately after the opening of the guns the Boers commenced trekking, and when the infantry climbed the heights they found them deserted. Elaborate preparations had, however, been made to defend the positions. Four commandoes from Wakkerstroom, Standerton, Ermelo, and Swaziland constituted the Boer force under C. De Wet, with several guns.

Lord Roberts telegraphed from Pretoria that he feared the Eland's River garrison, under Lieut.-Col. Hoare, had been captured after ten days' resistance. Delarey, hearing of Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton's approach towards Rustenburg, and seeing that he had no chance of capturing Baden-Powell, hurried off to Elands River. Gen. Hamilton had reported that firing in that direction ceased yesterday, that the garrison had evidently been captured. Gen. Hamilton left Rustenburg to-day, taking Baden-Powell's force with him.

Gen. De Wet yesterday began to cross the Vaal River. Lord Kitchener to-day moved on in pursuit. Lord Methuen, on the right bank of the river, came in contact with De Wet's advance guards.

Wednesday, Aug. 8.

Lord Roberts telegraphed during the night thus:—

"Kitchener received information early yesterday morning, from a British prisoner who escaped from the Boer camp, that De Wet's waggons had crossed the Vaal. Immediately afterwards the sound of guns was heard, which I think must have been Methuen's, as I had directed him to take up a position between Potchefstroom and Lindique, where he should have been able to intercept the enemy, who crossed the river at De Wet's Drift. Kitchener is crossing the Vaal with the cavalry and mounted infantry. Hunter reports that 4,140 Boers were made prisoners in the Bethlehem and Harrismith districts. The great majority are now on their way to Cape Town, for despatch to Ceylon. Of the three guns which were captured, two belong to U Battery, R.H.A. Over 4,000 horses and ponies were captured. Ten wagon loads of ammunition were destroyed at Naauwpoort, 180,000 rounds in the Caledon Valley, and 15,000 rounds at Fouriesburg. The garrison at Eland's River has, I fear, been captured. It consisted of about 140 Bushmen, 80 Rhodesians, and the same number of Rhodesian Volunteers. I hoped that Carrington would have been in time to withdraw the Eland's River garrison, but it seems that Commandant Delarey, on hearing of Ian Hamilton's approach to Rustenburg, must have hurried off westwards, and surrounded the little garrison before Carrington could arrive. In a telegram just received Methuen reports that he has engaged a part of De Wet's force yesterday morning, near Venterskroon. He drove the enemy off a succession of hills, which they held with great obstinacy. He says that the Scots Fusiliers and Welsh Fusiliers behaved splendidly. Our casualties were:—Killed: Seven men. Wounded.—Imperial Yeomanry: Lieut. Gurney, severely; Welsh Fusiliers: Capt. Gough, slightly; 2nd Lieut. Bayley, severely; Capt. Barttelot, slightly."

Thursday, Aug. 9.

Telegraphing from Pretoria during the evening, Reuter's correspondent said:—

"A plot to murder all the British officers here and capture Lord Roberts has just been discovered. The authorities only became aware of what was going on at the last moment. The conspirators number fifteen, and ten of these have been arrested, the remainder being under observation. It was intended to carry the scheme into execution during the confusion caused by incendiary fires in the town. Everything was prepared for the execution of the plot, and it was only at the last moment that the authorities learned what was going on. Everyone concerned had taken the oath of neutrality, which expressly states that any contravention is liable to punishment under martial law. The conspirators had been allowed entire liberty, and had abused their freedom to hatch a plot regarded here as nothing less than diabolical."

WHOLESALE FROM—

MESSRS. TEOFANI & CO., 18, BURY ST., ST. MARY AXE, LONDON, E.

Friday, Aug. 10.

A return has been issued showing the name, tonnage, and speed of each vessel employed to convey troops, horses, or mules to South Africa between July 1, 1899, and March 31, 1900. From this it appears that within the period mentioned 6,663 officers, 170,185 men, and 30,161 horses were carried from this country or from the Mediterranean, the vessels employed making 216 passages, during which 1,543 horses were lost on the way and two ships were wrecked. For the conveyance of mules to South Africa 33 passages were made, 31,503 mules being conveyed, out of which only 671 were lost. The passages from India were 49 in number, 417 officers, 10,392 troops, 2,882 followers, 7,344 horses, and 1,156 mules being carried, out of which 98 horses and three mules only were lost. The vessels engaged for the conveyance of colonial contingents to South Africa made 29 passages, and carried 486 officers, 8,630 men, 7,732 horses, and 19 mules. In the conveyance of horses and cobs from Australia and Argentina to South Africa 24 passages were made, the number of animals totalling 13,896, of which 148 were lost.

As we go to press a telegram reaches us that De Wet has succeeded in getting away from Lord Kitchener, but details are not to hand. There is no official information, however, from Lord Roberts, and we are assured that the War Office is in ignorance of the particulars regarding the plot to murder British officers.

Total casualties since the beginning of the war up to the end of last week:—

	Officers.	N.C.O. & Men
Killed	272	2,534
Died of wounds	74	696
Missing and prisoners (excluding those who have been recovered or have died in captivity)	59	2,740
Prisoners died in captivity	1	85
Died of disease	145	4,937
Accidental deaths	1	77
Sent home as invalids	1,105	25,049*
	1,657	36,118

Total Losses (exclusive of sick and wounded men now in British Hospitals in South Africa) ...

* Of these 145 have died, 589 have been discharged from the service as unfit, and 1,064 are in hospital.

MESSRS. MABIE, TODD, AND BARD have introduced an improvement in the larger sizes of their well-known "Swan" Fountain Pen, which assists it still further to maintain its superiority over all others. By an ingenious arrangement the pen may now be filled without the removal of any part, and the flow of ink regulated without danger of the fingers being soiled. THE BRITISH GARRISON AT PEKING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Though it would be rash to assume that all cause for anxiety as to the ultimate fate of the Legations in Peking has been removed by the receipt of the important telegrams, bearing date July 21, from the British and other Foreign Ministers, which appear in this day's papers, there is at least legitimate ground for hope that as their safety at such a comparatively recent date purports to be largely due to the protection afforded by the Chinese troops, they may yet be enabled to extricate themselves from the midst of those desperate toils by which, up to yesterday, it seemed all but inevitable that they had long since been overwhelmed.

Whether, however, such a happy issue is to crown our long period of suspense, or not, the present appears a fitting moment to direct attention to the services of those brave men, but for whose presence and support, the fate of the diplomatic representatives, and of all connected with them, must long ere this have been a tragic one. I allude, of course, to the handful of British and Foreign guards, who, since the early part of June, have been defending the Legations at what tremendous odds it is difficult for us to realise.

These guards have been composed entirely of Marines, that of the British consisting of three officers and 76 non-commissioned officers and men, together with three naval ratings for special duties, while those of the Foreign Legations, though smaller and of varying strength, have gone to make up a mixed military force, which, inclusive of all nationalities, cannot have much exceeded—even if it equalled—a total of some 400 officers and men.

It is this little force—be it remembered—which for upwards of a month has bid defiance to, and succeeded in keeping at arm's length, not alone countless hordes of badly-armed and ill-disciplined Boxers, but, until lately at all events, formidable bodies, in addition, of well-drilled Chinese troops, equipped with modern rifles and artillery, officered by capable leaders, and all alike animated by a ferocious religious hatred, which inspired their ranks with a reckless courage that otherwise might very probably have been alien to them.

That against foes such as these, the Marine garrison, provided at best with a few machine-guns, suffering from want of supplies and ammunition, and occupying an inferior military position, should for so long have kept their enemies at bay, bears eloquent testimony to the gallantry and heroism of the men, and the skill and intrepidity of their leaders. If further proof were needed of such gallantry, or further evidence required of the undaunted spirit with which all ranks must have borne themselves during these trying days, and in the face of conditions for which the only parallel is to be found in the annals of the Indian Mutiny, surely it is forthcoming in the necessarily brief but pregnant references in the Ministers' latest despatches, to the losses sustained by their various detachments. Of our own small British force one officer has been killed, and the two remaining wounded, while though there are no data given as to the rank and file, it is but reasonable to infer that where their officers have lost so heavily, a large proportion of the hundred and odd casualties mentioned by Sir Claude MacDonald, have fallen to the share of the Royal Marines. And yet to judge by the few brief and casual allusions to them which have appeared in the columns of the daily Press these few weeks past, the services of the little garrison—much less the fact that that this garrison has been almost entirely Marines—seems likely to be overlooked.

With the remembrance of the scant acknowledgment accorded to the Royal Marines who fought at Graspan fresh in my mind—where out of some six officers and 300 men, one-third of their number were left on the ground—and with a view, if possible, to prevent a like injustice being done their comrades in Peking, I venture to draw attention to these latter, feeling assured that when the story of this memorable siege comes to be written, the conduct of the Marine garrison—and more particularly that of our own British contingent—will be found to add yet another page to that glorious chapter of deeds of valour which adorn the roll of English history, but which, I regret to say, when performed by the Royal Marines, seldom or never meets with the recognition which is its due.

W. H. POE,
Lieut.-Colonel, late Royal Marines.
Heywood, Queen's Co., July 31.

THE troops in the Aldershot district will be engaged in extensive field operations in the vicinity of the Fox Hills on Tuesday next.

THE Defence Committee of the Cabinet met at the Foreign Office on Thursday under the presidency of Lord Salisbury. Among the Ministers present were the Duke of Devonshire, Mr. Balfour, and Lord Lansdowne.

SANCTION has been given for the raising of three new regiments of native infantry in India to take the place of those proceeded to Mauritius and Singapore. They are to be brought into existence at once.

LETTERS OF SIR HARRY SMITH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have in hand, for publication (thanks to Gen. Sir Edward Holdich, who has preserved it for many years), an autobiography of my great-uncle, Sir Harry Smith. The autobiography covers the period of Sir Harry Smith's services in the Peninsula, in North and South America, in France, at Glasgow, in Nova Scotia, in Jamaica, at the Cape, and in India till the end of the first Sikh War (1847). It tells nothing, however, of his return home in 1847, of his subsequent Governorship of the Cape (1847-1852), nor of the closing years of his life at Manchester and in London (1852-1860). Neither am I in possession of many letters dealing with these years.

May I therefore be allowed to say in your columns that if any of your readers possess letters of Sir Harry Smith written at any period of his life, I should be greatly obliged by permission to see them and make use of them, either to fill up the gaps in the autobiography, or to form part of a supplementary volume? If they were entrusted to my care, I would be responsible for their safe keeping and their restoration to their owners at no distant date.

Many letters of Sir Harry Smith were addressed to his old friends, Gens. Sir John Bell, Sir James Kempt, Charles Beckwith, C.B., and possibly some are still possessed by the representatives of those distinguished soldiers. G. C. MOORE SMITH.

St. John's College, Cambridge, July 30.

ARMY EXAMINATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—It is a fatal blunder to demand the impossible, whether it is from troops in the field or from boys in the examination room; the punishment must be defeat, demoralisation, and discouragement. It is on this ground that I venture to protest against the German examination paper recently set to the candidates for Woolwich and Sandhurst. The practice of the last few years seemed to indicate that the German asked from the candidates was of a kind likely to be of some use to them in their profession, viz., military history and description. This limitation was fair and wise, because it brought the vocabulary within the bounds of possibility; it allowed the work to be thorough, and, being thorough, to be interesting and successful; that is to say, it enabled boys of 17 to read without difficulty such German books as "Im grossen Hauptquartier"; to translate into intelligible German, say Mr. Burleigh's letters from the war, descriptive of fighting, marching, camp life, of the country and the people, &c., and also to speak readily on these topics.

Suddenly, however, none of that is required, but an absolutely different thing, viz., the language of the 18th century comedy, garnished with such phrases as "the mortgage of your little bit of clay is out," "I am a sure job for the undertakers indeed," &c. This being not bad enough, apparently, there follows a selection of proverbs and idiomatic phrases such as "it is as broad as it is long," "he has the fidgets," &c. Surely the examiner must have been under the impression that he had to deal with interpreters; in fact, I know plenty of full-fledged interpreters who could not translate these things offhand. The command over the language of social intercourse with its thousands of idiomatic turns reflecting the experience, customs, and the humour of various classes of society can only be attained by living for years among the people who speak it, or, perhaps, by an immense amount of reading; even with these advantages only few specially gifted linguists ever manage to handle the foreign idiom properly. But the English schoolboy, with his few hours of German a week, and tons of other work on his poor back, it would be as reasonable to ask him to dance on the tight rope as to be up in such linguistic acrobatics.

Is it possible that we are again threatened with a cycle of those impossible German papers which, roaming as they did over the whole field of the language, made in former years that language at these examinations so unprofitable that, in spite of its manifest practical utility for the soldier, the percentage of candidates taking it up went down to one-third. Will the few students left be again obliged to waste their time in cramming up proverbs and "likely phrases" out of some poisonous "cram book," instead of confining their energy to honest and thorough work in a definite direction, which plan would, at least, produce permanent and useful knowledge?

The same want of definite method is also apparent in the questions set on German history and literature. They range from Charlemagne to the present day, and would, if honestly prepared, absorb the whole of the time available for German at English schools. The result has been a crop of miserable "cram book," weariness of mind and discouragement of these subjects. When I was a boy at a German gymnasium we worked on a different principle. Certain periods in history or literature were selected. At the end of our public school career we were, it is true, left ignorant of certain other periods apparently as important as the ones selected, but the work actually done was done thoroughly and, being thorough, was interesting and permanent; moreover it was likely, for the same reason, to leave the boys a lifelong interest for the subject, which is the great test of proper training, and is likely to make up for any want of quantity.

Now, which is the better system, the one that favours limited but real knowledge, or the one that asks for impossibilities and gets nothing but disgusting cram? F. G. Z.

ARMAMENT AND EQUIPMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—If the questions of dress, armament, drill and instruction, discipline and organisation of the British Army—which I contend are those upon which the lessons of the war should not be thrown away—are of sufficient interest to warrant the publication of this letter, I will say a few words on armament. With regard to artillery, it is idle to expect that it will be possible to increase the weight behind teams so much as to enable field guns to compete with guns of position. But our R.H.A. and R.F.A. should be, and very soon—or we shall be forestalled by Russia and other nations also—provided with a good quick-firing, mobile gun of about 3in. calibre, provided with light iron or steel shields as a protection to the servers. These shields will enormously increase the confidence of the men behind the guns. The wheel should be of one pattern for all field guns. A large proportion of howitzer batteries and of good useful heavy field-gun batteries, similar to those in use in the Russian army, should be provided. Heavy batteries should carry at least 100 field batteries at least 150, and horse batteries at least 140, rounds per gun; in these proportions common shell four-tenths, shrapnel six-tenths, with a few rounds of case. The amount carried in the D.A.C. Reserve Park, and Local Park, should run the total to 480 per gun in heavy and field, and 450 in horse batteries. Further details may be left to our Royal Artillery officers, than whom none in Europe are better qualified to thresh out this question. As to cavalry, the utterly useless carbine should be done away with, and whilst the grand principle that "shock action" is the great "end all" of cavalry must be fully recognised, still cavalry officers and men of our army should be forced to abandon their foolish opposition to making their men fair shots.

A good serviceable rifle which may be carried either slung on the man or in a bucket, should replace the carbine. Although it is a little beside the scope of these letters, I suggest that a smaller and stouter type of horse than the very indifferently bred 15.3 charger of the present would be a better mount than this latter, for Hussars, at all events, if not Lancers; whilst Dragoons, Dragoon Guards, and Household Cavalry should remain essentially heavy cavalry, on big horses with good blood in them. At the risk of repeating myself I will say that all our infantrymen should carry 150 rounds of ammunition in bandolier and easily-opening pouches or pockets on their persons. The rifle of the present is not a bad one, but is capable of improvement. Entrenching tools of a really useful type should be carried in the regimental S.A.A. cart, and four good solid spades and four pickaxes should be carried by each company, whilst the present toy-spades and tooth-picks should be ruthlessly condemned. Beastly, jangling, useless encumbrances they are, giving foolish and narrow-minded officers only too good a chance of making their men waste their time on spit and polish. The infantry officer's sword should not be done away with (we shall meet in the future enemies of a different type to the Boers), and he should be provided with a really good, simple revolver of the best and latest pattern, which will necessitate a change in the pattern every ten years or so. As the question to be touched in my next letter, i.e., "Drill and Instruction," is a long one, I will ensure that this one, if wanting in wit, shall at least possess the brevity which is its soul. C. E. D. B.

THE Queen has approved revised regulations respecting the issue, custody, and disposal of medals, decorations, &c., which are to be observed in future.

THE Queen has approved the details of the regimental establishments for the Regular Army, the embodied Militia, and the Yeomanry Cavalry for the year 1900-1901. The war establishments which have been assigned to units serving in South Africa will, in so far as they exceed the peace establishments for such units, cease to have effect on demobilisation.

THE Aldershot cross-country competition (to which this year details of battalions abroad, Militia, and Royal Reserve battalions are to be admitted, as well as Regular battalions) is to be held on Saturday, Sept. 8. Teams consist each of two officers and 104 of other ranks, starting by sections at 30 paces interval; the course being about a mile in extent, and presenting such obstacles as would usually be encountered in an enclosed country. The chief object aimed at in the contest is celerity and precision of movement combined with perfect control of the men.

Obituary.

ARMY.

Gen. Thomas Greenaway, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at Guildford on the 3rd inst., aged 81. He joined the Army Jan. 10, 1837; became Captain Jan. 10, 1852; Major Feb. 18, 1861; Lieut.-Colonel Jan. 10, 1863; Colonel Jan. 10, 1868; Major-General May 25, 1880; Lieut.-General April 1, 1882; and General Jan. 22, 1889.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir William Drysdale, K.C.B., Colonel of the 9th Lancers, died at 15, Elbury Street on Tuesday, aged 81. He was son of Major Drysdale, of Jervistown, Lanarkshire. Born in 1819, he passed from the Royal Military Academy, Edinburgh, into the 4th Light Dragoons as Cornet in 1835. He served in the Afghan War, 1839, including the capture of Ghuznee (medal); in the Sutlej campaign, 1846, including battle of Sohraon (medal); in the Punjab Campaign, 1849, battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat (medal with two clasps); and in the Indian Mutiny, including siege and fall of Delhi (horse killed), battle of Boolundshuhun (wounded and horse killed), Allypore, Agra, and relief of Lucknow (three times mentioned in despatches, medal with two clasps, brevets of Major and Lieut.-Colonel, and C.B.). His commission bore date thus: Lieut. Aug. 31, 1838; Captain Oct. 29, 1847; Brevet-Major Jan. 9, 1858; Major March 5, 1858; Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel July 20, 1858; Lieut.-Colonel May 24, 1861; Colonel June 20, 1863; Major-General Jan. 2, 1870; Lieut.-General July 1, 1881; Colonel 18th Hussars, March 16, 1885; and Colonel 9th Lancers, June 11, 1891. He was created a K.C.B. in 1893.

Major-Gen. Stephen William B. Sherman, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at Cranbrook, Kent, on the 3rd inst., aged 66. He joined the Army June 10, 1854; became Lieut.-Colonel June 10, 1880; Colonel June 10, 1884; and retired with the hon. rank of Major-General Aug. 1, 1887.

Lieut.-Col. John Day, Captain, retired list, Royal Artillery, died at Llandudno on the 8th inst. He joined the Army Dec. 18, 1861; became Captain April, 1875; Major, July 1, 1881; and Lieut.-Colonel, June 7, 1882.

Major Ernest Maxwell Willshire, 2nd Batn. Black Watch, died of wounds received at Retief's Nek on the 25th ult. Born May 10, 1856, he joined the 73rd Regiment from the Militia Oct. 13, 1877; became Lieut. May 25, 1878; Captain May 15, 1885. Major Aug. 20, 1894; and second in command Dec 12 last.

Capt. Montagu Sinclair Wellby, 18th Hussars, died at Paardekop on the 5th inst. of wounds received in action at Merizicht on the 30th ult. Born Oct. 10, 1866, he joined the 18th Hussars as Lieut. Aug. 25, 1886; became Captain April 25, 1894; and was Adjutant 1897-99. He served in the North-West Frontier (India) operations of 1897-98 (medal with clasp).

Capt. Marcus William de la Poer Beresford, 3rd Batn. Rifle Brigade, who was in Cashmere on a shooting expedition, was killed on Wednesday by a fall from his horse. Born May 8, 1862, he was a son of Mr. G. de la P. Beresford, his mother being a sister of Sir William Harcourt. He joined the South Staffordshire Regiment as Lieut. from the Militia Jan. 30, 1884; was transferred to the Rifle Brigade May 28, 1884; and became Captain Nov. 8, 1892.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

It is announced in last night's London Gazette that the Queen has been graciously pleased to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned non-commissioned officer, whose claims have been submitted for Her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery in South Africa, as stated against his name:—

Corpl. F. McKay, Gordon Highlanders.—On May 29, during the action on Crow's Nest Hill, near Johannesburg, Corpl. McKay repeatedly rushed forward, under a withering fire at short ranges, to attend to wounded comrades, dressing their wounds whilst he himself was without shelter, and in one instance carrying a wounded man from the open, under a heavy fire, to the shelter of a boulder.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London, N.W.

THE STAFF OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—You were good enough on July 28 to notice my article in the United Service Magazine for July, and I observe with regret that I appear to have failed in making myself understood. You have apparently gathered from my article that I advocate increasing the number of "selected" candidates. Upon the contrary, I did not suggest that there should be any such. Under the system of qualification instead of competition that I proposed, "nominations" by the Commander-in-Chief become obviously superfluous. Candidates who cannot qualify in an examination conducted upon practical lines can scarcely be regarded as desirable staff officers. "Duke's nominations" were inaugurated in order to provide for officers of proved military efficiency, who, nevertheless, fell short of the wrangler class of mathematicians. This was a step in the right direction, but an imperfect arrangement, because, more especially of late, interest has a value at least equal to that of merit.

Under my scheme, jobbery would be impossible, unless we are prepared to admit that a board of superior officers who would be guided by merit alone cannot be found in the British Army. I also provided for any accidental success of unsuitable candidates by laying a burden of subsequent "rejection" upon the commandant of the Staff College—who was to be further charged with the duties of "selecting" the class of work for which every graduate was best suited, in order to prevent round men from being placed in square holes. You appear to question the possibility of finding a commandant of sufficient independence to resist pressure from influential quarters. Surely this is a very grave charge to make? Certainly, if your objection is well founded, our military system must indeed be more rotten than I supposed.

J.U.S. Club, Aug. 2, 1900.

AN OUTSIDER.

THE EXPENSES OF THE WAR.

During the discussion on the Supplementary War Loan, the Chancellor of the Exchequer promised to lay on the table a statement of the revenue and expenditure for 1900-1 according to the latest estimates. This has now been issued, and gives in a clear form the final results of the three or four budgets and semi-budgets which have been presented to the Commons since the war began. The revenue for the current financial year is estimated at £127,520,000, of which £11,292,000 will be produced by the additional taxation levied in the Budget of last March. The expenditure sanctioned by the Commons during the session amounts to £163,370,000, leaving a deficit of £35,850,000. The actual deficit at the end of the last financial year being £13,882,000, the aggregate deficiency is £49,732,000.

To meet this, borrowing powers have been taken under the Treasury Bills Act of last October, the War Loan Act passed last March, and the Supplementary War Loan Bill. These measures together authorise the raising of £56,000,000, and the bonds or stock already issued have produced £39,550,000. The nominal £30,000,000 war loan at 98½ gave to the Treasury only £29,550,000, so £10,182,000 of the deficit is unmet. There are still unexhausted borrowing powers, however, under the Act of last March to the extent of £3,000,000, which leaves £7,182,000 required to balance the account. The Supplementary War Loan Bill will arm the Treasury with further borrowing powers to the extent of £13,000,000, so that Parliament has given the Chancellor of the Exchequer a margin of £5,818,000 for contingencies.

Another table in this return puts the total estimated cost of the war in South Africa at £69,323,000, of which £25,460,000 will be met out of revenue, and £43,863,000 has been or will be provided by loan.

NETLEY HOSPITAL is to be placed in telephonic communication with the docks at Southampton. At present the medical authorities at Netley are warned of the arrival of a transport with invalids on board, but as only the worst cases are now sent to hospital the selection cannot be made until after the ship is berthed. Owing to the distance that the telegram has to be sent by messenger it frequently happens that the ambulance train reaches the hospital before the message informing the medical staff of the class of cases they have to provide for; but the inconvenience thus caused will be obviated as soon as the telephone has been laid on. As only the worst cases are now sent to Netley, the work at the hospital has been materially reduced, there being only 500 patients under treatment, though there is accommodation for 1,600, and only three out of the 100 huts on the high ground are occupied.

THE MILITIA AT ALDERSHOT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A most cruel and unjustifiable attack was made by a writer in an evening paper on Saturday last on Gen. Sir A. Montgomery Moore, commanding the Aldershot District. It has been found necessary, in the interests of the Service, to make a complete rearrangement of commands, and, in order to fit matters in properly, certain Militia units have had to change quarters. The whole scheme of redistribution has been carefully considered and fully approved. It seems, however, that the convenience of one or two officers has been affected, so a personal onslaught has been made on the general in command. Having been approached by several Militia officers on the subject, and knowing how deeply pained the best of them are at this action of the journal in question, I trust you will allow me in their name to say how much they resent the attack which has been made on a distinguished general officer who has on all occasions shown himself in touch with the Service, and done everything in his power to promote its efficiency. Personally I have heard nothing but surprise expressed that anyone could have been found to write in such a spirit of scurrility, for I can answer for it that the writer does not express the views of the Militia. If he did, all I can say is that I should blush for the Service to which I belong. The Militia officers I meet here are all imbued with a desire to do their duty and support authority in every way. This writer would seek to make out that they are little better than school-boys playing at soldiers, who must have everything their own way or they will throw up their commissions on the earliest possible opportunity. A more slanderous libel on the Militia never was published, and the annoyance caused has been so great that I appeal to your sense of justice to allow this protest a place in your columns.

Aldershot, Aug. 7.

The Army.

CAVALRY.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Lieut. Lord Castle-reagh has been seriously ill at Hythe, where he went to undergo the course at the School of Gunnery, but he is now regaining health.

7th Dragoon Guards.—2nd Lieut. Kirkwood, transferred from Roberts' Horse, has been invalided from South Africa, and left in the Canada on the 1st inst.

3rd Hussars.—Capt. Tower is acting temporarily as Brigade-Adjutant, Cavalry Brigade, Curragh.

8th Hussars.—Capt. Thoyts has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

10th Hussars.—Brevet-Major the Hon. E. Baring, who obtains his majority by the promotion of Major Alexander to the Lieut.-Colonelcy, will retain his appointment as Military Secretary to Lord Curzon in India.

12th Lancers.—Major Eastwood and 2nd Lieut. Sir E. B. Lacon have been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

15th Hussars.—Lieut.-Col. Cockayne-Frith, commanding the Cavalry Depot at Canterbury, met with a very serious accident on the 2nd inst. He was thrown from his dog-cart, the wheel of which passed over his neck and severely injured his spine. Mr. Victor Horsley was immediately summoned from London. On Monday an operation was performed, and by last accounts the patient was doing well. The Cavalry Depot officers have had no marquee at the Canterbury Cricket Ground this week owing to the accident.

21st Lancers.—A report was circulated some time ago that the regiment was under orders for China, but it has no foundation. Up to the present no orders have been issued on the subject, nor is it likely they will be.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

By the constitution of three more batteries of Royal Field Artillery at Aldershot the number of batteries has been increased by 54 since June of last year, when there were 94 field batteries, now increased to 148. The number of Royal Horse batteries has in the same period been increased from 21 to 28. Of the horse batteries 10 are in South Africa and nine in India, and of the field batteries 45 in South Africa and 39 in India.

Cholera has once more interfered with the despatch of troops to China. Owing to the prevalence of the disease at Mhow C Battery R.H.A. stands fast. B Battery at Lucknow joins the Field Force in China instead. Major Blane and Capt. Selater have both been posted to B Battery, which is short of officers. The Indian military authorities are scrupulously particular regarding precautions against cholera. No unit of the China force under the least suspicion of disease is embarking.

The new 49th Field Artillery Brigade at Aldershot, formed by the 146th, 147th, and 148th Batteries, will be armed with the 5in. howitzer for throwing lyddite shells. The establishment of the batteries is fixed at one major commanding, two captains, five subalterns, one warrant officer, and 136 non-commissioned officers and men, with 58 horses. The command of the 146th Battery has been given to Major C. Battiscombe, on promotion from the adjutancy of the Lincoln Volunteer Artillery; that of the 147th to Major E. F. Hall, on promotion from the adjutancy of the Glamorgan Militia Artillery; and that of the 148th to Major C. Lyon, on promotion from the adjutancy of the Hampshire and Isle of Wight Militia Artillery. Major Battiscombe is temporarily in command of the brigade, with 2nd Lieut. C. H. Saunders, 90th Field Battery, Aldershot, as brigade adjutant.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

A memorial window has been placed in St. George's Church, Aldershot, by the widow of Lieut.-Col. J. B. Lindsell, in memory of her husband. It is a two-light window at the west end of the building, in which is the small chapel used for daily services. The inscription, on a brass tablet, is, "In dear memory of my husband, John Barker Lindsell, Lieut.-Col., R.E., J.P. for Berks, who served in this garrison for seven years. Died May 7, 1898, in his 54th year. Also in memory of our three children, Jack, Kitty, Frank.—F. M. L."

Lieut.-Col. C. A. Rochfort-Boyd has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Lieut. Shafto, 2nd Lieuts Lord Douro and Foster, and a draft of 400 men from the 1st Batn. left Windsor on Thursday, and embarked in the Britannic, at Southampton, for South Africa, to join the 2nd and 3rd Batns.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Codrington, 1st Batn., left Cape Town for England in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

Royal Scots (1st).—Col. Ross completes his extended period in command of the 2nd Batn. on Tuesday next, when he will be placed on half-pay. Major Hallett, second in command, will succeed him in the Lieut.-Colonelcy.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Brevet Lieut.-Col. Sitwell has been selected for the appointment of second in command of the new 4th Batn. Capt. Crispin, 1st Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—The 5th and 7th (Militia) Batns. changed quarters on Wednesday. The 5th Batn. left the Tower of London for Salisbury Plain, and the 7th Batn. moved from Salisbury Plain to the Tower. The 5th Batn. has covered itself with credit during its stay at the Tower, its young soldiers having more than upheld the high character of their regiment. Thus the 7th Batn., in taking over its quarters, accepts a responsibility which, we feel certain, it will be quite equal to.

Lincolnshire Regiment (10th).—2nd Lieut. Cecil sailed from Cape Town on the 1st inst. in the Canada, invalided.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Capt. Hales, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—The 3rd and 4th (Militia) Batns. have changed quarters at Aldershot. The 3rd Batn., which has been encamped at Cowshot, has taken over Maida Barracks, and the 4th Batn. has vacated Maida Barracks for Cowshot.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—Major Lord Rosmead, 6th (Militia) Batn., is on passage home from the Cape in the Canada, which sailed on the 1st inst., invalided.

Royal Scots Fusiliers (21st).—Capt. Barrett is on passage home from Cape Town in the Canada, which sailed on the 1st inst.

Cheshire Regiment (22nd).—2nd Lieut. Hornby, 2nd Batn., sailed from Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Lieuts. Ward and Riddell, 2nd Batn., are on passage home from the Cape in the Canada, invalided.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—Orders have been received at Aldershot for a draft of 2 sergeants, 4 corporals, and 194 men to be prepared to embark for South Africa about the 23rd inst. The 3rd and 4th (Militia) Batns. returned to Aldershot yesterday from Chatham at the close of the Thames mobilisation; the 3rd Batn. took over Mandora Barracks, the 4th Batn. going into camp at Cowshot with the Irish Brigade.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—There are now doing duty with the new 3rd Batn. at Aldershot Lieut.-Col. Hilton, Major Monro, Capt. and Adj. Reddie, Lieuts. McConnell and Carter, 2nd Lieuts. Nesbitt, Mills, Cathcart, Messery, Beresford, and Lewis, and Lieut. and Qrmr. Whitty. With the 4th Batn. at the same station are Lieut.-Col. Chesney, Major Howell, Lieut. Warburton, 2nd Lieuts. Woods, Mainwaring-White, Dealtry, Gordon, and Jeffries, and Lieut. and Qrmr. Ryder. The two splendid Militia Batns. the 5th and 6th, are also at Aldershot, and are spoken of in the highest terms by all who are brought in touch with them. These battalions have changed quarters this week. The 5th Batn., which has occupied Corunna Barracks since May 8, has gone under canvas at Scroggs Bottom, and the 6th Batn. from Scroggs Bottom has taken over Corunna Barracks.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (33rd).—Capt. Macleod and Greenwood have been invalided from the Cape and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Worcestershire Regiment (36th).—Lieut. Arden has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Gill has been selected for employment with the Army Ordnance Department as an Ordnance Officer 4th Class. Capt. Boucher vacates the Adjutancy of the 1st Batn. Hampshire Regiment to take up for five years the adjutancy of the 4th Volunteer Batn. at Bournemouth, Major Crofts' term in the appointment having expired.

South Staffordshire Regiment (38th).—Capt. Elers 4th (Militia) Batn., sailed from Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

Black Watch (42nd).—Col. Brickenden, commanding the Regimental District, has taken over command of the Militia Brigade at Barry Links.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (43rd).—Lieut. Christie-Miller, 3rd (Militia) Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 1st inst. in the Canada, invalided.

Essex Regiment (44th).—Lieut.-Col. Wood left Cape Town on the 1st inst. in charge of invalids coming home in the Canada.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—Capt. Green has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst. Capt. Humber, Piers, and Mohun-Harris, 4th (Militia) Batn., prisoners of war in the hands of the Boers, were released on the 26th ult.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (46th).—Capt. Grant, a prisoner of war in the hands of the Boers, was released on July 26.

Loyal North Lancashire Regiment (47th).—Capt. Anley and Lieut. Hewett are on passage home from South Africa in the Canada, invalided. They started on the 1st inst.

Royal West Kent Regiment (50th).—When the mail left Aden Major Western and Capt. Pack-Beresford were ordered to proceed at once to South Africa to join the 2nd Batn. (97th), the former on appointment as second in command, and the latter on promotion.

Shropshire Light Infantry (53rd).—A correspondent writes: "2nd Lieut. Carsley, attached to the battalion, died early on July 17, at Ghorpuri, from cholera. Other officers, namely, Lieuts. Pinhey, Carey, and Rundle—were suddenly laid up within a few hours. Lieut. Carsley was the earliest attacked. He lingered through Monday and died early next morning. Lieut. Carsley arrived in India in January last, and in April he joined the battalion. The funeral took place in the evening. A large number of officers attended. The bands of three different regiments—namely, the Shropshires, the Royal Scots, and the 1st Bombay Lancers—were in attendance. The coffin was covered with a Union Jack, and carried by a gun carriage of the 16th Field battery. The Rev. Mr. Harrison read the burial service. Several wreaths and crosses were laid on the grave. The other officers have recovered."

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—The 7th (Militia) Batn., embodied at Aldershot, has handed over Barossa Barracks, and gone under canvas on Cove Hill.

Gloucester Regiment (61st).—Lieut. Baker has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—The 5th and 6th (Militia) Batns., embodied at Aldershot, have changed quarters. The 5th Batn., which has occupied Ramillies Barracks, Marlborough Lines, since its arrival at the beginning of May, has gone into camp on Cove Hill, and the 6th Batn. from Cove Hill has taken Ramillies Barracks.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Capt. Cathcart, 3rd (Militia) Batn., a prisoner of war in the hands of the Boers, was released on the 26th ult.

Black Watch (73rd).—2nd Lieut. Grant left Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—Lieut.-Col. Forbes Macbean writes from Irene, July 8:—"Since we have been in South Africa we have received many parcels of shirts, vests, socks, tobacco, &c., which have contained nothing to show by whom they were sent. I trust that through the medium of your paper our thanks will reach our unknown friends, and assure them that their great and thoughtful kindness has been immensely appreciated by the non-commissioned officers and men of this battalion."

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—2nd Lieut. Dougall sailed from Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

Shropshire Light Infantry (85th).—2nd Lieuts. Miles and Carter left Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst., invalided.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (89th).—Capt. Shewell has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Royal West Kent Regiment (97th).—Lieut.-Col. Grove has been granted an extension of command for twelve months from the 19th inst.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—Capt. Smith, 3rd (Militia) Batn., is on passage home from the Cape in the Canada, which sailed on the 1st inst.

Yorkshire Light Infantry (105th).—Lieut. Hall has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed in the Canada on the 1st inst.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th).—Lieut. Vallings has been granted leave from India to England for six months on medical certificate.

Leinster Regiment (109th).—Col. Glancy will complete his extended period in command to-morrow, and will be placed on half-pay. Major St. Leger, second in command, will succeed him in command.

Royal Northern Counties Reserve Regiment.—The 4th Batn., which has been encamped on Redan Hill since its formation at Aldershot, has moved into Barossa Barracks.

A BOON TO OFFICERS AND MEN UPON THE BATTLEFIELD AND IN HOSPITALS.—The official Military Hospital reports, forwarded during the last Wars in Germany, Austria and France, prove that the pleasant, slightly stimulating, strengthening qualities of the World-known and celebrated HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT, exercise a very beneficial influence upon the health and recovery of the wounded soldiers. Do, therefore, not fail to send your gallant warriors in SOUTH AFRICA a quantity of this MALT, which is so popular in the highest circles of England, and has been used by Members of the ROYAL FAMILY, and is manufactured by M. HOFF, of HAMBURG. Beware of imitation, and see that the label carries the name of M. HOFF. Refuse any other but this one sold by LEOPOLD HOFF, 22, NEW BRIDGE STREET, E.C.

MECHANICAL TRACTION IN WAR.

The war in South Africa has afforded a most important object-lesson in relation to the value of mechanical traction for military purposes. After the Salisbury manoeuvres of 1898 Lord Wolseley reported that this value had been demonstrated as providing an efficient substitute for animal transport, especially in carrying supplies in rear of an army, and Lord Roberts has recognised the importance of supplementing the imperfect resources of the difficult country in which he has been conducting operations. A new stimulus has thus been given to the ingenuity of inventors, and Messrs. Fowler's armoured road-train has been a conspicuous success. A very great deal is due to the energy of Col. Temple in organising the system of steam transport at the seat of war. A timely contribution to the subject is Mr. R. B. Marston's translation from the German of a work by Lieut.-Col. Otfried Layriz, published under the title of Mechanical Traction in War (Sampson Low & Co.), which surveys the whole subject with knowledge and judgment. The book has gained very much from the notes and illustrations which the translator has added to it. Obviously, as the author says, the railway does not exhaust the means of mechanical traction for war purposes, and when all is known concerning our South African experiences there will be a sure ground for further progress. It appears that Cugnot, a Frenchman, proposed a steam motor wagon to the French Minister of War in 1769, based on the invention of his countryman, Papin, but the first application of the principle was in Boydell's traction engine with endless rails, employed in the Crimea. The Germans in 1870 made a limited use of steam traction. They had two of Messrs. Fowler's engines, and Col. Layriz remarks that a dozen would have been of good service in getting the heavy guns and ammunition up to the plateau of Villacoublay during the siege of Paris. The traction engines in South Africa are provided with winding-drums and lengths of steel-wire rope in connection with the rear-driving axles, whereby guns or other heavy weights can be hauled up steep places or into the trucks. Col. Layriz conclusively disposes of the objection made to road traction, that the field railway answers all purposes, by showing the determined character of modern war, which, through the destruction of railway bridges, tunnels, and embankments, must throw a great strain upon the railway engineers, while road traction is independent of any permanent way. He is greatly in favour of electricity as the force for the propulsion of road engines, and instances the many advantages it promises. The book is extremely interesting and valuable, and has been well translated and supplied with many excellent and instructive illustrations. It embodies particulars of nearly every apparatus for road traction now in existence.

ANNALS OF SANDHURST.

Such is the title of a chronicle of the Royal Military College, embodying a sketch of the history of the Staff College, written by Major A. F. Mockler-Ferryman (William Heinemann). Here is a fund of interest and entertainment for all alumni of Sandhurst, and all who have distinguished themselves in the games, sports, athletics, or theatricals of the college are likely to find their achievements recorded in the pages of the volume. The history of the Royal Military College has been little known, and Major Mockler-Ferryman, who is an active worker in the field of military literature, has done well to make this excellent record. The college was founded in March, 1802, and has undergone many vicissitudes. The establishment, which already existed under the same name, became known as the Senior Department, and was the parent of the present Staff College. The Junior Department was originally established in a house at Great Marlow, and when this became inadequate it was proposed to remove it to the King's House, Winchester. The latter, however, was found to be verminous, and the quarters at Marlow were extended. Before this time the land on Bagshot Heath had been bought from William Pitt, the future Earl of Chatham, but, though plans were prepared in 1802 by Wyatt, extraordinary delays occurred, and it was not until the winter of 1812-13 that the cadets were able to migrate to the new establishment. A new order of things was then established, and probably never since that time has the college passed into the Army so many men destined at once to proceed on active service. By 1817 it was in full working order, but parsimony followed, and the number of cadets were reduced. The cadet's breakfast consisted of a pint of milk and unlimited bread and butter, and his dinner of a pound of mutton, with potatoes, bread, and beer at discretion, followed by "stickjaw" or rice pudding, or sometimes an apple pie, and goose with apple sauce and giblet pudding at Christmas, this being considered "high feeding." The punishments were expulsion, rustication, detention during vacation time, confinement in the Black Holes on bread and water, impositions, &c. A species of "Town and Gown" row with Bagshot occurred yearly, and once at least the cadets got the worst of the scrimmage, after which a peace was patched up; while Blackwater Fair was always the occasion of much rowdiness. At length reformation became necessary, and a Select Committee sat upon the question in 1853, things being soon much improved, and in 1862, consequent on the amalgamation of the Indian army, an attempt was made to enlarge the establishment. Something like a mutiny broke out, owing to the fact that the now grown-up cadet was still treated like a boy. In 1871 the Sandhurst cadet temporarily disappeared, owing to the abolition of purchase. The students took their place, being young men who had passed for the Army, and were waiting to be gazetted, and it was not until 1877 that the "G. C." was himself again. Since that time the system has developed into that which is well known, and the cadet has moved with the times. "Coming now to the cadet himself, we have no hesitation in saying that the course he undergoes at Sandhurst is an eminently practical one in all respects. Indoor bookwork forms but a small part of the training, the theories propounded in the lecture halls and studies being put into practice in the field, and parties of cadets may be seen on all fine mornings hard at work in the vicinity of the college digging shelter trenches, throwing up field works, bridging, sketching, drawing up tactical schemes, or carrying out other military duties." Few will dissent from Major Mockler-Ferryman's estimate of the work at Sandhurst. His volume is very entertaining, and should find its place in all military libraries, and on the shelves of many officers. The second part contains many records of cricket, football, athletics, &c., at the college, and the appendix gives official information. The illustrations are numerous and good.

THE RISE AND FALL OF KRUGERISM.

A personal record of much experience has been written under this title by Mr. John Scoble, formerly Times correspondent in Pretoria, and Mr. H. R. Abercrombie, of the Cape Colony Intelligence Department (W. Heinemann). The tone of the book is implied by its title. It is a scathing denunciation of the Boer Government, which may be linked with Mr. FitzPatrick's volume. The circumstances related are extraordinary indeed, and the volume is full of condemnatory assertion. The British Government does not escape, but it is for vacillation and unpreparedness. The charges of bribery, corruption, and intimidation made against Mr. Kruger and his friends are specific and forcible. We must be content to give the following extract from this very remarkable book, which has attracted wide attention:—"In this manner Mr. Kruger has been able to maintain an almost impregnable position in the Legislature, from which he weeded out dangerous members, firmly established by the corrupt management of his own election campaign upon the apparent unanimity of the people as to his desirability as President. He did not confine himself, however, entirely to the milder and less obtrusive methods mentioned, and where they failed he did not shrink from practising intimidation, unfortunately with success during later years; and the impunity with which he has been allowed to act in defiance of the constitutional law of the State in matters of importance has emboldened him even to attack the tribunals of justice in the Transvaal." Those who desire to know the bitterness of feeling in South Africa which preceded the war, cannot do better than read this remarkable book.

THE ILLUSTRATED PAPERS.

The illustrated London weekly papers last Saturday were filled with reproductions of photographic likenesses of the two sovereigns whose loss England, Germany, and Italy have had to deplore—the one, the dearly loved son of the Queen, whose sorrows are her people's; the other, a constitutional King, whose best eulogy was the widowed Queen's heart-broken tribute to the virtues of the valiant King who, victim to the scoundrel assassin's villainous hate, had ruled his kingdom with justice and kindness, just as he had fought for its flag with devotion, and had earned the regard and affection of the difficult race he was called on to govern. These were supplementary to scenes and persons in connection with the events of the life of the Duke of Edinburgh and of the King of Italy, and in addition to the topical war sketches of the lingering war in South Africa and the opening troubles in China. In a few years hence the subjects of lens and pencil will have been forgotten.

Who turns nowadays to the illustrated papers of 1854-5 and of 1857-8 to look at the beautiful work of Simpson, the vigorous sketches of Landells or Crowe, or the photos of Beato? The present work is at least as good, but the South African scenes are, to say the least, monotonous, and the charm of Transvaal Boer and bandit-looking soldiery with trek oxen, and 4.7 cannon, has somewhat faded in frequent illustration, but for the time being the personal subjects are very attractive. Let us take them as they come.

The Sphere.—A grave, heavy likeness of the Duke in the unbecoming slouch undress jacket of Admiral of the Fleet—one broad and four narrower bands of gold lace on the sleeves, the aiguillettes of A.D.C. to the Queen—ribbons of orders just shown in line on the breast of coat, double row of gilt Naval buttons—this on the front page; an unhappy and disastrous unlikeness at page 132. The life-like photo of Humbert, page 5, is an excellent work of art, most creditable to those concerned in the production.

Black and White.—Apparently the same photograph has been used, but the picture is lighter in colour; the name of the photographer is given, Russell and Co., Southsea. The portrait of the murdered King of Italy is vivid as a likeness—the look of the face, the expression of the eye, most faithfully rendered—every inch a king, and a brave, honest man to boot. His courage was exhibited nobly on the fatal field of Custoza when old Archduke Albrecht hurled Cialdini's army down the hillsides in 1866.

The Illustrated London News presented its readers with a supplement graced with a full-page portrait of the Duke of Edinburgh in full uniform as Admiral of the Fleet with all his orders on—a very characteristic likeness; portraits of the Duke as a child of five years of age, as a midshipman, a lieutenant R.N., and as a young man; of the Duke and of the Prince his son; of the Prince of Wales, the Duke, and the Duke of Connaught in a group; of the Duke and Duchess, and of the Emperor Alexander II. in another group. There are in the same supplement views of Coburg, of the ducal castle, of Clarence House; likenesses of the Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg and of the young Duke—altogether very well chosen; also the portraits of the King of Italy and scenes in his honourable life, being of interest to all the world.

The Graphic also gives a supplement. The Duke is represented in a German Hussar uniform from a photo. by Uhlenbuth of Gotha, and there are numerous vignettes of domestic events in his life and of his Coburg palaces. Not many remember His Royal Highness's mission of charity in 1880, when he visited the west coast of Ireland in the Goshawk with a relief squadron to the starving islanders. There are portraits of King Humbert and of his poor Queen, and scenes in his busy life, and a pleasant representation of the young Duke, in addition to the liberal allowance of general illustrations of war scenes our contemporary offers to its readers.

The United Service Magazine has a good August number, and Mr. Parker's article on the forces arrayed against us in North China gives promise of future usefulness and present knowledge, but we might take exception to the articles of a purely academic nature like "Notes on the Evolution of Cavalry," ancient accounts of mounted troops, "The Conspiracy of Catiline," interesting as they are. "Rex" has another onslaught on "Our Army" and its rulers, and Dr. Maguire proves that compulsory military service agrees with the British Constitution.

A timely article on fighting in the West African bush is contributed to Macmillan's Magazine by Capt. Slessor, of the Derbyshire Regt. In the Cornhill Dr. Moorhead continues his narration of his experiences with a Boer ambulance in Natal. The Pall Mall has an article by "Searchlight" on "How to Popularise Our Army." He suggests a number of minor reforms, which appear to indicate personal experience in the ranks. The Century and Harper's for this month are quite up to their usual standard of excellence, and the Humanitarian contains a number of practical articles.

Piquet Exercise, Col. J. O. Williams, Lincoln (The Lincolnshire Press, Limited). If this little work had been distributed freely among our troops in South Africa it would have been invaluable, giving particulars as it does of the duties of piquets and their commanders in all circumstances. It appears as a second edition, revised and enlarged. The carefully-prepared index adds to its usefulness. It is an admirable book of its kind, and well deserves the success it has secured.

Tactical Tips on Tactics, by Major T. King, late 49th Regt. (London: Forster, Groom, and Co.) Officers studying for examination would do well to provide themselves with a copy of this little work, which puts many questions of first importance into the proverbial nutshell. Major King has evidently mastered his subject, and has succeeded in producing a vade mecum which is a model of conciseness.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1900.

THE BRITISH NAVAL MANOEUVRES.WHEN the official scheme of the Naval Manoeuvres was issued we said that it gave every promise of interesting and instructive results. Now that we have read the reports of the various correspondents who were afloat we see no reason for changing our view. True, it has been said that the manoeuvres were a fiasco, but then this has been said before, and with as little reason. That there has been disappointment we have no doubt, but while a time limit is fixed this will always be the case. On this occasion, too, as in previous years, there has been an entire lack of dramatic incident, and when this is the case the public feels that it has to a certain extent been defrauded of its rights. Nevertheless, in actual sea warfare dramatic incidents occur but seldom, and only, as a rule, after a long period devoted by either side to manœuvring for an advantage. Where such an incident occurs at the outset of a naval struggle it has been invariably due to a mistake on the part of one of the combatants, such as we are not entitled to expect when British officers are commanding the opposed fleets. The destruction of the Turkish Fleet at Sinope, that of the Italian Fleet at Lissa, and that of the Chinese Fleet at the Yalu are cases in point, while the action off Santiago tends in the same direction. The most important lesson, from a public point of view, to be gathered from these manœuvres, as from several of those of recent years, is that we must not expect the next naval war to be decided quickly. In the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE we have consistently argued that the popular notion, fed by many writers on naval subjects, that a naval war in which this country is engaged will be "short, sharp, and decisive" is an entirely erroneous one. The command of the sea, when the question has to be decided by two first-class naval Powers, will not be settled in ten days, or ten months, unless the teaching of history is entirely belied.

The principal object of the manœuvres this year was to obtain information relative to the working of a fleet which is composed of vessels of all classes, and is fighting for the command of the sea. A battle fleet "B" was divided into two squadrons, of which one portion, consisting of nine battleships, was stationed at Milford, and the other portion, consisting of four battleships, was stationed at Lamlash. A hostile fleet "A," inferior in battleships to "B," was also divided into two squadrons, one portion, consisting of four battleships, being stationed at Berehaven, while another portion, consisting of an equal number of battleships, was stationed at Lough Swilly. A hostile reinforcement, consisting of four more battleships, was sent outside the area of operations with instructions to attempt to join the "A" fleet after a certain period had elapsed, which junction being successfully effected the "A" fleet would be but very slightly inferior in force to "B." As soon as war was declared the Admirals on either side at once took steps to unite the divisions of their fleets, and in either case this was successfully accomplished at prearranged rendezvous in the Atlantic. When the fleets had thus joined up, that of "A" was to the northward of "B," which therefore rested between "A" and its hoped-for reinforcement. The Admiral of the "B" fleet, for reasons which appear to be conclusive, decided not to attempt the maintenance of this position, but starting to the north in chase of "A" made the circuit of Ireland, and returned to his English ports without having sighted the enemy. On the other hand, the "A" fleet, proceeding to the southward, was able to effect a junction with its reinforcement at a place and time previously arranged. The real struggle was now to begin, but owing to the composition of the respective fleets the "A" fleet was not in a position to attempt the offensive until its Admiral had first satisfied himself that some mishap had deprived "B" of one or more of its ships. Nothing of the kind had occurred, and, therefore, when the "B" fleet cruising south off the coast of Ireland met "A" the latter had no alternative but to fly for its ports. As the period of operations had now drawn to a close the "B" fleet returned home. It is possible, of course, that had the operations been of longer duration Admiral Noel, who was in command of the "B" fleet, would not have taken this course, but would have endeavoured to "contain" his adversary either by blockade or masking. Seeing also that Admiral Rawson, who commanded the "A" fleet, had been obliged, by stress of circumstances, to divide his battle force between Berehaven and Queenstown, such action on the part of "B" was not without the promise of success. But the "A" fleet was still a "fleet in being," and a continued menace to the command of the seas, while "B" was not in overwhelming force, nor in possession of those tactical advantages which his adversary, with more modern ships, had at his service.

But if, as we have said, the limited period of ten days assigned for the operations prevented a decisive issue on the main question there are still lessons to be gathered from these manœuvres which are not less important. That there is much yet to be learnt in the way of handling cruisers to the best advantage has been often impressed in these columns. We find further confirmation of our opinion on this subject in the operations just concluded. One of the reasons for taking the stand that we have in regard to the masts and sails controversy has been that we are convinced we can never hope to obtain the best result from our cruisers unless a school for the purpose is permanently formed. It may be hoped that one result of these manœuvres will be that both the Channel and Mediterranean Squadrons are supplied with a larger proportion of scouts, and that the training squadron is also increased in numbers with a view to opportunities for a further study of cruiser tactics. Another lesson not less important is taught by the experience now given of reinforcing a modern fleet with vessels of inferior speed, smaller coal endurance, and diminished tactical mobility. For the purposes of the manœuvres it was doubtless necessary to make reinforcements of this nature, but both Admiral Rawson and Admiral Noel must have found the antiquated vessels they were supplied with the reverse of a blessing. Yet it cannot be doubted that, as the Navy is at present constituted, some, at least of these vessels must be put into the fighting line, and it has recently been contended that they should be rearmed for the purpose. Remembering, as we do too well, the heterogeneous collection of vessels given to Sir Geoffrey Hornby in 1885, we have always argued that it is useless to tinker at the old ships, and that good value for money can only be obtained by spending it on new vessels. Once more we have had it demonstrated that a homogeneous squadron of eight new vessels is at least the equal, if not the superior, in battle-worthiness of a fleet half as many again in number but of varying types. If the result of the manœuvres is only to drive this fact home they will have served a most excellent purpose.

The young officers who commanded torpedo-boat destroyers during the manœuvres are complaining that they were gravely handicapped by the lack of definite rules, which has been one of the novel features of the manœuvres this summer. In previous years the conditions in which these vessels were liable to be put out of action were clearly laid down, but this time the commanders of the destroyers were merely required to keep out of range of the enemy's guns, with the result, it is being said, that the cruisers of the "A" fleet made claims to capture or destruction of destroyers which were often frivolous. In many instances destroyers were obliged to lay up for twenty-four hours pending the decision of the umpires, the ultimate verdict being favourable to the torpedo craft. On the other hand, one may fairly question whether officers in command of destroyers would venture to approach a fleet of battleships and fast cruisers in the broad light of day. Even at long range they would be liable to some risk of being hit by shell fire, and perhaps only in the vicinity of a fortified port would it be prudent for these craft to hang upon the wake of a fleet. The point is of considerable interest and importance. As for the twenty-four torpedo boats attached to the "A" fleet, it is obvious that these were not up to date in the quality of speed, since we have built no new boats for some years past. If destroyers are to be pitted against torpedo-boats it is clearly desirable that the latter should be as swift as the best French craft, and that they should largely outnumber the destroyers.

THE FRENCH NAVAL MANŒUVRES.

THE recent French manœuvres in the Channel bore some resemblance to our own. There was, at least, the same idea of a concentration of Mediterranean and Channel Squadrons. The Mediterranean Squadron completed with coal at Oran, taking in 2,000 tons, and the Foudre and torpedo-boats afterwards visited the coast as far as Rachgoun, having on board the officers of the Superior School of Naval Studies, who were to investigate the coast-line and the conditions of navigation. The squadron formed up to pass the Straits of Gibraltar on the night of June 28. The cruisers, under Rear-Admiral Maréchal, in line ahead preceded the battleships, which were in two columns line ahead led respectively by the Brennus and Bouvet. Just ahead of the battleship lines and at an equal distance from each was the Lincol, as répétiteur d'armée, or signal-repeating ship, and each leading ship was flanked by a torpedo gunboat or small cruiser on either hand. The interval between the battleship lines was 2,000 mètres, and the ships were 400 mètres apart in their lines. According to the programme of operations the Northern Squadron at Quiberon was apprised that the Mediterranean Squadron had left Oran for a rendezvous 100 miles from Vigo, where it was due on July 2, at about 8 p.m., while the latter squadron, after leaving Gibraltar, was to be on guard against an attack from the rear, and was to gain intelligence at the Sagres signal station, Cape St. Vincent. The Northern Squadron left Quiberon on June 29, while the Mediterranean Squadron, preceded by a long line of cruisers, came to meet it. At 6 a.m. on July 2 the cruisers were in contact, but communication had been established on the previous day by means of wireless telegraphy, installed on the plan of Lieut. Tissot in the Northern Squadron in the Masséna, Bruix, and Dupuy de Lôme. The squadrons united in a dense fog, which soon passed away.

Rear-Admiral Maréchal then took command of the combined cruiser squadron, which preceded the battle fleet, then formed in three columns line ahead, and being followed by another light division. From July 2 to 6 Admiral Gervais put the fleet through various exercises and steam tactics, intended to give it cohesion. The six Mediterranean battleships operated against the six of the Northern Squadron on the 3rd, while the cruisers were engaged in distant signalling and scouting. On arriving at Quiberon an interesting manœuvre took place, in which the mobile defences of Rochefort and Lorient took part. The bay was supposed to be in an enemy's hands, and was being made an advanced base for an attack on the French coast. On arrival the squadron took up a position where it was protected from the batteries at Houât, Hoedick, Penerf, and Le Croisic, but knowing it was exposed to torpedo attack it was surrounded at night by booms. The boats attacked, using collapsible heads for their torpedoes, but without success; and the next day, the booms being removed, the squadron bombarded the forts, and the bay was supposed to be occupied. The fleet then proceeded to Douarnenez, making on the way comparative trials of signalling by coloured rockets, searchlight flashes, and wireless telegraphy.

The fleet passed through the Raz de Sein on the morning of July 8, and in the evening anchored near Morgat, in Douarnenez Bay. Then followed an interesting exercise, which recalls our old blockades of Brest. The fleet was that of an enemy blockading the port, and leaving its light vessels to continue the duty during the night, while itself seeking shelter in the bay. The mobile defence of Brest knew the exact position of the squadron by means of the signal stations, and careful precautions were therefore taken against attack. The ships lay with all lights extinguished, while outside them, in fixed positions, were cruisers and gunboats which surrounded them with a circle of electric light, at each point being a destroyer to give chase to any attacking boats. One point of the exercise was to distinguish between friends and possible enemies. On the 9th the fleet reached Brest, where great festivities took place, the Minister of Marine being present. On the next day Admiral Gervais in the Bouvet left for Cherbourg with the Northern Squadron, and the Mediterranean Squadron followed on the 12th, being accompanied by the new battleship St. Louis, which has just completed her armament, and is to be attached to it. A principal incident of the operations at Cherbourg was an attack on the port delivered by the Northern Squadron, while the Mediterranean Squadron defended the entrance to the Channel. Over 200 members of the Legislature were present, and on the next day, the 19th, the grand review took place in the presence of the President of the Republic. After the review the fleet returned to Brest, and some interesting operations have followed. Owing to the fact that many seamen of the Mediterranean Squadron are Bretons, it was decided that the squadron should remain a brief period at the port, to give them the opportunity of being with their families.

Navv Notes.

The funeral of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg took place at Coburg last Saturday, with all the pomp and ceremony that is usually displayed when the mortal remains of reigning sovereigns are committed to earth. The German Emperor and the young Duke Carl Edward headed the procession to the church of St. Maurice, in which the funeral service was celebrated, whilst in the train followed H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Duke of Connaught, and some twenty other Princes representing the States of Germany. The names of the officers of the Royal Navy who attended the funeral in a representative capacity, and as a tribute of respect, have already been stated. Admiral of the Fleet Sir F. W. Richards carried to the church a magnificent wreath of lilies of the valley and cornflowers, to which was attached a blue streamer, bearing the inscription: "The Navy mourns for its gifted Admiral of the Fleet." This inscription accurately expresses the deep feeling of the Sea Service, for the Royal Admiral was universally respected by the officers and men of the British Navy who had the good fortune to serve under his command. A State luncheon followed the ceremony in church, attended by the German Emperor and more than a hundred other persons of distinction. The Kaiser then had an interview with the bereaved Duchess Marie and left Coburg, after taking an affectionate farewell of the young Duke of Albany, who succeeds to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg. The interment in the Royal vaults of Coburg took place the same night by torchlight, and this closing ceremony was also attended by the Prince of Wales and all the German Princes. To the Duchess Marie Mr. Goschen, on behalf of the Royal Navy, has sent a message of respectful condolence.

In connection with the use of wireless telegraphy, the special correspondent of the Times with the "A" fleet reports some very peculiar occurrences. He says that on two or more nights, at about the same time, and when the flagship was some hundreds of miles to the westward of Ireland, the receiver of the wireless apparatus in the Majestic was more than once agitated in such a manner as might be taken to indicate that some transmitting ship was sending messages within the radius of imperfect sensibility, but not within the radius of perfect transmission, that is, perhaps, at a distance of not much less nor much greater than thirty miles. These agitations were very frequent but quite unintelligible. They occurred about midnight, and in circumstances which seemed to make it impossible for a transmitting instrument to be within range. The correspondent is of opinion that they may have been caused by some undetected electrical disturbance within the ship; or, on the other hand, they may have been caused by some atmospheric or even cosmical disturbance, the influence of which on the very sensitive instruments employed has not yet been investigated. As these singularappings occurred on three successive nights, at or about the same time, it is quite out of the question that they were due to the invisible but not distant presence of the enemy's cruisers fitted with the wireless telegraphy apparatus. Nor does it seem likely that they were due to some electrical disturbance within the ship, as they were observed on board the Blake as well as on board the Majestic. Whatever may have been the cause, it is obvious that they might have a great influence on the future use of wireless telegraphy, and it at least would be as well that an investigation should be made into the matter. There are now a number of ships in the Channel and elsewhere fitted with this apparatus, and doubtless reports are being received at the Admiralty. These may, indeed, throw some light on what is at present a very odd and inexplicable occurrence.

A very interesting and detailed description of the bombardment and capture of the Taku forts appeared in the Daily News of Thursday. This account is written by Mr. James Hamilton, the third engineer of the British steamer Kwang Ping, which was lying in the river at the time. He describes how at about half-past twelve on Saturday night the Chinamen opened fire on the ships, and how he saw the five gunboats replying to the fire from the forts. He says, "looking up the river I saw the Illis smoking up, and then at a pretty quick speed for a river like the Peiho she proceeded to her position astern of the Algerine. The Lion followed, and as both of them passed, we cheered. Meanwhile the Algerine and two Russian gunboats were tackling the forts, the former using smokeless powder and the Russians black powder." The Whiting was busy also; as soon as the fire was opened she seized the four torpedo boats and towed them to a place of safety. A shell from the North fort, missing the Algerine, dropped into the river close by the Whiting. About 1.30 a.m. the Illis got into position and also opened fire. The bombardment continued until three o'clock, when the Chinese seemed to have had enough of it, and the gunboats then gave their attention to the South fort in which about this time a magazine exploded, and soon afterwards the foreign ensigns were displayed in the North fort. After the explosion there was very little firing, and by 7.30 a.m. the fight was over. The official description of the fight has not yet appeared, probably owing to the fact that when it took place Sir Edward Seymour was still shut off from communication with the fleet.

At the recent Congress of Naval Architects in Paris the remarkable proposal was made by two well-known members, who read a joint paper, that the battleship of the future should be enormously increased in displacement. These gentlemen, Messrs. F. C. Goodall and A. C. Holzappel, argued that a ship of about 31,000 tons displacement, about 600ft. in length, and with beam of 100ft., could be so constructed as to be practically unsinkable, and vastly superior in gun power to the existing types. The proposition is, indeed, almost self-evident, although the authors of the paper considered it in great detail. It is also evident that the cost of constructing battleships of 31,000 tons would be very large, whilst, if successful, there would be nothing to prevent the general adoption of these monster ships. In that event, where would be the advantage? We should require to spend double or treble as much money upon every monster built, and it seems improbable that this country would benefit under the scheme. Already, the number of British battleships is limited by the great cost of building and armament, so that even if other Powers refused to increase the tonnage of their ships we should have to oppose with these monsters a larger number of medium-sized and far handier vessels.

This quality of handiness, which is so greatly prized by seamen, was not touched upon by the authors of the paper in question. They were content to show—and it is virtually impossible to gainsay the conclusion—that the proposed monsters would be vastly superior in all other respects to the battleships of to-day. They could be so thickly armoured as to be practically shot-proof; they could be subdivided into a greater number of compartments; they could carry a tremendous armament; and they could steam quite as fast as the existing ships without sacrificing any of these advantages. Or, by modifying some of them, the speed could even be increased. Staff-Captain Oules, R.N., who adversely criticised the paper (making an excellent speech in French), held it impossible to armour a ship of 600ft. in length from end to end, and argued that the monster would thus be vulnerable. This argument was, however, disputed by the authors of the paper. It is worth noting that Captain Oules is not a qualified interpreter, although he must be very well acquainted with the French language to have made so technical a retort. The fact is, as we have frequently stated, that officers in our Navy receive little encouragement to qualify as interpreters.

The article which Mr. J. H. Schooling has contributed to the Fortnightly on the naval strength of the seven sea Powers has called forth a timely letter from a naval officer in the Times. The writer points out that if results obtained by Mr. Schooling's method of calculation and comparison were trustworthy they would be most reassuring, but unfortunately they are misleading and calculated to do more harm than good. Mr. Schooling has taken the total tonnage of the battleships of the seven Powers, and after deducting therefrom a certain proportion, varying according to the age of each ship, he arrives at what is supposed to represent the battleship strength of the Powers. The writer in the Times points out that any calculation depending primarily upon tonnage must be misleading, as the English ships are of far greater tonnage as a rule than those of other nations, not because they carry a heavier armament, but because it is necessary that they should have a greater radius of action. He compares the Majestic and Sevastopol, the armaments of these ships being practically identical, yet Mr. Schooling gives the Majestic an advantage of nearly 40 per cent. merely because she is of nearly 4,000 tons greater displacement. "One is of nearly 4,000 tons greater displacement," he might as well say that a man six feet high is 20 per cent. better than a man of five feet, though both are armed with similar weapons, ignoring the fact that the bigger man's extra size does not enable him to shoot any quicker or straighter, and further that he offers a bigger mark to his adversary which is undoubtedly a disadvantage." Seeing that we have twenty-nine battleships built or building of over 14,000 tons which are no better armed than the 11,000-ton ships of France and Russia, it is clear that it would be a mistake to pin our faith to calculations based on tonnage.

THE CHINA CRISIS.

Sunday, Aug. 5.

Further statements relating to the Europeans in Peking were issued by the Chinese authorities. The Tsung-li-Yamen has informed the Governor of Shantung that the Ministers, with their staffs, were safe on the 30th ult., that relations between them and the Chinese authorities were friendly, and that provisions were frequently sent into the Legations. The Viceroy Liu and Prefect Sheng state that the Ministers are being held as hostages, and that they will certainly be killed if the Allies persist in their march to Peking. Two pro-foreign members of the Tsung-li-Yamen have been beheaded because they urged the protection of foreigners.

The following cable message has been received from Admiral Remy, dated Taku, Aug. 2:—"General Chaffee reports that 800 Japanese, in scouting towards Peitsang, lost three killed and 26 wounded. The enemy were in trenches and loop-holed houses."

The following despatch has been received from Gen. Grodekoff, dated Khabrovsk, Aug. 1:—

"On the 27th ult. Gen. Sacharoff invited the Commandant of Sansin to enter into negotiations. As the latter did not appear, the Russian troops seized the northern and western sides of the fortress. On the 28th Sansin was bombarded for three hours. At noon the Cossacks swam across the Sungari River and attacked the town, driving the Chinese from all their entrenchments. They resisted a heavy cannonade and an obstinate attack until the infantry made their charge, upon which they fled, leaving behind them guns, a quantity of weapons, and cartridges. The weapons were rendered useless. Twenty guns were captured, including fourteen Hotchkiss guns. The Chinese numbered 4,000 men, and sustained heavy losses. The inhabitants fled. The troops fought bravely. Lieut.-Col. Gornostajeff and six men were wounded."

Gen. Grodekoff reports on Aug. 1 that Blagovestchensk has again been bombarded. The steamer Selenga, which was assisting Gen. Servianoff's detachment at Aigun, has been seriously damaged by Chinese shells.

Gen. J. Cumming commands the 4th Brigade for China. His staff includes Capt. Nicholls, of the 2nd Punjab; Capt. Cruddas, of the 38th Dogras; Capt. Williams, of the Commissariat; and Capt. H. Hudson.

The transports Nowshera and Natiana left Hong Kong for the north. The Chusan, with Gen. Creagh and staff, has arrived there.

Monday, Aug. 6.

Admiral Sir Edward Seymour arrived at Shanghai yesterday from Nanjing.

The Admiralty have received a telegram from Admiral Seymour stating that he had seen the Viceroy of Nanjing on Aug. 2. The Viceroy was very friendly, and seemed anxious to maintain peace in the Yang-tse Valley. He agreed to the landing of a force of 3,000 British troops for the defence of Shanghai. The Viceroy returned the Admiral's visit on Aug. 3, and renewed his assurances of friendship. An agreement was arrived at as to arrangements for maintaining order on the Yang-tse.

The warships at Shanghai are: British—the Bonaventure, the Plover, the Whiting, and the Woodcock; American—the Princeton and the Castine; Dutch—the Koning der Nederlanden, the Holland, and the Piet Hein; French—the Pascal and the Surprise; German—the Gefion; Japanese—the Takao, the Akagi, and the Maya. The warships at Wu-sung are all British. They are as follows:—The Centurion, the Undaunted, the Dido, the Marathon, and the Waterwitch.

Mr. Warren, the British Consul-General, says to-day that he regards Admiral Seymour's interview with Liu Kun Yi as entirely satisfactory. He trusts order will now be preserved in the Yang-tse Valley.

The situation at Canton is disquieting. Many merchants, fearing trouble, are coming to Hong Kong for protection. The Mohawk has returned from Hai-Nan. She reports that everything is to all appearance quiet there. The report that Li Hung Chang had committed suicide is incorrect.

The Argonaut arrived at Colombo on the 3rd inst., and left on the 4th on her way to the China station. The hired transports Sunda and Fullata left Calcutta for China yesterday. The French cruiser Guichen has left Hong Kong for the north.

Tuesday, Aug. 7.

The following telegram from Consul Carles, dated Tien-tsin, Aug. 4, has been received at the Foreign Office:—"News of the Japanese Legation has been received by the Japanese Consul up to Aug. 1. The advance of the Allied forces has commenced to-day."

The situation in the Chinese provinces is far from reassuring. A foreigner has been shot at in Shanghai. All over China popular feeling is said to be with the Dowager Empress, and troops and money are being sent north through the Grand Canal. Canton is quiet.

Fighting of a serious nature continues in Manchuria. Two Russian squadrons were hard pressed on the road to Ninguta by a Chinese column, but, being reinforced, defeated the enemy. Aigun has been burnt and Khailar captured by the Russians.

A despatch has been received by M. Delcassé from the French Consul at Chung-King stating that disturbance is increasing on the Upper Yang-tse, and that the British Consul has just left with the Customs staff. He himself is about to leave Chung-King with his Japanese colleague.

Owing to an outbreak of cholera in C Battery Royal Horse Artillery, it has been replaced by B Battery in the cavalry brigade for China. The battery will sail on board the Ujina on the 13th inst. The Jaipur transport train will probably proceed to China. The 3rd Brigade will be joined by 34 pioneers. The 5th Haidarabad Infantry will go to Hong Kong for garrison duty. The 4th Brigade, which is under orders for China, consists of the 28th Madras, the 6th Burma Infantry, the 1st Jodhpur Lancers, the Bikaner Camel Corps without camels, the Maler Kotla Sappers, and Alwar Infantry. The Imperial Service troops will sail from Calcutta. All the troops will take the 303 rifles or carbines with them, and Maxims will also accompany the regiments. The 3rd China Brigade will be commanded by Gen. Reid, now commanding at Malakand.

The last of the fleet of 30 Indian transports, bringing the 1st Division, arrived at Hong Kong on Monday. The 4th Gurkhas are encamped on Stonecutters Island, the Bombay Infantry are at Lyem-moon Pass, the 3rd Madras are in the new barracks at Hung-hom, and the Hong Kong Regiment are in barracks at Kowloon. In addition to these forces, the Welsh Fusiliers, the Asiatic Artillery, the Royal Engineers, and other details, are in Hong Kong itself. The warships at present in port are the Goliath, Isis, Mohawk, Handy, Otter, and Sandpiper, the French cruiser Guichen, and the American monitor Monterey. The Redpole and one French and two American gunboats are at Canton.

Wednesday, Aug. 8.

In the House of Commons this morning Mr. Brodrick said: I have received two telegrams from China. First a telegram in cypher, from Sir C. Macdonald, handed in at the Tsinan Yamen 3.40 p.m. yesterday, dated Peking, Aug. 3, and received at 7 a.m. to-day:—

"I have to-day received your cypher telegram forwarded through the Chinese Minister. Shell and cannon fire ceased July 16, but rifle fire from Chinese positions held by Government troops and Boxers has continued intermittently ever since. Casualties since then slight. The following British were killed:—Warren, David Oliphant, and Capt. Strouts, and Ptes. Scalding and Phillips, of the Royal Marines. Wounded: 26 British, including Capt. Halliday and Wray, Students Peachey and Townsend, and Times correspondent, Dr. Morrison. With the exception of Marine Private Sawyer, all wounded doing well. The rest of the British in Legation well. Including the whole garrison, total killed 60, wounded 110. We have strengthened our fortifications, and have over 200 women and children refugees in the Legation. The Chinese Government have refused us permission to telegraph in cypher until now."

A telegram has been received from the British Rear-Admiral, handed in at Chefoo, Aug. 6:—

"The Allies, about 12,000 strong, attacked the Chinese entrenched position at Hsiku, which is about two miles outside Tien-tsin, early this morning. The Chinese were driven out and retreated to the northward, pursued by Allies, who occupied Peitsang. Transport followed up troops by road and river. Advance to Peking begun."

Another report says:—The Allies attacked the Peitang entrenchments on both sides of the Pei-ho river on Sunday morning, and drove out the Chinese. Driven in from their outer works the Chinese blew up the bridge, but the Japanese crossed the river exposed to a murderous cross fire, losing heavily. The fighting lasted from three o'clock till eleven, with heavy losses on both sides. The Chinese retreated up the river pursued by the Allies, but the pursuit was difficult, as the river banks had been cut and the country round was flooded. There is a force of 15,000 Chinese about two days' march to the south-east of Tien-tsin, which is guarded by 6,000 of the Allies, with 14 guns.

Thursday, Aug. 9.

The German Foreign Office has received the following telegram from Herr Bulow, First Secretary of Legation, at Peking, dated Tsinan, Aug. 4:—"Since July 21 the situation has been unchanged. There has been neither attack by troops en masse upon us, nor shell fire; only desultory rifle fire. State of health of members of Legation comparatively good. Wounded are making progress. Cordes has recovered."

The Marquis of Salvago Raggi, Italian Minister at Peking, confirms the murder of Baron von Ketteler, and the evacuation of the Belgian, Austrian, and Italian Embassies, the occupants of which, together with missionaries and private residents, have taken refuge in the British Legation, where 700 strangers are gathered. The Catholic missions in the northern part of the city appear to be still holding out, and are defended by 30 French and 10 Italian sailors.

The Dutch Legation was destroyed by fire on June 22. The Minister and the Secretary of the Legation were, however, safe, and were hoping to be relieved in a fortnight.

The following telegram from Mr. Conger, United States Minister in Peking, was also received:—"We are still besieged. The situation is more precarious. The Chinese Government is insisting upon our leaving Peking, which means certain death. Rifle firing is kept upon us daily by the Imperial troops. We have abundant courage, but little ammunition or provisions. Two Progressive Yamen Ministers have been beheaded. All connected with the United States Legation are well at the present moment."

The following was issued by the Foreign Office:—"H.M. Consul at Tien-tsin telegraphed on the 6th inst. that the Chinese had been driven out of Peitsang and were at the time of telegraphing in full retreat."

A despatch from Gen. Chaffee, dated "At the front, August 5," says:—

"Peitsang was handsomely taken early this morning by the Japanese, supported by the English and Americans. The loss of the Japanese was considerable, of the English slight, of the Americans nil. The ground was very limited. In the morning the Americans occupied the rear position, which was to form the turning movement, but they were unable to form in line. To-morrow morning we move on Yangtsun."

A despatch has been received from the commander of the Austro-Hungarian gunboat Zenta, which says:—"Peitsang was captured on August 5. The Chinese troops fled. Sixty men of the Zenta took part in the fight; so far no casualties are reported."

Admiral Seymour arranged with the Viceroy of Nanking for the occupation by a British contingent of the settlements at Shanghai.

Gen. Orloff sends further details of the capture of Hailar on the 3rd inst., concerning the flight of the Chinese and the panic into which they have been thrown by the Russian success. He has ordered work to be resumed as soon as possible on the half-destroyed railway and telegraphed lines. The railway line for 2,000 versts along the frontier is guarded by armed Cossacks of the reserve. Gen. Orloff adds that no Mongolian or Chinese have entered Russian territory.

The New South Wales contingent for China embarked on board the transport Salamis amid great enthusiasm.

Friday, Aug. 10.

The following cable message has been received from General Chaffee:—"Yang-tsun, Monday. Yang-tsun was occupied on the 6th inst. Our casualties are about 60 men of the 9th Infantry, 14th Infantry, and Battery F of the 5th Artillery. Nearly all are from the 14th Infantry. Lieut. Long, of the 9th Infantry, wounded slightly. Many were prostrated by the heat and fatigue."

A Japanese correspondent says:—

"The allied forces marched on the night of August 4 to attack the Chinese troops stationed about three miles north of Tien-tsin. The engagement began at 3.30 the next morning. After seven and a quarter hours' fighting the allied troops defeated the enemy and occupied Peitsang. The plan was, that the English and Japanese troops, to the number of 12,000, were to advance from the right bank of the Pei-ho River, and Russian and French troops, to the number of 5,000, from the left bank, but the progress of the latter force was prevented by the flooding of the country by the enemy. The task of the occupation of Peitsang was then undertaken solely by the former contingent. The Allies will now advance on Yang-tsun."

Vice-Admiral Bendemann, commanding the German cruiser squadron in the Far East, adds that an immediate advance on Yang-tsun is contemplated, in order to prevent the concentration of Chinese troops there. The road to Peking is supposed to be open.

M. Delcassé has received the following telegram from M. Pichon, French Minister at Peking, transmitted from Shanghai to-day:—

"The Diplomatic Corps has just been informed by the Chinese Government that the Powers have repeatedly demanded that we shall be permitted to leave Peking under escort, and the Government has asked us to arrange the conditions for our departure and fix the date. We have replied to the Tsung-li-Yamen that we cannot quit our posts without instructions from our Governments, to whom we must refer. I must inform you that we shall not leave Peking unless the foreign forces come to fetch us. These forces must be sufficient in number to insure the safety of a convoy of 800 foreigners, 200 of whom are women and children and 50 wounded, and also of 3,000 native Christians whom we cannot abandon to massacre. In no case can a Chinese escort be accepted. I hope that the cipher telegram No. 1, which I sent on August 3, has been forwarded to you."

A cable has been received from Mr. Goodnow, United States Consul-General at Shanghai, announcing that a considerable British force has been landed for the protection of the foreign settlement.

General Grodekoff telegraphs to the Minister of War, under date Khacarovsk, August 6, as follows:—"The detachment of General Rennenkampf, which was sent in pursuit of the defeated Chinese, returned to Aigun yesterday with two mitrailleuses and nine flags, taken from the enemy, who fled."

The force of Cossacks who were despatched to clear the right flank of the Aigun river of the Chinese have captured a Chinese general, five officers, and 68 soldiers. The Siberian railway is now open for traffic from Chelybinsk to Lake Baikal, a distance of 3,047 versts, and also from Mysovaya Station to Sryetensk, a distance of 1,034 versts. Information has been received at Shanghai that the forts and the Chinese city at Newchwang have been taken by the Russians.

Navy Personal.

Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Bart., Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth; Vice-Admiral Sir John Fullerton, of the Victoria and Albert; Captain G. Neville, of the Australia; Lieut. H. B. Pelly, of the Victoria and Albert; Surgeon A. R. Bankart, of the Osborne; and Colonel R. B. Kirchoffer, Commandant R.M.L.I., Portsmouth, were honoured with invitations to attend the special service in memory of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, held in the private chapel at Osborne on Saturday last, which was attended by Her Majesty.

Admirals Sir J. Dalrymple-Hay, Bart., and Lord Walter T. Kerr, Senior Naval Lord; Vice-Admirals Sir Compton Domville, G. Digby-Morant, and Ernest Rice; Rear-Admirals A. L. Douglas, and A. W. Moore, Second and Junior Naval Lords respectively; and Rear-Admirals John Fellowes, and E. F. Jeffreys, Director of Naval Ordnance, were honoured with invitations to attend the memorial service for his late Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha in the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, on Saturday last. Some of these officers had served with, or under the command of, his Royal Highness.

Admiral Sir N. Bowden-Smith, Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, will be relieved in that appointment on the 1st prox., and it is reported that he will be succeeded by Admiral Sir Frederick Bedford.

Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle, in his aerial expedition with the Rev. J. M. Bacon, experienced the full force of the recent thunderstorms. The reverend gentleman states that the gallant flag officer's intimate acquaintance with perils by land and sea rendered him supremely indifferent to a situation that at one time appeared at least sensational. In spite of bad weather they were able to prove the practicability of using collapsible drums for Morse code messages as long as the apparatus was distinguishable.

Vice-Admiral Sir Compton Domville has been nominated president of the committee to inquire into the different types of boilers in use on board H.M. ships. The only other naval officer on the committee will be an Inspector of Machinery. An excellent selection would be the "chief" of the Powerful, whose practical experience must be of incalculable assistance to the committee.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Squadron, proceeds from Portland to Berehaven with the vessels under his orders, instead of assembling them at Spithead on Monday next.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fullerton, commanding the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, attained his sixtieth year of age on Friday in last week, and should be placed on the retired list, as he has not hoisted his flag since promotion to Rear-Admiral. His retention on the active flag list will, however, be arranged by a special Order in Council.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron, left Corfu on Wednesday in the Renown for Malta. An additional yacht is to be provided for his use, but considerably smaller than the Surprise and somewhat akin to the Columbine, attached to the North American command. A sailing schooner of 160 tons has been purchased and is now being prepared in a private yard at Gosport.

Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Seymour, Commander-in-Chief of the China Squadron, went to Nankin in the Alacrity at the end of last week, and visited the Viceroy, who personally returned the same. The Celestial magnate was profuse in his assurances of friendship and anxiety to maintain peace in the Yang-tse Valley. It is to be hoped that, after professing the will to do, he may be able to ensure the performance of such a desirable measure.

Rear-Admiral H. L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, arrived at Wellington, New Zealand, on Sunday last.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Wharton's retention as Hydrographer of the Admiralty for a long period after his retirement is again commented on by a Western contemporary as an injustice to such able officers as Captains the Hon. Foley Vereker and W. Osborne-Moore. The latter are respectively seven and six years junior in age to Sir William, but it would be great injustice to remove him from his present post at the age of fifty-seven because the regulations for retirement necessitated placing him on the non-effective list when he was only forty-eight. Had he preferred a command in the fleet instead of continuing in the scientific department, he could have remained on the active list for the next eight years. Having, in the interests of his profession and the world generally, sacrificed what is generally the great ambition of naval officers, it is only just that proper consideration should be accorded him.

Commodore E. S. Poë, commanding the Training Squadron, left Devonport on Tuesday last in the St. George, accompanied by the Minerva, for Lerwick and the east coast of Scotland, returning to Portland on the 13th prox., when he will be within a month of the expiration of the usual period in command. His successor will not be a flag officer, but we believe that Captain E. H. Gamble, of the Cæsar, is to relieve him.

Commodore R. L. Groome, commanding the South-East Coast of America Station, arrived at Montevideo on Saturday last in the Flora. He will be at Bahia on the 12th prox. to meet the Wye with supernumeraries and stores from home.

Captain Colin Keppel is to relieve Captain Charles Wyndham, of the Royal yacht Osborne, the latter officer having commanded her since October, 1896.

Captain Arthur C. Clarke, of the Undaunted, attained the age of fifty-two yesterday. Captain E. P. Jones, of the Forte, who recently distinguished himself in South Africa, was fifty on Tuesday last.

Captain George H. Cherry, of the Argonaut, left Colombo on Saturday last for China, and appears, up to the present, to have made the passage without trouble from the engines of that cruiser.

Captain the Hon. Arthur Hay-Drummond, who died at Mentone on January 28 last, left estate valued at £38,350, including £25,520 covered by life insurance policies.

Captain James Startin, of the Arethusa, made the passage from Vancouver Island to Yokohama, where he arrived on the 30th ult., in nineteen days, only two days more than the usual mail period. This is a creditable performance, considering that she is not of the modern type of cruisers.

Captain Alfred L. Winsloe, of the Niobe, stationed for some time past at St. Helena, is ordered to return to Devonport.

Captain Robert K. McAlpine, of the Cambrian, is to pay off that cruiser and commission the Hyacinth at Devonport in her place. The latter is a larger and more efficient vessel.

Captain G. R. Lindley has retired five years before the compulsory age. He was specially promoted captain, and granted C.B. while in command of the Blanche for his services at Vitu, East Africa, in 1893. Since then he has only served for a few months, 1896-97, in command of the Melpomene.

Captain W. Graham White, of the Northampton, left Plymouth on Tuesday last for Guernsey, where he remains a week, and returns on the 15th to Torbay. After remaining six days in port he proceeds to the coasts of Ireland and Scotland, and is due at Devonport on October 11.

Staff-Captain A. J. W. Neville, Queen's Harbour-Master at Pembroke Dock, is in indifferent health, and unlikely to return to his official duties. He heads the list of his rank, and is fifty-nine years of age.

Staff-Captain J. B. Johnson, Queen's Harbour-Master at Plymouth, reaches the age of sixty in November next, and will then be compulsorily retired.

Commander Sir Bouchier Wrey, Bart., of the Brisk, and Mr. Montagu B. Thorold, late Royal Navy, were elected members, and Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Fleet, Rear-Admiral R. N. Custance, Director of Naval Intelligence, Commanders Arthur Leveson, of the Canopus, and Godfrey Mundy, of the Duke of Wellington, honorary members of the Royal Yacht Squadron, at the meeting at the Castle, Cowes, on Monday last.

Commander Cecil S. Hickley, who was promoted from the Royal Yacht in August last, and now commands the Mermaid, has been selected to replace Commander David Beatty in the Barfleur, whose wounds in the recent fight at Tien-tsin have necessitated his return home.

Commander W. H. Nicholson, of the Cossack, in his recent stay in the Gulf of Oman, principally at Muscat, suffered severely, with several others serving under his command, from the excessive heat that prevailed this season in this usually warm portion of the East Indian station during the summer months.

Staff-Commander C. R. H. Robinson, of the Wye, left Plymouth on Wednesday last for Ascension and Bahia, calling at Sierra Leone to land military details. Bahia has been substituted for Rio de Janeiro on this voyage in consequence of sickness at the latter port. He is again due at Devonport on October 28.

Lieut.-Commander H. C. Carr, of the Sandpiper, while on patrol duty on the West River last week, received rather a warm reception from the natives at Sha-twan, thirty miles from Canton, who showered him with stones too large as well as numerous to be pleasant. He considered it politic to pass on without returning the compliment from his small armament, but it shows the extent to which piracy and anti-foreign feeling prevail in Southern China.

Sir Henry Norbury, Director-General of the Medical Department, inspected the medical establishments in the Western command during the current week.

Inspector-General of Hospitals Belgrave Ninnis (retired), who has largely contributed to professional literature, addressed the British Medical Association, at their annual meeting at Ipswich last week, on "The Treatment of Wounded at Sea." In regard to this important subject, he remarked that the more effective the modern fighting ship the less the accommodation for treating the sick and wounded. The naval surgeon worked under great disadvantages. There was a moving patient on a moving table, and a moving operator standing on a floor that changed its slope, together with other unpleasant drawbacks. Yet the naval medical officer did his work with zeal and ability, and was a man of resource, without the advantage of being able to obtain the opinion of a brother professional in the next street, or procuring special instruments from the maker. In future wars he would have the use of steam hospital ships for the reception of the wounded when the battle was over, and these vessels would be fitted with every modern appliance that surgical science had devised.

Staff-Surgeon C. Marsh-Beadnell, recently promoted for his good services with the Naval Brigade in South Africa, also presented a paper, at the meeting, on "Modern Small-bore Rifle Wounds." After his experiences at the action of Modder River, where he assisted his military brother officers, as well as on other occasions while under fire, the opinions he enunciates should be worthy of acceptance. Staff-Surgeon W. J. Colborne, of the Medical Director-General's Department, Admiralty, contributed a paper on "Infectious Diseases on Board Ship," a subject worthy of attention, considering the large crews carried by warships at the present time.

Surgeon Sydney Croneen, invalided from the Lizard shortly before she was ordered from Australia to China, arrived home on Saturday last in the Orient steamship Ophir.

Navy Foreign.

Admiral Pottier, who assumes command of the French naval forces in Chinese waters, has his flag in the Redoubtable, which left Cherbourg, accompanied by the Chasseloup Laubat, on August 1. Captain Philibert, who was chief of the admiral's staff in Crete, serves with him in the same capacity, and there is a Russian officer on board, Captain Elletz, who goes out as a guest to serve as A.D.C. to Admiral Alexieff. The flagship was fitted with the utmost haste, and, not being completed, a dozen civilian workmen were kept on board. The Guichen is now due at Taku, and the Pascal, after visiting Woon-sung, was lately at Shanghai. The Amiral Charner, Friant, and Viper have also arrived, and the Bugeaud and Decidée are due at Colombo. The gunboat Zélée left Rochefort on August 1, and the Alouette has been commissioned at Saigon. The transport Cachar passed Singapore some days since. The Minister of Marine has chartered several other vessels, and the Notre Dame de Salut has left Marseilles with three superior officers, thirty-eight other officers, twenty-eight non-commissioned officers, 400 men, 220 mules, and 500 tons of material. The Calédonien and Melbourne take out 2,000 men with provisions and war material, and the Matapan conveys troops, mules, and material. All three vessels leave this week, and the Alexandre III. will depart with 1,000 men and material in the course of a few days, to be followed by the Andes. The Adour has recently left Toulon with the personnel of the two batteries of artillery, as well as the guns and 300 mules. The Nive has been fitted as a hospital ship. Many naval officers have volunteered for service in China. The material for a Decauville railway is being sent out.

Before the French Mediterranean Squadron left Brest M. de Lannessan visited the port, and said some things worth noting. He told his hearers that the great review had been very useful as an object-lesson to the legislators, and that it had been something like a "resurrection of the much calumniated navy." It is ten years since the two fleets met, but he intends that the occurrence shall now be annual. It is the fixed intention of the Government to develop the navy—not only to fortify the coasts of France, Algeria and Tunis, but to increase the facilities for construction and repair at the ports, in particular at Brest, and to increase the number of vessels. Admiral Fournier, in a noteworthy address, thanked the Ministers for having selected Admiral Gervais for the chief command during the manoeuvres, and declared that all would be ready to encounter the enemy under his flag.

The new battleship laid down by the Russian Government at the Baltic yard, St. Petersburg, will bear the name of Kniaz Suworoff, in relation to the celebration of the centenary of the great soldier's death. She will be of the Borodino class, to which the Orel and Imperator Alexander III., both in hand, also belong, and will displace 13,600 tons. The ship will have a complete water-line belt, with a maximum thickness of 12in., and her armament will comprise four 12in. breechloaders and twelve 6in. and twenty 3in. quick-firers, as well as machine guns. Her two engines and twenty Belleville boilers will develop 16,300 horse-power. The battleship Kniaz Potemkine Tavrishesky (12,480 tons), which has been long in hand at Nicolaieff, will be launched in the autumn. Of the three sea-going torpedo boats Ossetr, Losos, and Kephala, building at La Seyne, one will also be launched in the autumn.

The protected cruiser, which has been built at Cadiz out of the subscriptions of Spanish residents in Mexico, has lately been launched, and has received the name of Estremadura. She displaces 2,030 tons, and is 290ft. long, with 36ft. beam, and 13ft. 11in. draught. Protection is given by a 2in. steel deck, and the armament will comprise four 5.5in. Hontoria quick-firers, eight smaller Krupp guns, and two machine guns. The engines are to develop 7,000 horse-power, and to give a speed of twenty knots.

A writer in the Yacht, making a comparison of naval ship types, as seen at the Paris Exhibition, and taking account of the recent constructions of England, Germany, Italy, and Russia, the United States and Japan, remarks that different nations, approaching the question from various points of view, have arrived practically at the same solution. In regard to protection, the type to which they approximate has armour at the water-line extending from the stem to a distance greater or less from the stern, with thinner armour for a space amidships rising above the belt. The heavy and secondary guns are protected in this way, and the chief difference is found in the varying thickness of the armour and in the extent to which the stern is left unprotected, while the extension of the thinner armour is a feature of the last ten years. During that time there has been rapid progress in the manufacture of steel for armour, until we have arrived at Harveyised and the hard steel of Krupp. The writer pursues his comparison in regard to guns, describes the progress made, and shows how different nations have approximated to the same calibre and distribution of guns. There is great truth in these remarks, and the general consensus of opinion would seem to show that the type arrived at is really a sound one, if it were not that we had seen similar approximations before to types now abandoned.

VOLUNTEER TRAINING.

The Emergency Training of the Volunteer Force may be said to have set in earnest on Saturday last, when brigade camps were formed in various parts of the country. The extent to which the Volunteers have responded to the call to arms is shown by the details of some of the encampments. No better evidence of the value of the force has yet been given, seeing that battalions of 500 men and upwards, some being 1,200 strong, have gone into camp for a full month's instruction under their own brigadiers—the officers for the most part who command the regimental districts to which the corps are attached.

At Perham Down, Salisbury, there arrived the Mersey Brigade, consisting of the 1st Liverpool (600 strong), 3rd Liverpool (450), 4th Liverpool (600), 5th Liverpool (450), and 6th Liverpool (400), bringing the total strength of the brigade up to 2,500, under command of Col. E. J. H. Spratt, 8th Regimental District. The brigade is to remain in training until Aug. 31. The other Volunteer brigade to arrive at Perham Down was the Staffordshire, consisting of the 1st South Stafford (800 strong), 2nd South Stafford (700), 3rd South Stafford (1,000), 1st North Stafford (1,200), and 2nd North Stafford (900), bringing the total strength of the brigade up to 4,600, under command of Col. H. D. Williams, 38th-64th Regimental Districts. This brigade will remain in camp until Aug. 31.

The Park House Camp was opened by the arrival there of the South Midland Brigade, composed of the 1st Leicestershire (950 strong), 2nd Leicestershire (950), 1st Worcestershire (950), 1st Royal Warwickshire (950), 2nd Royal Warwickshire (950), and 3rd Royal Warwickshire (750), the total strength being 5,500, under command of Col. L. V. Loyd. This brigade remains in training until Sept. 2.

In the camp at East Down, a short distance from West Down, the Severn Brigade has already been in training for the past three weeks. On Saturday the Western Counties Brigade marched in, consisting of 1st Somersetshire Light Infantry, the 2nd Gloucestershire, 2nd Worcestershire, 1st Wilts and 2nd Wilts Regiment, altogether about 4,000, under the command of Col. G. Boyle. With these arrivals the total number of troops now in training on Salisbury Plain was brought up to over 30,000.

The Northern Counties Brigade encamped on Bracken Moor musters close on 2,700, under the command of Col. M. S. Brownrigg, commanding the 30th Regimental District at Preston. The troops in camp are:—1st V.B. King's Own Lancaster Regiment (1,000), 1st V.B. Border Regiment (461), 2nd V.B. Border Regiment (565), and the 3rd V.B. Border Regiment (606).

The camp of the Artillery Volunteers on the School of Gunnery ground at Shoeburyness was vacated on Saturday morning by the greater portion of the 1st City of London Artillery, who proceeded to the forts at Tilbury, Cliffe, and Shornead to spend four days there under the mobilisation scheme. Their places, however, were quickly filled by the arrival, about 1,000 strong, of the 2nd V.B. Essex Regiment, who found accommodation in the barracks of the Royal Artillery, and of the 1st Essex Artillery, who went under canvas. A large body of the 1st City of London Artillery arrived from London on Saturday, and, after spending a night under canvas, followed their comrades to Tilbury.

It has been ascertained that up to the present time no fewer than 1,081 old Etonians are, or have been, engaged in the South African war.

A REGIMENTAL COMPASSIONATE FUND.

Col. Lees Knowles, M.P., 3rd V.B. Lancashire Fusiliers, writing from the House of Commons under date July 31, says:—

"I wish to call your attention to a scheme, started in Salford by the 3rd Volunteer Battalion of the Lancashire Fusiliers, which, I think, if taken up in a sympathetic and energetic manner will be great use to our territorial family and also of value as a precedent to other regiments. The officers of the 3rd Volunteer Battalion have raised a fund called 'The Lancashire Fusiliers' (Salford) Compassionate Fund,' and from that fund they have subscribed a sum of money as a foundation for a central fund, to be called 'The Lancashire Fusiliers, Compassionate Fund.' The central fund will be worked from the depot at Bury, and it is hoped that it will be maintained by all the battalions of the regiment and their friends. At the present time there are nine battalions—four Line, two Militia, and three Volunteer. Of these there are four battalions out of the country. Those that remain in the country are a newly-raised Line battalion, a Militia battalion, and three Volunteer battalions. I consider it to be the duty of the battalions at home to look after the interests of the battalions abroad, and if each of these nine battalions will raise, directly or indirectly, £100 per annum there will be for the central fund an annual income, for investment or distribution, of the useful sum of £900."

The following are the principal rules for the management of the Lancashire Fusiliers' Compassionate Fund:—

"The fund shall be under the management of an administrative body composed as follows, and herein-after referred to as 'the managers':—The Major of the Line battalion serving at the depot. The officer commanding each Line, Militia, and Volunteer battalion of the regiment, or an officer of such battalion appointed in writing by such officer commanding. The collection of the fund and the administration and distribution thereof shall be under the sole control of the managers. The managers shall meet at such places, and on such dates, and at such intervals, and shall make such regulations for such meetings, and as to the notice to be given, as they shall from time to time determine. A quorum shall consist of three managers, personally present, unless or until otherwise determined by the managers. The record of the proceedings of each meeting of managers shall be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, and the minutes of such meeting shall be read at the next meeting and authenticated. The managers may by resolution decide to allocate to the officer commanding any battalion of the regiment such sum or sums as they may think fit to be administered by such commanding officer at his own discretion."

THE SICK AND WOUNDED.

At a time when attention is being directed to the alleged failure of medical arrangements in South Africa it is interesting to note that in connection with the proceedings of the British Medical Association at Ipswich a section was set apart, for the first time, for the consideration of matters affecting the Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces, Among those who read papers were:—

Surg.-Capt. J. Cantlie, "How to Link the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteer Medical Services with the Royal Army Medical Corps."

Surg.-Major T. F. S. Caverill, on "Cavalry Ambulance Service."

Surg.-Capt. De Burgh Birch, on "The Organisation of the Medical Department of the Volunteer Forces."

Clinton Dent, F.R.C.S., on "Modern Small-bore Rifle Wounds."

Brig.-Surg.-Lieut.-Col. G. S. Elliston, on "Brigade Bearer Companies."

Surg.-Gen. J. B. Hamilton, R.A.M.C., on "The Past, Present, and Future of the R.A.M.C."

Surg.-Major C. A. Hutton, on "First Aid and Transport of Sick and Injured in Civil Life in Large Towns."

Major H. E. R. James, R.A.M.C., on "Camp Sanitation."

Surg.-Major Valentine Matthews, on "Cavalry Ambulance Service."

Surg.-Major de Zouche Marshall, on "First Aid in Civil Life."

Surg.-Capt. F. L. Stephenson, on "The Cycle in the Field for Medical Service."

Surg.-Lieut.-Col. G. S. Rankine, I.M.S., on "Cavalry Field Ambulance."

Surg.-Lieut.-Col. J. E. Squire, V.D., on "The Augmentation of the R.A.M.C. for War."

Lieut.-Col. C. J. Trimble, L.R.C.P., on "The St John Ambulance Brigade Organisation and Work."

Professor A. E. Wright, M.D., on "Anti-enteric Inoculation."

THE Commander-in-Chief in India has addressed the Lieutenant-Generals of Commands on the subject of improving the shooting in British regiments. It is suggested that the rounds of ammunition remaining over after completing the annual musketry course should be expended in a practical way, and it is hoped the instructions recently issued for the native army may serve as a useful guide in this matter. The object sought to be gained is to encourage the men to improve their shooting by more interesting and instructive practices than the ordinary annual course affords.

THE editor of the Nineteenth Century announces that his proposal to form an association to carry out "the lessons of the war" has met with such a response as to warrant the belief that the proposed association will very shortly be established. A public meeting is to be called after the holidays—probably in October—at which definite proposals will be submitted for adoption.

PICKERING'S BLANCO.

For whitening all articles of Buff or Buckskin Leather, such as Military Equipments, White Helmets, Gloves, Cricket and Tennis Shoes, Tennis Balls, Hunting Thongs, Whips, and a multitude of similar articles.

Removes stains and discolourations, and ensures evenness of colour and a soft, silky surface of glossy satiny appearance. Much better and more convenient than pipe-clay, as there is no trouble of preparation, and it is much cheaper in the end.

BLANCO is put up in cup-shaped blocks (registered design), and with the specially made non-corrosive zinc box, will be found the handiest article for the purposes named.

Sold at every Canteen, also by Ironmongers, Saddlers, &c.

3, THE HARD, PORTSEA, SILVERSMITHS & JEWELLERS TO THE QUEEN.

Regimental and Presentation Plate.
"Messrs. E. & E. Emanuel, 3, The Hard, Portsea, repaired the whole of the plate of the 2nd Bn.
the Wiltshire Regiment on return from India.
The work was done in a most satisfactory and artistic manner. The cost compared favourably with the estimates received from other firms."
P. M. C. 2nd Wiltshire Regiment, August, 1898.

Watch and Clock Makers.
"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch.
No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., E.N.

THE TRANSVAAL WAR.

THE desultory military operations in South Africa, still by courtesy styled war, have for some time been gradually locating themselves in the Western Transvaal. When De Wet, facile princeps in eluding pursuit and in escaping from tight corners, succeeded in crossing the Vaal, followed by Lord Kitchener and General Broadwood, hostilities may be said to have ceased in the Orange River Colony. One of the least satisfactory features of the war has been the inability of the British to afford adequate protection to burghers who, whether sincerely or otherwise, have surrendered and sworn to renounce hostilities. This consideration brings to the front once more the point, emphasised in these columns from the first, that the measures taken to repress acts of marauding and treachery, acts that violate the accepted canons of civilised warfare, have not been sufficiently severe. They have erred so much and so persistently on the side of leniency, due to misplaced generosity, and no doubt to a humane and chivalric spirit, that they have not only had no deterrent effect, but have served as a stimulus to the commission of the acts they were intended to repress. It is to the hardihood begotten of this mistaken policy that must be attributed the recent startling plot at Pretoria to carry off Lord Roberts, now being investigated by a Court Martial which assembled on Thursday. A la guerre, comme à la guerre is a blunt and well understood saying containing much truth, and we are disposed to think that, throughout this campaign, it has been forgotten to some extent that war is, of all human pursuits, the most serious, to be undertaken only as a stern necessity, and to be concluded as soon as possible; moreover, that it is neither a pleasure excursion on a large scale, nor a huge picnic.

It is satisfactory to know that, at last, Sir Redvers Buller is making real progress northward to co-operate with Lord Roberts's column moving eastward along the Delagoa Bay railway. When that sole-remaining artery of supply for the Boer forces has been seized the whole Transvaal territory will, it is hoped, be formally annexed, and a brief term fixed for the cessation of hostilities, after which all property of burghers still in arms in the field, or abetting the enemy, should be confiscated to the Crown. Unless some steps of this kind are taken the war may drag its weary length along for months to come. On the 8th inst. Sir Redvers Buller, moving north-east from the Natal railway at Paardekop, reached Amersfoort, driving Christian Botha from the hills in his front. He was north of Reitspruit next day on his way to Ermelo, which place was, on Saturday, entered by Dundonald's Cavalry, the main column coming in on Sunday. On Wednesday afternoon General Buller's troops camped at Komati River, five miles west of Carolina, and joined hands with General French, who had been moving south, the enemy retiring towards Machadodorp, as the British advanced. A telegram received yesterday afternoon from Reuter's correspondent states that General Buller was at Twyfelaar, and intended to remain there a few days in order to replenish his supplies. This northerly move by Buller is of immense importance, and it will now no doubt be pushed forward with vigour, until Barberton and Komati Poort have been occupied. The operation has already had the effect of causing the surrender of nearly 200 burghers of the Standerton commando unwilling to proceed farther north. It may also be expected to relieve the pressure on our forces in the Western Transvaal.

The most interesting and exciting incident since the surrender of Prinsloo has been the combined attempt to capture or crush De Wet. This commander is said to have some 3,500 burghers with ten guns and two hundred waggons, and his successful passage of the Vaal, while closely pressed in rear by Lord Kitchener and General Broadwood, and apparently headed in front by Lord Methuen and General Smith-Dorrien, was no mean achievement. On the 6th inst., leaving the hills between Reitzburg and Vredefort, he commenced crossing the river. Next day his advance guard came into contact with Lord Methuen on the further bank, while he covered the passage of his waggons. On the 8th Lord Kitchener was crossing with his mounted troops. It appears that Lord Methuen became heavily engaged and succeeded in driving the enemy off a succession of hills held with great obstinacy, the 2nd Batn. Royal Scots Fusiliers, and the 1st Batn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers "behaving splendidly." Lord Kitchener on the 9th engaged De Wet's rearguard near Lindique. Notwithstanding Lord Methuen's success the intrepid Boer leader kept steadily forging ahead, leaving Lord Methuen on his left rear, in touch with Lord Kitchener, who, on Saturday, occupied the Gatsrand range south of the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom line. Changing direction almost north De Wet next attempted to cross the railway at Wolverdien Station, and became engaged with General Smith-Dorrien, guarding the line. On Sunday Lord Methuen and Lord Kitchener were well on the west of the railway, and ten miles east of Ventersdorp, and on Monday they were still pursuing De Wet, who, it will be seen from the above, had got clear over the line, in spite of General Smith-Dorrien's efforts to arrest his advance. De Wet was, however, so hard pressed that he blew up three of his waggons to prevent their capture, and Lord Methuen is reported to have taken one of his guns. The situation of the Boer leader would appear to have been almost desperate, especially as General Ian Hamilton, moving south after the relief of Rustenburg, was expected to be at Blaauwbank Station, on his right flank, on Monday, with a strong mobile force. His front, however, was clear, and so he managed to make good his escape again. De Wet is only, they say, a butcher by trade, but he would appear to have thoroughly mastered the principles of warfare.

Armed burghers have again appeared in some force at Pyramids, eight miles north of Pretoria. Their scouts are nightly in touch with our outposts there, and to the east the sniping of trains bound for Middleburg continues. West of the capital the area of unrest is extending as far as Mafeking and Vryburg, while the intervening districts are held by raiding commandoes. So far, the situation is unsatisfactory, but the inconvenience, which is the result of recent operations, is temporary only. A short time back a great general movement carried a preponderating force far south into the Orange River Colony to crush Prinsloo. This force is now returning north like a receding tide to sweep away the remaining commandoes troubling the Western Transvaal, while the main columns under Lord Roberts and Sir Redvers Buller push steadily eastwards. Viewed therefore, from a military standpoint, all is proceeding systematically and successfully towards the termination of the war.

THE POSITION IN CHINA.

WHAT was so much dreaded has come to pass. While our Army is still operating in South Africa, 6,000 miles from its home base, British and Indian troops are marching on Peking to relieve the Legations of the Powers which have been for weeks past in desperate straits. Peking is but seventy miles from Tien-tsin, which is in the hands of the Allies, and only one hundred from Taku, where their formidable battleships ride at anchor in resistless strength. At a conference of the allied commanders at Tien-tsin on the 3rd inst. it was decided to advance and give battle on the 5th to the Chinese in position at Peitsang, seven miles to the north. The enemy's left, resting on flooded ground, was almost unassailable. The right rested apparently on the east bank of the Peiho River. At daylight on the 5th inst. the attack commenced, the Japanese, British, and American troops, some 10,000 strong, advancing by the west bank of the river, and the remainder of the allied forces, about 4,000 in number, attacking by the east bank. After a stubborn fight of four hours, in which the allied loss was over 400 killed and wounded, the Chinese were driven from their entrenchments, but saved their guns. According to the very brief and imperfect reports received of the action the British-Indian troops behaved admirably, especially the Bengal Lancers, and the Japanese artillery was remarkable for its accuracy and destructiveness.

This initial success was followed by the capture, after a hard-fought battle, of the strong position held by the Chinese at Yung-tsun, about twenty miles north of Tien-tsin, on the 6th inst. The assault of the position, which is reported to have been protected by seven lines of entrenchments, 200 yards apart, was gallantly led by the British and American contingents, which suffered between them a loss of 450 killed and wounded. The main attack was carried out from the left bank of the Peiho. A separate force, which attempted to attack by the right bank, was unable, owing to the bad state of the roads, to reach Yung-tsun in time to take part in the fight. The stubbornness of the defence is vouched for by the loss inflicted on the Allies by the Chinese, whose discomfiture and retreat are attributed by themselves to the effects of the British lyddite shells, experienced by them for the first time.

Surprise has been expressed that the advance has not been made from Shan-Kai-Kwan, a point on the coast about 140 miles north-east of Taku, the country lying between it and Peking being above the low levels of the Peiho valley, and free from the danger of flooding. The reasons may not be far to seek, however. The distance to be marched before reaching Peking is double that from Taku, and in the very doubtful state of preparedness of the Allies in the matter of transport, the Peiho River has become a valuable auxiliary for the forwarding of supplies. The progress of the force is being watched with the deepest interest. At the time we go to press there are rumours that the relief of the Legations was effected on Wednesday, but there is no official confirmation of the statements, though they seem to bear the impress of truth. The difficulties to be overcome have been serious, not the least being due to the absence of any officer of high standing and reputation in supreme command. Satisfaction appears to have been given, at least to the majority of the Powers, by the appointment of Count von Waldersee to the post of Commander-in-Chief of the allied forces. What may occur subsequently to the arrival of that distinguished officer at the front it is impossible to predict, but judging by the chaotic state of Chinese affairs we may be on the eve of military operations of considerable magnitude, even if the Allied forces have been successful in carrying out the trying duty entrusted to them, as the telegram from Berlin indicates.

NINETEEN commissions in the Army have been assigned to the public schools. Two of these have been allotted to Eton. The nominees will be treated like the other recipients of direct commissions, and will not be required to pass a competitive examination.

Army Notes.

The decision of the Government with regard to reserve stores is highly to be commended. In the ordinary estimates for the financial year £48,000 was voted for the building of storehouses and £10,000 as a first charge for the reserve of stores which the buildings are intended to accommodate. The scheme drawn up by Lord Lansdowne and his colleagues at the War Office has, however, now assumed a definite form. General Sir Henry Brackenbury, whose appointment as Director General of Ordnance has already produced such good results, has been devoting his energies to the formulation of a large scheme, whereby the Army will be rendered more or less ready for any emergencies. The idea is to have the reserve of stores so complete that in the event of war it will be unnecessary to put an excessive strain on the productive capacity of the Government workshops. It is felt that the latter arrangement is bad and ought not to be countenanced in a practical age. Therefore Parliament has been asked to vote, and we are glad to say has voted, a sum of £5,000,000 in order to supply the requirements of the Army. The expenditure is to be spread over a period of three years, and the steps for filling the storehouses have already been taken. Now we have a thoroughly sound measure for increasing the efficiency of our land forces. And it is well that it should be known to whom we are indebted for the initiation of the policy of real progress. The proposal came in the first instance from the military experts at the War Office, whom Lord Lansdowne is charged with never consulting and never listening to. We leave our readers to judge for themselves how far these charges are to be justified, for if there were foundation for them is it to be supposed that the War Minister would at a time like the present commit himself to a policy on their recommendation involving an expenditure of so large a sum of public money.

A distinguished soldier, who has given the question of Army administration much thought, has sent us for publication his views on the subject of a recent debate in the House of Lords. He says: "With regard to the question raised by Lord Rosebery in the House of Lords on the 3rd inst., will you allow me to say that, having studied the subject of Army administration in all its bearings for many years past, I see much danger in the proposal that the Commander-in-Chief should be placed in the position which Lord Rosebery and others would assign to him. To begin with, it is not every soldier who can speak with effect. Occasionally we may find one who can, but oratory is not a gift to which soldiers aspire, and it is doubtful whether good would result to the Army if matters were different in this respect. Then, again, it is to be questioned whether every soldier of high rank qualified for the position of Commander-in-Chief would care to accept office if he felt that it was expected of him that he would be required from time to time to attack the policy of the Government of the day from his seat in Parliament. I see so many, so very, very many, objections to the suggestion, if such it must be considered, of Lord Rosebery, that I trust no further attempt will be made to press the matter. At the same time I do think that the moment has arrived when something ought to be done to obtain from the Commander-in-Chief of the Army an open and unbiassed expression of opinion as to the condition of our land defences, and the steps which are necessary to be taken in order to remove the more pressing defects. Here I am entirely with those who favour the idea of an annual report; indeed, I do not see how the welfare of the country is to be properly safeguarded in these times without such report. It is not necessary that this report should be published annually, but it ought to exist, so that the public, by the voice of a majority in the House of Commons, might call for it if necessary. The report should be thoroughly independent, and in it should be indicated any measures that had been recommended for the improvement of system, arms, equipment, and, of course, for the augmentation of forces. Should any questions arise in either House on such a report it would be in the power of the Government to obtain from the Commander-in-Chief explanations, and, in the event of those not being deemed satisfactory, the Commander-in-Chief might then be expected to make a statement. This would be an arrangement which every business and thinking man would surely approve. The idea propounded by Lord Rosebery if carried into effect would be so dangerous that I venture to hope the last has been heard of it. Everyone will recognise the good intentions of the noble Earl and those who gave him support; but they are not soldiers. Had they been they would have seen how much there is to say against their arguments. The idea of the annual report is a practical one. There ought to be some official report, if only as a protection against the interference of the Treasury. Of course, what we hear may not be true, but it is currently reported that votes for armament and equipment sent from the War Office, on the recommendation of the military authorities, are frequently revised, and even "spoilt," by the officials of the Treasury, who can know nothing of the needs of the Army, and perhaps care less. If such a monstrous condition of things is allowed to exist at the end of the nineteenth century, all I can say is it is a national scandal of the very worst kind. I see that the Army League, an organisation which is calculated to do much good, favours a report of some kind. The League is in agreement with me as to the mischief done by the Treasury in periods of peace. If this power of the Treasury is such however as the League would have us believe is the case, our political system must be rotten to the core, for the Minister of War himself can be little better than a puppet in the hands of the officials of the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the time being. An annual report from the Commander-in-Chief would be a protection to the public. Therefore, I say the production of a report of the nature indicated is the reform above all others required as a first step in the direction of War Office reorganisation. The system of the War Office fails, it appears to me, because it cannot do anything else but fail, in view of the impossible position in which every officer of that department is placed, so long as public business between Pall Mall and Downing Street is conducted in a manner quite unworthy the first commercial country in the world."

The remarks of the Press on Lord Wolseley's outspoken criticism on the operations at Aldershot on Thursday are to us rather amusing reading. It would seem as though it had suddenly come as a revelation to some people that our system of training has for years past been bad. What Lord Wolseley said on Thursday we have been impressing upon our military authorities for years past. Our contention always has been that the first big war in which we became involved would show our Aldershot system of teaching to be absolutely false; that what our forces of all arms required was to be taught in a systematic way the first rudiments of brigade training before they were brought together to execute manoeuvres on a large scale. As a matter of fact the operations carried out at Aldershot on Thursday were no worse—in fact as a whole, a good deal better—than others which have been witnessed on the same field for years past. There was less hurry and less confusion; men were as well set up and officers as careful to correct mistakes; but the whole aspect of affairs has undergone change. The undisciplined farmers who have been for the last ten months resisting all the efforts of British generals to catch them napping, have taught us many valuable lessons, and it has at length come to be recognised that it is desirable to teach men to march straight and shoot straight before they are hustled about aimlessly, in order that senior officers may be afforded an opportunity of "slanging everybody all round" because things have gone wrong under a system which could produce no other result.

The correspondent of the Standard at Pretoria is very severe on the leniency which has prolonged the war in South Africa, and contrasts the admirable work done by Sir Archibald Hunter in the Transvaal with the sham pacification elsewhere apparent in the two Republics. Recognising that the mobility of the enemy is his strength, General Hunter has destroyed it by seizing every Scotch cart, Cape cart, horse, waggon, mule, or ox capable of service in the country through which he has marched. He has, moreover, refused to grant passes on the mere production of an antiquated flintlock or a disabled Remington. He insisted on the surrender of a Mauser, and in nearly all cases a Mauser was forthcoming. In this way he has effectually tied the burghers to their farms, and so baffled De Wet, to whom a Boer without arms and a horse is useless. Even more satisfactory is the fact that in the country he has thus pacified there have been no white flag incidents, no renewal of hostilities, and consequently no destruction of property. Had this sound policy been adopted from the day we entered the Orange River Colony the war would have been at an end three months ago. The Boer's most deadly weapon has been proved to be his mobility. Destroy it and he is helpless. Sir Archibald Hunter throughout the war has more than justified his reputation as a good fighting general.

The War Office has been called upon to adopt exceptional means for filling vacancies among the officers of the Army during the progress of the war in South Africa. The emergency, of course, was a pressing one, inasmuch as the Army has been undergoing the process of augmentation, in furtherance of the scheme approved by Parliament last year, at the same time that the operations in the field have not only created many extra death vacancies, but rendered necessary bringing units up to war strength. It was impossible in these circumstances to wait for candidates for commissions to undergo the ordinary or even a formal examination beyond that prescribed under the head of physical qualification. The War Office was called upon suddenly to provide over a thousand officers, in addition to the number which would under ordinary conditions have been needed to supply the regular gaps. It was left no alternative, therefore, but to tap new sources of supply. As a result of its action, commissions without examination have been awarded thus:—To the Royal Engineers, nil; Royal Artillery (Field and Garrison), 266; Cavalry, 139; Guards, 31; Infantry, 657—total, 1,093. Two commissions were offered to each battalion of Militia; the candidates were nominated by the commanding officers and recommended through the general officer commanding. In the Volunteers a certain number were offered to each district, nominations resting with the general officer commanding after full inquiry as to fitness. A certain number were offered to the universities, the nominations resting with the university authorities. Commissions were offered to various colonies, the nominations being placed in the hands of Governors in consultation with the Imperial officers commanding the colonial forces, every care being taken to obtain young men qualified by birth, education, and military qualification. Some were placed at the disposal of Lord Roberts. Promotions from the ranks to commissions were also made, some being recommended by Lord Roberts and others by commanding officers. It will have been noticed that in several instances a new departure has been the appointment of corporals, lance-corporals, and even privates, to 2nd Lieutenancies. Where these appointments have been made it has been on the special recommendation of some one in high authority who has satisfied himself that the interests of the Service were being fully guarded. Of course, it would never do to make the present arrangement permanent, but it must be admitted that at the end of last year the difficulties of the military authorities were great, and if there has been a rather too free application of the principle of nomination it must be recognised that the occasion demanded special measures in order that regimental duties might be properly discharged.

"The opening of private letters is an act hateful to the mind of every Englishman." The words are the words of the Prime Minister of Natal, and we very much question whether Sir Redvers Buller, to whom they were forwarded, would quarrel with Colonel Hime's dictum. Military officers have a good many unpleasant duties to perform when they are on active service, but we venture to assert that few go more against the grain than the necessity of tampering with private correspondence. In war, however, as Sir Redvers Buller points out in the correspondence issued in the form of a Parliamentary paper this week, all sorts of things have to be done that one deplures, and it is only to be regretted if civilians sometimes lose sight of this cardinal fact. It is not at all surprising that there should have been a sharp outburst of indignation in Natal when Sir Redvers Buller deemed it expedient to establish a censorship over private correspondence. Such censorship may always involve the violation of the most sacred confidences. That a known loyalist and tried Government servant like Mr. P. Paterson should have his letters stopped did seem on the face of it to almost justify Colonel Hime in saying that the censorship was being carried out in a manner "unnecessarily rigorous and inquisitorial." Only one thing can be done to lessen the objections to what is admittedly an objectionable necessity. Those whose duty it is to open correspondence should be selected with the utmost care. There is nothing to show that this care was not exercised in the case of the Natal correspondence. There is a natural objection to the opening of private letters, but as Sir Redvers Buller dryly puts it, there is on the part of a general officer commanding a natural repugnance also to having his plans disclosed or his men killed because otherwise estimable people like to write the latest news to their friends. "I have succeeded on two or three occasions lately," General Buller writes in conclusion, "in surprising the enemy, and on as many occasions the enemy has become aware of my intentions. I have surprised him when I have exercised a censorship over private letters." This is unanswerable, and it is borne out by the fact that the time when complaints of the severity of the censorship became heard was the time when Sir Redvers made his last and successful effort to relieve Ladysmith.

In every war words are coined or come into use in connection with affairs with which the ordinary meaning of them has no relation. Thus in the Crimea "shaves" meant camp stories, or reports which were not absolutely to be depended on, and in the Boer War "sniping" appears in the letters and despatches of press correspondents to be applied to the practice of firing on sentries or outposts by the enemy's marksmen—an unsoldierly, villainous practice not sanctioned in civilised warfare. "Sniping" is a very inappropriate word. A snipe-shooter tramps over the bog or through the marsh, alert and quick, and ready to fire as the bird rises with its frightened cry to begin the corkscrew course, which should be brought to a close at thirty-five or forty yards. There is nothing stealthy or secret in the sport, no hiding, no waiting and watching for a victim, nothing sniping about it. In a letter from an officer, R.E., respecting a binocular case found lately on Majuba Hill occurred a word very common, and unfortunately very often used, in Natal—"jumped"—that is, "stolen." Mr. Archibald Forbes excited the anger of the colonists to an abusive crusade against him by the Natal journals on account of some criticism of the prevalent disregard of the difference between meum and tuum in personal property, and between truth and falsehood in the circulation of news, but in his time certainly there was good ground for the charge, and to "jump," "jumping," "jumped," &c., were Natalese for "steal," "stealing" and "stolen"—in the colony and in the camp. We doubt very much if it was a Boer who wrote "No — oof here" on an empty safe in a Dutch house the other day.

The Shah, who is mechanical rather than military in his tactics, was, however, very much struck, it is said, with the new French field guns at the Vincennes Review the other day, when they fired ten rounds in two minutes with smokeless powder, and then gave an exhibition of the utmost rapidity that could be obtained out of the old armament with black powder—viz., four rounds in the same time.

The Madrid correspondent of the Morning Post informs our contemporary that the Imparcial has received a letter from Machadodorp, furnishing some interesting information respecting the forces in the field against us in the Transvaal at the end of May last. He states that up to that date there were 1,800 deaths and 8,000 sick and wounded, of which one-half had returned to duty, while about 5,000 more had been made prisoners. About 6,000 more had given up their arms. Speaking roundly the losses were 17,000 men, but with new recruits and restored invalids the Boers reckoned in June 28,000 to 30,000 combatants; 9,000 in the Orange River Colony, 4,000 with Christian Botha from Standerton to Vryheid, 4,000 more with Delarey in the Rustenburg district and the West Transvaal, and 11,000 with Louis Botha to the north of Pretoria. Since June 28 there have been large reductions in these numbers, Louis Botha has less than half the strength reported, and there are not 4,000 Boers afoot in the Orange River Colony, but there are enough to be troublesome.

There was a passage in the Kaiser's speech the other day which should be classed, it seems, among the things that speakers would rather not have said. Whatever Midshipman Seymour learned at the attack on the Taku forts forty years ago could not have been of much service to Admiral Seymour when he started on his forlorn hope with 2,000 men to deliver the Legations.

As in South Africa so in China the Empire is presenting a united front to the world. It was not, as our enemies said, an outburst of passionate feeling which led India, the Dominion, and Australasia to aid the Mother country and one of her daughter States in their struggle against the Boers, but the soundest political instinct guided by sentiment. Of this there can be no doubt, for on the heels of the South African War comes the China War, and the spirit of India and the Colonies responds to the new demand as eagerly as it responded to the old. Already an Indian contingent is at the front, and another is about to start, while the offer of Imperial Service troops has been accepted. It is no secret that Imperial Service troops were most anxious to serve the Queen in South Africa. Now that their chance has come in China they will, no doubt, make the most of it, as becomes men who have all their laurels to win. They are well equipped, thoroughly trained by British officers, and recruited from some of the finest fighting races in India. Hence they should give a good account of themselves in the Flowery Kingdom as their countrymen did in 1842. The Colonial contingent to be despatched from Australia consists of 200 officers and men from Victoria, 300 officers and men from New South Wales, and the Protector, gunboat, with a crew of 112 men, from South Australia. They can be employed either on shore or afloat.

It would seem that the King's Royal Rifles share, to some extent, with the Royal Dublin Fusiliers the honours of Zuikerbosch Spruit. The special correspondent of the Times states that when General Clery arrived there he found that the success of the Royal Dublins was largely due to the excellence of the entrenchments previously made by the Rifles, which enabled them to repel a heavy shell fire for six hours. The site of the fort was well chosen, being a small kopje overlooking the river and commanding the country all round. The Boers were 1,000 strong, but the Royal Dublins and a few sappers kept them at bay, and succeeded in driving them out of rifle range. This quite bears out what Sir Howard Vincent and others have said, as the result of personal observation, that many, if not most, of the disasters which our troops have suffered in South Africa have been due to the want of appreciation on our part of the value of entrenchments under certain conditions. The officers of the Royal Engineers have been for years past trying to impress upon us the importance of teaching our men to construct "hasty entrenchments," but we have obstinately refused to regard the question seriously.

The Commander-in-Chief in India has passed some severe strictures on the unsatisfactory condition of signalling in the native army, due, correspondents tell us, to the small number of European officers with regiments, which renders it impossible at times to obtain the services of specialists. The official notice which the subject has received is certainly called for by the results. The Indian army is not as efficient in this department as it ought to be. The defect is greater in the cavalry than in the infantry regiments, as out of forty regiments examined only fifteen were regarded as efficient, the remainder either lacking knowledge or not possessing a sufficient number of men. Last year seventy-nine infantry corps obtained a "satisfactory" figure of merit, but only seventy-two qualified this year. There are only two cavalry and six infantry regiments specially commended. The last annual inspection showed that many corps were without complete equipment, without a sufficient number of signallers, and some even minus a qualified instructing officer. It is not strange that under these circumstances a retrograde movement took place. The necessity of signalling efficiency in the cavalry, it is pointed out, is greater than in any other branch of the Service. It is not generally known, writes Sir Power Palmer, "that the loss of the heliographic apparatus was in some respects responsible for the disaster to Colonel Carleton's column at Nicholson's Nek, shortly before the siege of Ladysmith. The only apparatus with the column was lost in the stampede of the battery mules. Thus, when the column was called up by helio from Surprise Hill and ordered 'to retire on Ladysmith as opportunity might offer,' the commanding officer was unable to reply or to inform headquarters of the exact nature of the desperate strait to which the column was reduced." The regiments which the Commander-in-Chief in India specially commends for general efficiency in signalling are:—11th Bengal Lancers, 4th Hyderabad Lancers, 15th Sikhs, 38th Dogras, 24th Punjab Infantry, 4th Madras Pioneers, and 25th Madras Infantry.

Our attention has been called by a correspondent to a statement of a very reprehensible character which the editor must have overlooked made by an anonymous writer in the August number of the United Service Magazine, in an article on "Our Army," signed "Rex." The writer describes "the average boy of the present day from one of our ordinary English homes, who has been educated at an up-to-date public school, pampered, petted, over-fed and over-clothed to such an extent that he is unable to stand any fatigue or exposure;" he is prepared for the Army at a school "where the molly-coddling home system is carried on, and he has a nice soft spring bed in a nice little room to himself and gets jam and cake for tea," and is "liable to become degraded in mind and body unless he is the possessor of a very strong moral character and very high principles." Here our quotation ceases. The charge "that crimes exist in two at least of our large public schools which would be impossible in houses where the boys sleep in open dormitories," in an article of the kind, is as gross as it is, we believe, entirely false.

The work which is being done in Ashanti is very creditable to Sir James Willcocks and his able second in command, Lieut.-Colonel Burroughs. According to a despatch from Colonel Willcocks, the latter officer has added to his previous record by reinforcing and revictualling Kumasi for two months. It appears that a column under his command started on the 4th inst., and returned to Bekwai on the 9th. The enemy fought desperately. Three stockades had been erected in order to prevent the advance of our forces, and these were so stoutly defended that Colonel Burroughs was obliged to take them by assault. On the 7th inst. he found himself in close proximity to a war camp one mile from Kumasi. This he captured by a night attack, in which the black troops under his command displayed great gallantry. Sir James Willcocks in his despatch, in which he relates these facts, says:—"Colonel Burroughs has already more than once done very good work. I desire to bring his services to official notice." When it is considered how enormous the difficulties of the country are in which Colonels Willcocks and Burroughs have been operating, and that they have relied entirely upon native troops, too much credit cannot be given them for their excellent performance, which has tested their qualities as leaders in the field to the utmost. As proof of the rough and arduous work which the Expedition has performed, it may be mentioned that out of 3,000 troops in the field the casualties up to the present time have amounted to nearly 25 per cent. of the whole force—viz., 105 killed, 39 missing, and 680 wounded. This speaks for itself.

The Exportation of Arms Bill was a much needed measure. In future, by means of a simple proclamation, it will be possible to check the exportation of munitions of war from England or any British dependency to any country or place named. Thus, if at any time our relations are strained with any country, and there is a danger of arms and ammunition being exported from British territory and used against us or against any forces engaged in naval and military operations in co-operation with British troops, all that would be necessary to prevent such a contingency would be a proclamation prohibiting the exportation to the country in question of arms, ammunition, and military stores of all kinds. The measure also includes the exportation of coal, which seems to be going out of this country in such huge quantities that we do not appear to have sufficient left for our own use.

The success of the Boers in the earlier stages of the war is likely, unless we are careful, to lead us into some difficulties, not to say dangers. These Dutch farmers have undoubtedly taught us some lessons which may be profitable, but it is to be hoped that we may not be carried to extremes in our admiration of their qualities in the direction of field fortification. It has been suggested that their "system" presents an ideal for our Volunteers. No views could be more unsound, as every soldier knows. The main-spring of a force like the Volunteers is discipline. After forty years that has been produced to an extent which has astonished the world. No one could pretend to think, great as their merits in some respects have been, that the Boers have been a disciplined army. They have fought well on many occasions behind earthworks, and they are adepts in the art of running away, but never once have they stood their ground in the open under fire as our men have. And why? Because the absence of discipline made the thing impossible. To inculcate, therefore, into the Volunteer force the notion that they should adopt Boer tactics would be highly dangerous. We quite agree with Colonel Lord Ebrington, Royal North Devon Hussars, who writes to the Spectator to protest against this, the idea propounded, we are sorry to say, by our much respected contemporary, that salvation for this country under the head of defence is to be found in unwieldy multitudes of semi-efficient, semi-disciplined men. Lord Ebrington's words are so thoroughly sensible that we quote them as they stand:—"The more you have of them [half-disciplined men] the more difficult it will be to find a sufficiency of officers fit to make use of them. 'Stupidity' among the officers is the way in which we account for our disasters, and it seems more than probable that the Boers may truly ascribe theirs to the same fault—i.e., want of training among their leaders—the responsibility in each case lying not with the officers but with the State they serve. I believe that the Volunteers of all descriptions would be a much greater source of strength to the country if they were half as numerous but twice as well trained." Which is exactly what we have said many times. We pointed out a month ago the undesirability of raising the numbers of the Volunteer force unduly until at least there is a fair prospect of its being organised on something like sound lines. What is to happen when the force takes the field? Brave and full of enthusiasm though the men might be, they would soon become a disorganised rabble for want of proper administrative departments. And it would be the same with the Militia, it is to be feared. As Lord Ebrington says truly:—"The Boer generals never attempted a counterstroke to convert our repulses into routs, and they failed dismally and discreditably, though aided by famine and by pestilence, by superior artillery and by superior numbers, to capture either Ladysmith, Kimberley, or Mafeking." Yet these are the men the Volunteers are told they should copy. Such ill-considered advice might be so damaging to the interests of the nation that we trust it will not be taken seriously.

Twice in the last week the announcement has appeared in the London Gazette that young 2nd Lieutenants in the Royal Field Artillery have been "removed from the Army, Her Majesty having no further occasion for their services." Now, as announcements of this kind reflect in a measure on the character of a distinguished regiment, its officers are naturally much incensed, and there certainly is good reason for their feelings of annoyance. What makes the matter the more disappointing is the fact that both officers were gazetted to their 2nd Lieutenancies as recently as May 5, and both were appointed from Captaincies in the Militia Artillery. The question arises, by whom were they recommended for appointment to the Royal Artillery? Had they come from the ranks of a Colonial corps there might have been excuse for their summary removal; but it is expected that an officer who has qualified for his company in the Militia will at least have his appointment cancelled and be gazetted out of his own regiment if there is anything against him, for it is clearly the fault of the Militia commanding officer if he is not a fit and proper person to hold Her Majesty's Commission. To transfer him to the Royal Artillery, and then two months afterwards dispense with his services, does appear a very objectionable proceeding, against which the officers of the Royal Regiment very reasonably protest, creating, as it may do, a false impression. Several correspondents have written to us begging that we will represent the mischief which such proceedings will do to the Service at large. We cordially endorse their views and trust that the point raised may receive the early attention of the War Office.

THE Secretary of State for War has directed that the schedules of Militia officers liable to compulsory retirement by age, under paragraphs 82 and 83, Militia Regulations shall be rendered this year by the general officer commanding the district in which the Militia unit is actually serving on Sept. 1 next, and not, as in ordinary years, by the general officer commanding the district to which the unit belongs.

THE three Lords Lieutenant of Yorkshire (Lords Ripon, Herries, and Harewood) intimate in a circular that it is proposed to erect in proximity to York Minster a monument to the memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Yorkshire regiments and of all Yorkshiremen in her Majesty's service who have lost their lives during the war in South Africa. Subscriptions of £10 and under are invited. The leading men of the county are joining in the movement, including the Archbishop of York, the chairmen of county councils, county magistrates, and mayors of boroughs.

THE DISPOSAL OF COLONIALS.—The Secretary for War has approved of arrangements for the disposal of members of the Colonial forces who have been invalided to England, regarding it as most desirable that those men whom it is not intended to send back to their corps in South Africa should be sent to their homes with the least possible delay. Men medically unfit for further service may be discharged, their cases remaining for consideration as regards pension. Men not medically unfit for further service, but who wish to be discharged, may be released from service at once, and those who have over five months still to serve, who are fit for service and do not wish to be discharged, will be allowed to rejoin their corps in South Africa. Those taking their discharge will be given free passage to the colonies from which they came. A gratuity of £5 will be paid to each man entitled thereto under Army Order 150 of this year, and note will be taken of each man's future address to ensure payment of any general war gratuity or issue of medal which may hereafter be awarded.

HEALTH IN THE BATTLEFIELD IS KEPT AND RESTORED BY HOFF'S FLUID MALT EXTRACT.—Dr. ROBICEK, Imp. General Major, Physician of the AUSTRIAN Army, writes:—"JOHANN HOFF'S MALT EXTRACT has been of great service to us in convalescence from intermittent fever, when our soldiers suffered from that malady and from weakness. The RUSSIAN Military Hospital reports:—We had very many cases of Amputation, in all of which the Tonic and refreshing qualities of HOFF'S MALT proved very serviceable. Signed, Dr. BARING, Physician. Send this MALT to your Friends in the field, who will appreciate it. M. HOFF, HAMBURG, must be on all labels, London House: 29, NEW BRIDGE STREET, &c."

THE RELIEF OF KUMASI.

A flying column, commanded by Lieut.-Colonel Burroughs, and composed of the companies of Capts. Margisson, Loch, and Merrick, and Lieut. Shortland, 63 Sikhs, two companies of the Central African Regiment under Major Cobbe, and three guns under Major Montanaro, R.A., conveying supplies for Kumasi, left Bekwai on the 4th inst., and arrived on the 5th. The garrison was found fit and cheerful.

On the 6th two columns, each of 300 strong, with one 75-millimetre gun, Major Melliss and Major Cobbe commanding, attacked two strong stockades near the fort. The stockade was rushed. After severe fighting the stockade and camp were taken and burnt. Major Cobbe was severely wounded. We had three killed and 39 wounded.

The column—Lieut.-Colonel Burroughs commanding, with Major Montanaro and Capt. Haslewood as members of the staff—made a night attack on the 7th. Enemy surprised, and stockade and camp were burnt. Lieut. Greer, of the West India Regiment, was killed. The column returned by the main road. Bekwai was reached on the 9th.

THE NATIONAL BAZAAR.

The total sum realised at the National Bazaar in aid of Military Charities held at the Royal Palace Hotel, Kensington, was close on £25,000. Of this amount £19,750 has been voted by the committee to charities which are helpful to the Services thus:—

Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society (H.R.H. Princess Christian)	£5,000
Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, Ireland (H. E. Countess Cadogan)	2,500
Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association (Capt. G. E. W. Legge)	5,000
Daily Telegraph War Fund (Lady Faudel Phillips)	1,000
Daily Mail War Fund (A. Harmsworth)	1,000
Dr. Barnardo's Homes	1,000
Lloyd's Patriotic Fund (J. C. Adams)	1,000
Madeira Hospital, Matjesfontein (Lady Layard)	250
Lady Mayoress of Belfast Fund (Lady Jaffé)	500
Officers' Families Fund (Marchioness of Lansdowne)	2,500
Total	£19,750

There is a balance of some £5,000 still to come in, but the amount cannot be estimated accurately. It is proposed, however, that it should be devoted to the Colonial contingent pro rata according to the number of troops furnished by each colony. Lord Arthur Hill, chairman of the general committee, and the ladies and gentlemen who assisted in organising the bazaar and carrying it to a success, are certainly deserving of all praise.

AN EXPLANATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As reference is made in the Press to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, I think I shall best describe the connection between the two by the following extract from the report of the council of this association for last year:—

"A working alliance was in the course of the year arranged between the association and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, with a view to join together into one working organisation throughout the Kingdom the large number of ladies and gentlemen voluntarily giving their services for the objects of the two societies, but heretofore working independently. A special point in the arrangement was that it was not to be considered in any way obligatory for the office-bearers of either society to undertake the duties of the other, and that the finances of both were to be kept quite separate and distinct; the funds of the Association not being available for men, nor the funds of the Society available for women. When taking this step the council had chiefly in view the object, long desired by many interested in all naval and military works of this nature, of trying to draw into closer co-operation the different agencies established for the benefit of all connected with the Services."

I may add that the working alliance referred to was made in connection with the original scope of the work of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society—viz., in looking to the interests of soldiers and sailors on discharge; that it has no connection with the scheme of convalescent homes at Bisley or elsewhere, nor with the proposed extension of the objects of the society referred to as having been formulated in November last.

Army Personal.

The Duke of Connaught inspected on Tuesday the Militia Brigade at Kilworth Camp, Fermoy, under Brigadier-General Cutbill. This brigade recently volunteered in a body for service in China.

Prince Arthur of Connaught entered the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, at the end of the summer term on Tuesday. His Royal Highness will reside in the college and pursue the usual course of studies.

Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein paid a visit to the Royal Victoria Hospital, Netley, on Tuesday, for the purpose of seeing the sick and wounded from the front. She was accompanied by Princess Henry of Battenberg and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein. Landing at the pier in front of the hospital, the Princesses were received by Colonel Creagh, A.A.G., and Lieut.-Colonel Webb, Acting P.M.O., and walked to the Queen's entrance to the hospital, where they were met by the lady superintendent, Miss Norman. The visit was private, and was made on behalf of the Queen, whose recent bereavement prevented her from carrying out her expressed intention of again seeing "her brave and faithful soldiers." The Princesses personally saw no less than 876 cases, their visit lasting fully two hours. Before leaving, Princess Christian expressed her satisfaction with all she had seen and the manner in which the soldiers were looked after.

Lord Wolesley was present at Aldershot at the operations on Thursday, in which ten brigades of infantry, four batteries of artillery, and four regiments of cavalry were engaged. The Commander-in-Chief, at the conclusion of the operations, had a good deal to say to the commanding officers:—

"He had refrained," he told them, "from coming down before to give the Aldershot commanders plenty of time to get their men into shape. Yet it was plain from what he saw that the army there was totally unfitted, by reason of insufficient teaching, to take the field. That they must learn to walk before they could run was very evident, and so for the present no more field days would be held, but individual battalion commanders must devote all their attention to teaching their men the primary lessons of their calling—company work and battalion work. Nothing larger than brigade movements should be attempted until the men had had a thorough teaching. He was glad to see that more attention was being paid to musketry. He did not wish to be too critical, as they had to contend with many difficulties by reason of the numerous changes, and he thought that General Montgomery Moore and his staff were doing their best, but he must impress on all battalion commanders that they could not go down too low in the scale of instruction in getting their men thoroughly trained to take the field. They must properly instruct their captains, and the captains must instruct the men to make the early training of the soldier successful."

Writing from Pretoria on Wednesday, Renter's correspondent said:—

"This week's mail from England has brought unaccountable rumours about Lord Roberts's health. These rumours are set forth as having been communicated in private despatches to the War Office. It is represented that the Field-Marshal has been confined to his bed for ten days, having been incapacitated from the effects of an operation which was consequent on his taking long rides. All these stories are absolutely unfounded. Lord Roberts has not been confined to bed one whole day since his arrival in South Africa, and he has never undergone an operation in his life. He is in perfect health and vigour, and when not hard at work at headquarters he is mostly in the saddle."

The remains of the late Lieut.-General Sir William Drysdale, K.C.B., Colonel of the 9th Lancers, were laid to rest at Kensal Green on Saturday last, many old comrades attending to pay the last tribute of respect to a gallant soldier and high-minded gentleman, who was beloved by his regiment and respected by all who knew him for his sterling qualities. With the death of General Drysdale, Colonel H. Marshall becomes the oldest surviving officer of the regiment, but, having been run out for age in 1889 without obtaining the rank of Major-General, is ineligible for the colonelcy, much as he doubtless would appreciate being selected for the position. A correspondent writes:—"I see it stated that Lieut.-General Sir A. Elliot, Colonel of the Carabiniers, may be transferred to the 9th Lancers. I can only say that a cruel injustice will be done to Major-General Bushman if this idea is carried out. General Elliot only served in the regiment for the briefest period, whereas General Bushman was for years associated with it, and commanded it in all the battles round Kabul and in the march from Kabul to Kandahar and the battle of September 1. To pass over General Bushman now would be an insult to all those who served under him in the Afghan campaign. If our dear old chief, Colonel Marshall, is disqualified, his next senior ought, in the opinion of every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man, to be considered to possess first claim."

Lieut.-General Sir George Luck does not let the grass grow under his feet in Bengal. His latest order is on the subject of the reports on long reconnaissance practice performed during the cold weather. These show, he says, a want of appreciation on the part of those responsible for the objects of this important branch of training and of the intention with which it is ordered. He goes on to explain his ideas at some length. His views are so valuable that we give an extract for the benefit of cavalry officers at home:—

"These practices have been introduced into the training of the cavalry in view of teaching as many non-commissioned officers and men as possible the method of scouting a country, and how to transmit information latterly and to the rear, with rapidity and without losing their way. The attention of general officers commanding districts and officers commanding regiments is called to Section 2, Part IV., Cavalry Drill, 1898, and to G. O. C. 354 of 1900. It is observed in one instance that only one squadron of a regiment carried on reconnaissance duties, the remaining squadrons marching in concentrated formation. In future every squadron of a regiment, or in a brigade, if it consists of not more than two regiments, will, for the purposes of practice, be employed as advanced squadrons, the rear lines being marked by a few mounted men. These squadrons, if necessary, will camp or bivouac on their own ground. General officers commanding will carefully consider the schemes proposed before sanctioning them, and will invariably make their remarks on submitting the reports and sketches to command headquarters."

Major-General J. B. B. Dickson, C.B., commanding the 4th Cavalry Brigade in South Africa, has been highly complimented for the manner in which his brigade has invariably conducted itself under fire. An officer of the brigade tells us that at Kameel Drift, near Pretoria, on June 20, Lieut.-General French assembled the brigade and addressed it in these terms:—

"Gen. Dickson and Officers of the 4th Cavalry Brigade.—I have sent for you this evening in order to be able to personally convey to you my very high appreciation and admiration of the manner in which you occupied and held a ridge for over 48 hours under a very heavy fire. We came more or less unexpectedly under the fire under circumstances which might have, I will not say justified, but I will say excused, a retirement to the pass; but under this fire the hill was taken and the position occupied by the troops, and was such as to reflect the credit, of course first on Gen. Dickson for his dispositions, but also on all commanding officers and squadron commanders for the skilful manner in which these dispositions were carried out. These troops remained there for over 48 hours under a fire which must have been trying to the nerves of both officers and men. The hill was the key of the position, and its occupation a matter of great importance. I can also bear testimony to the very excellent work done by O Battery Royal Horse Artillery, under Major J. Jervis. It is by no means the first time during the campaign that I have had to speak of the gallantry and coolness of this battery under fire, and I am sure its behaviour the other day won the admiration of the whole brigade. There is one other incident I wish to mention, which the busy time we have had lately has alone prevented my doing before. This was on May 29, outside Johannesburg, when a most important kopje was most gallantly taken by some squadrons of the brigade. I have no doubt all did well, but I specially noticed myself the 7th Dragoon Guards, under Col. Lowe. The occupation of the kopje enabled Gen. Hamilton to bring his division and pivot on it, and practically insured the success of the day's operations. I should like my remarks conveyed to all the men in your squadrons. I shall, of course, take the earliest opportunity of repeating to the Field Marshal what I have told you."

Major-General T. B. Tyler, R.A., has been appointed chairman of a committee, which is to assemble at Simla in October, to consider the question of horse-breeding in India with reference to military remounts. Among the members will be Major-General E. L. Elliot, C.B., Inspector-General of Cavalry; Colonel H. Goad, Director, Army Remount Department; Colonel A. E. Queripel, Inspector-General, Civil Veterinary Department; a Revenue officer and two officers from England. Some practical good should result from the committee's deliberations, particularly as it will visit the horse fairs and remount depots after settling the preliminaries in Simla. This question has been attracting much attention lately, and the result of the Committee's deliberations will be awaited with much interest.

Major-General (local Lient-General) J. D. P. French, who was promoted in February last for distinguished service in the field, will be brought on to the establishment of general officers in the vacancy created by the retirement of Major-General H. A. Bushman, C.B.

The death of Major-General C. E. Oldershaw, C.B., R.A., leaves a Distinguished Service Reward vacant.

The Law Times has been making out that Major-General Sir Alfred Gaselee, commanding the British expedition in China, is descended from Sir Stephen Gaselee, a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and son of Mr. Serjeant Gaselee. Mr. Walter Mant, of Eastbourne, writing on the subject, says:—"Mr. Serjeant Gaselee had no family. My cousin, Sir Alfred Gaselee, is the grandson of Mr. John Gaselee, F.R.C.S., and a son of the Rev. John Gaselee, for many years rector of Little Yeldham, Essex. Sir Stephen Gaselee was the brother of his grandfather, and Sergeant Gaselee, was, therefore, his father's first cousin."

Brigadier-General E. J. Lugard, late King's Own Regiment, will complete on Monday his five years in command of a second-class district in India, and will proceed to England, being succeeded by Brigadier-General H. B. MacCall, C.B., late King's Royal Rifles, from D.A.G. Punjab.

Colonel J. W. A. Marshall, 1st Batn. West India Regiment, commands the forces in Bermuda pending the arrival of the successor to General Sir George Barker, the retiring Governor, but will shortly join the 2nd Batn. on selection for the command.

Colonel W. V. Ellis, I.S.C., attains on Saturday next the limit of age, and will be placed on the retired list.

Colonel W. J. Vousden, V.C., C.B., I.S.C., has been selected for the command of the Malakand Force, with the rank of Brigadier-General, vice Brigadier-General A. J. F. Reid, C.B., proceeding on active service to China.

Surgeon-Colonel F. H. Welch, retired list, A.M.S., has been selected for special duty in London in connection with the proposed formation of a base hospital for the London defence scheme.

Lieut.-Colonel M. O. Hopkins, R.G.A., has taken over command of the Militia and Volunteer Artillery, Cardiff Sub-District.

Lieut.-Colonel C. A. P. Burroughs, West African Regiment, who has so much distinguished himself by his operations for the reinforcement and revictualling of Kumasi, brings to notice the names of Majors C. J. Mellis, I.S.C., and A. S. Cobbe, I.S.C., commanding British Central African Regiment; Captains G. C. Merrick, R.A.; E. C. Margesson, South Wales Borderers; and G. Loch, Loyal North Lancashire Regiment; and Colour-Sergeant Foster, 2nd Batn. Devonshire Regiment, all of whom particularly distinguished themselves, and are held to be deserving of recognition.

Lieut.-Colonel R. C. Cockayne-Frith, Commandant of the Cavalry Depot, was, by last accounts, making slight improvement. His condition, however, was viewed rather seriously, though his splendid constitution was greatly in his favour.

Major G. A. Gott, I.S.C., has been appointed to the command of the 7th Bombay Lancers, with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel in the Army.

Major H. E. F. Goold-Adams, R.G.A., and Captains W. D. McSwiney, 7th Dragoon Guards, and W. A. Harrison, R.E., having been selected for special service in China, left England yesterday to take up their duties.

The August "Army List" shows Brevet-Major the Hon. A. H. O. Hanbury-Tracy, Royal Horse Guards, to be on service in the British East Africa Protectorate. This is clearly an error, as he is actively employed in South Africa, and has been for a year past.

Major E. A. Altham, Royal Scots, is a passenger home from South Africa in view of his resuming duty on the staff of the Intelligence Department at Headquarters early next month.

Major J. E. Caunter, Lancashire Fusiliers, left Cape Town in the Canada on the 1st inst. for England, with a view to taking up early next month the duties of Professor of Tactics, &c., at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst.

Among the officers of the Indian Staff Corps who are or have been doing duty with the forces in South Africa may be mentioned:—Colonels B. Duff, C.I.E., and N. B. Chamberlain; Major G. Younghusband; Brevet-Majors O. B. S. Shore, D. Baker, W. F. Ryder and C. E. de M. Norrie; Captains C. F. Minchin, R. C. O. Creagh, E. Peach, F. J. Moberley, D.S.O., J. M. Camilleri, A. K. Armstrong, H. McConaghey, W. E. E. Lloyd, C. W. G. Richardson, H. H. Cobbe, W. C. Knight, G. L'H. Sanders, W. R. Birwood, E. J. Lugard, H. H. F. Turner, A. G. Maxwell, and G. K. Cockerill; and Lieuts. K. E. Nagle, C. C. Newnham, R. J. T. Stewart, R. O'B. Taylor, A. St. J. Cooke, C. R. Harbord, W. A. Light, F. D. Russell, W. T. Barry, W. J. M. Guthrie-Smith, and F. Fitz H. Lance.

The officers of the Indian Staff Corps who have just been reported qualified for employment on the general and personal staff in India are:—Brevet-Major S. H. Climo, D.S.O., 24th Punjab Infantry; Captains J. S. Kemball, 29th Punjab Infantry; L. A. Watson, 31st Punjab Infantry; F. T. Stewart, 45th Sikhs; G. H. C. Colomb, 4th Gurkhas; W. Beadon, 4th Sikhs; W. E. Venour, 5th Punjabis; N. E. Chesney, 5th Gurkhas; A. M. Doveton, 1st Bombay Grenadiers; M. T. Elderton, 8th Bombay Infantry; W. S. Jacob, 16th Bombay Infantry; C. Burrard, 21st Bombay Infantry; J. J. D. Sillery, 25th Bombay Infantry; R. S. Paul, 26th Bombay Infantry; R. H. C. Chalmers, 5th Hyderabad Infantry; and Lieuts. D. H. McNeile, 19th Bengal Lancers; J. R. Carden, 15th Sikhs; W. A. V. Cummins, 24th Punjab Infantry; W. M. Brown, 3rd Gurkhas; W. P. Bannerman, 1st Bombay Lancers; and S. A. Cook, 1st Central India Horse.

The officers, Royal Engineers, selected for service in China with the Indian contingent, are, besides Lieut.-Colonel G. K. Scott-Moncrieff, Captain R. E. Picton, Adjutant to Colonel Scott-Moncrieff; Captain G. H. Griffith, in charge of Royal Engineer Field Park; Lieuts. S. G. Loch, Assistant Field Engineer (Telegraphs), and H. E. C. Cowie, Assistant Field Engineer; with No. 4 Company Bengal Sappers and Miners, Captain H. R. Stockley and Lieuts. C. M. Carpenter, H. D. Pearson, and M. R. Elles; with No. 3 Company Queen's Own Madras Sappers and Miners, Captain J. A. S. Tulloch, Lieuts. E. G. Henderson and R. E. D. Goldingham, and 2nd Lieut. J. A. Garstin; and with No. 2 Company Bombay Sappers and Miners, Lieuts. C. H. Boileau, G. R. Pridham, J. E. E. Craster, and W. H. Chaldecott.

Captain C. G. Watson, R.A., has been appointed D.A.A.G. for R.A., Punjab, vice Major E. S. Cleve, vacated.

Captain H. F. Dawson, R.F.A., has joined as a Recruiting Staff Officer at St. George's Barracks, vice Lieut.-Colonel F. C. Turner, retired list, resigned.

Captain W. A. C. Denny, A.S.C., has been nominated by the Commander-in-Chief for admission to the Staff College, in place of the late Captain the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, V.C., King's Royal Rifle Corps, killed in action.

Captain P. H. G. Powell-Cotton, 5th Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers, who has been rendering such valuable service as an explorer of unknown lands in Abyssinia, will shortly be turning his face homewards. Captain Cotton has more than once been received by the Negus, who has displayed every anxiety to meet his wishes and to render his visit to his dominions in every sense profitable.

Captains C. T. Swan, 4th Madras Infantry, F. C. Colomb, 42nd Gurkhas, F. T. Williams, 26th Madras Infantry, H. D. Watson, 2nd Gurkhas, and W. R. Walker, 15th Madras Infantry, have been appointed to the staff of the 4th Brigade for service in China.

Lieuts. C. F. Harold and R. Martin, I.S.C., have joined the Egyptian Army for service.

Lieutenant J. M. A. Graham, King's Own Regiment, has been permitted to accept and wear the 4th Class of the Osmanieh, and Lieutenants W. D. Ingle, Middlesex Regiment, and H. G. F. Stallard, R.A.M.C., the 4th Class of the Medjidie, conferred by the Khedive for services in Egypt.

WITH regard to the discharge of soldiers who have completed 21 or more years' service, the Secretary of State for War has directed that soldiers who have completed their second period of limited engagement, but have not formally prolonged their service beyond 21 years, may be retained for a further period not exceeding 12 months. With reference to soldiers who have prolonged their service beyond 21 years and wish to claim their discharge, the Marquis of Lansdowne has been advised that the claim to discharge is subject to the provisions of the Army Act, and that the mem may accordingly be detained for a further period, not to exceed 12 months, from the time at which they would otherwise be entitled to be discharged.

Army Foreign.

Lieut.-Colonel Nicolas Tolschin, of the Imperial Russian Army, who has been watching the operations in South Africa, has been making known his impressions. He has, he says, a profound admiration for the British troops. Whether winning battles by their dogged gallantry, or indulging in manly sports, their discipline and esprit de corps are splendid. He defends Lord Methuen and Sir William Gatacre. These officers, he holds, were placed in impossible positions at the outset of the campaign, as they were without cavalry, and could have done nothing if they had not sought to strike blows by means of the frontal attack. The attitude assumed by some sections of the Press and some members of Parliament is spoken of as "contemptible, reflecting the greatest discredit on a nation which is usually chivalrous." Lieut.-General French is referred to as a cavalry leader of first rank, "who has done more than anyone else—Lord Roberts excepted—to bring the campaign to a successful issue." Sir Charles Warren is held to be "a great administrator, the settlement of the rebellion in Griqualand West being entirely due to his genius in this direction." Colonel Tolschin cannot understand the feelings of sympathy for the Boers. He considers that "the victories of Lord Roberts are so many aids to the progress of civilisation in South Africa, even as in the olden days the triumphs of Alexander the Great opened the way for enlightenment and advance in Central Asia. The success of the Boers would have had deplorable results, as they possess none of the qualities which render success desirable." The gallant colonel has formed the highest opinion of Lord Roberts, who, he says, "inspires confidence in all under him to a remarkable degree, as he is never put out, but always cheerful and full of resource. A master of his art, a born leader, and kind-hearted gentleman, it is a pleasure to be associated with him." One has read so much of unfriendly criticism lately that it is gratifying to find a foreign officer who is qualified to speak expressing himself in such complimentary terms.

General André has made another important change in the personnel of the chiefs of the French Army. He has appointed Colonel Amourel chief of the Artillery Section at the Ministry of War in the place of General Deloye. General Deloye had occupied the post for six years, and it was under his supervision that the renewal of the French Field Artillery was carried out with a success which has never been called in question. In one of the recent sensational debates in the Chamber General de Galliffet paid striking homage to the merits of General Deloye, to whose presence in the House he called the attention of the Deputies, saying: "You have before you a man to whom you can never show too much gratitude." General Deloye, however, incurred the dire displeasure of the Dreyfusards by his evidence before the Rennes Court-martial, and they have been clamouring for his disgrace without intermission. They have only received partial satisfaction, as, though General Deloye is removed from his post, General André has not considered it advisable to dispense with his services entirely, and has appointed him a member of the Supreme Artillery Committee. This appointment amounts to the creation of a new post, a measure that will have to receive the approval of the Chamber before it becomes definite.

By Imperial decree from St. Petersburg the Siberian Army Corps is to be called the 1st Siberian Army Corps, and at the same time orders are issued to form a 2nd Siberian Army Corps, and also to organise the administration of the 6th East Siberian Rifle Brigade. Places for this purpose are named in the decree. Khabarovka is designated as the headquarters of the 2nd Siberian Army Corps and of the 6th East Siberian Rifle Brigade, while those of the 1st Siberian Infantry Brigade will be at Chita. Three other Army Corps will be formed out of those destined for the purpose of reinforcing the 1st and 2nd Siberian Army Corps engaged in operations in the Far East.

The rifle of 1898, which is the arm of the German troops in East Asia, will, it is said, be gradually introduced into the German Army. Its calibre is 7.9.

The German Emperor left Alten Grabow, the extensive shooting range of the Guards, near Magdeburg, on Tuesday evening, after manoeuvring the Division of the Cavalry Guards in person from eight till about twelve a.m. The manoeuvres were ended by the Emperor placing himself at the head of the eight regiments of the Cavalry Guards, and storming the centre of the enemy's position. His Majesty expressed great satisfaction at the behaviour of the troops, and returned at the head of the Gardes du Corps to the camp. A very interesting episode of the manoeuvres was the experiment with motor cars, which proved very successful. These conveyances seem to be destined to play an important part in future warfare. After dining with the officers, the Emperor went to Munster, in Hanover, where he arrived on Wednesday morning, and inspected the troops during the day. The Crown Prince will leave Potsdam on the 5th prox. in order to take part with his regiment, the 1st Potsdam Footguards, in the manoeuvres of the Guards, which will be ended about the 28th prox.

The Militär-Wochenblatt has published an article on the relative position of Germany and France so far as quick-firing field guns are concerned. It is contended that these two nations are the only ones which have approached the question intelligently. But in introducing the modern system the two Powers have regarded matters from a different point of view. In France the aim has been to obtain the highest possible muzzle velocity of the shell combined with the greatest mobility of the gun, even though the effect produced by individual projectiles may be considerably reduced. In Germany, on the other hand, while mobility has been a first consideration, the obtaining of an increased muzzle velocity has been held to be of less importance than an increase in the power of the projectile. On the whole, the Militär-Wochenblatt is of opinion that the two nations are on a pretty equal footing. The position is summed up somewhat as follows:—The French piece has a higher muzzle velocity, but the German throws a heavier projectile, is of greater simplicity of construction, and is believed to possess greater endurance.

In the list of soldiers' unclaimed balances just published appears the name of Private John Sherry, 1st Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, who left the sum of £207 13s. 10d., which is still unclaimed.

ANNUAL BOXING CHAMPIONSHIP.—The competitions, open to the Army and Navy, including embodied Militia and Royal Reserve battalions, will take place in the Gymnasium, Queen's Avenue, Aldershot, on Friday and Saturday, August 31 and September 1, commencing at 1.30 p.m. each day: For officers (entrance fee, 5s.)—Heavy-weights (catch-weights), middle-weights (11st. 4lb. and under), and light-weights (10st. and under). Prize in each event, a cup. For warrant, petty, and non-commissioned officers, seamen and privates (no entrance fee)—Heavy-weights (catch-weights), middle-weights (11st. 4lb. and under), light-weights (10st. and under), and feather-weights (9st. and under). The first prize in each event will be a silver medal and £6, and the second prize £3. In addition to the above an extra prize of £1 each will be presented to the pair who, in the opinion of the judges, box the best contested bout at the meeting. Entries close to-day.

THE GOVERNMENT AND HOME DEFENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—After a Session of much varied talk on military matters in both Houses of Parliament, it would be well to summarise the result as regards land home defence, that most vital of national questions. All there is to record is an attempt to induce the Volunteers to go into camp for a month, the men receiving daily pay for themselves and an allowance for their wives and children. Further, it is hoped that a certain number of Volunteer Artillery men will be found ready, in an emergency, to garrison certain forts. This and the giving of clean clothes and allowances to the Militia sums up, I think, what is being done as regards the men of the Reserve Forces. In addition to this, guns are to be given to the Volunteers, and transport is to be organised for both the Militia and Volunteers.

I am, however, bound to admit that the Secretary of State for War had, and has, much more ambitious projects as regards the Reserve Forces, for he brought in a Bill to empower a company to be formed in each Volunteer battalion ready to go on service, at home or abroad, whenever called upon to do so. Against this wild project, so fatal to the force, the common sense of the House of Commons happily revolted. How this War Office idea was viewed by Volunteer officers—other than the trop de zèle men consulted by the Secretary of State for War—is best shown by an extract from a letter I received upon this question from an important Volunteer commanding officer:—

"General service Volunteers are a mistake. We don't want two kinds of Volunteers in any corps. Personally I would not take such men; they would be disturbing elements."

"The Militia must be kept at its full strength, exclusive of the Militia Army Reserve, and the ballot for home defence resorted to. Sole exemption, efficient service in a Volunteer corps."

But if Lord Lansdowne thus tampered with the Volunteer force and risked its existence by trying to establish in its ranks two classes of men—viz., "the go-and-fights" and "the stay-at-homes"—this is as nothing compared with what, apparently, he is about to try to do with the Militia. He has told us that he contemplates doing away with the Militia (Army) Reserve, and making all Militiamen liable for service, at any time, anywhere, thus constituting the Militia an Army Reserve. This he told us was a suggestion made by some unnamed adviser, who evidently does not understand, or wishes to destroy, our existing military system.

An Irishman, we are told, in order to lengthen his blanket cut a bit off the top and sewed it on to the bottom; but the Secretary of State for War has improved on his countryman's practice, as he to lengthen his blanket cuts a piece off altogether. The idea, however, I suppose, was that the deficient blanket would be more than made good by turning the whole Militia—the constitutional basis of our home defensive force—into a second emergency army. Surely, if a Bill to effect this is brought in by the War Office next session, the common-sense of the Commons will, whatever the Lords may do, again come to the rescue and not allow the constitution of the Militia force to be destroyed. The nation can never suffer the foundations of our existing military system to be thus broken up by the War Minister of the day clothed with his little brief authority—a military system, moreover, admirably suited to our national needs, when rightly administered, as it was by our forefathers a century ago, but which successive Ministers have since failed to enforce through causeless dread of electoral consequences. Thus, alas! national safety is now ever made subordinate to party political considerations. WEMYSS.

St. James's Place.

PARTICULARS are given in this month's "Army List" of the officers doing duty with the 20 battalions of Imperial Yeomanry. This will be an advantage to those who have relatives and friends at the front, for whilst all the names were lumped together in one list there was necessarily much confusion.

WE are desired to state that the one mile cross-country competition for teams of the Regular battalions, details, embodied Militia, and Royal Reserve battalions, stationed in the Aldershot District, will take place on Saturday, Sept. 8, at 4.30 p.m. Teams to parade at the Gymnasium, Queen's Avenue, at 4 p.m. Money prizes: Winning team, two-thirds of entrance fees and shield, presented by Col. G. Malcolm Fox, Inspector of Gymnasia; second team, one-third of entrance fees. Teams should be entered by Aug. 25.

THE Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, Limited, Govan, Glasgow, launched on Saturday the twin-screw troopship Hardinge, which they have built for the Government of India. The vessel is 423ft. in length, 51ft. broad, and 31ft. deep, with a tonnage of 5,600 tons gross, a speed of 18 knots, and accommodation for 1,400 men, exclusive of crew. She will be armed with six 4.7in. q.f. guns, six 3-pounders, and four machine guns. The launching ceremony was performed by Viscountess Hardinge, after whose grandfather the vessel is named.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Aug. 11.

A telegram reached the War Office during the night from Lord Roberts confirming the report as to the plot to carry him off, which, he said, "was clumsily conceived." In another telegram Lord Roberts stated that Gen. Rundle had arrested at Harrismith a commandant, three field cornets, 130 armed burghers, and three other men. From Bethlehem Gen. Hunter reported that burghers were still surrendering, 130 having come in on the 8th and 9th. Mr. Cloete, a member of the Volksraad, is a prisoner with Gen. Hunter. Telegraphing to-day, Lord Roberts said Lord Kitchener was on the Gats Rand range, south of the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom railway, and was in communication with Lord Methuen, who was a few miles south-west of him yesterday. The enemy were fleeing in front of the two forces, and early this morning were trying to cross the railway at Welverdiend Station, where they were engaged by Gen. Smith-Dorrien. On the 9th Lord Methuen fought a rearguard action near Buffelshoek and captured six waggons and two ambulances.

Information came from Zeerust to-day describing Gen. Carrington's attempt on the 5th inst. to relieve the garrison of Elands River. The attempt failed, the force being much too small, and the enemy, estimated at 2,000 men under Commandant Delarey, being strongly posted. Our losses were 15 killed and missing and six wounded. On the 9th inst. Sir F. Carrington's force began to fall back in the direction of Mafeking, with the view of concentrating there.

A detailed account has come to hand of Sir F. Carrington's attempt to release the garrison at Elands River under Lieut.-Col. Hore. Gen. Carrington, with 600 New South Wales Bushmen, Paget's Horse, and some 15prs. and "pom-poms," belonging to the Rhodesian Field Force, left Zeerust on the 3rd inst. for Elands River. On reaching Groot Marico a telegram was received via Zeerust from Elands River saying that the camp was threatened. At the same time firing was heard by the column on the Marico River. Col. Grey was sent on in advance with 300 men and two "pom-poms" to Dord Drift. Col. Paget was left entrenched on the east of the Marico River to protect the waggons left there, while the remainder of the force moved on to Dord Drift, where they joined Col. Grey on the night of the 4th. On the morning of the 5th Gen. Carrington with 600 mounted men, four 15prs., and two "pom-poms" advanced towards Elands River. The enemy were found in strength on kopjes to the right and left of the road, entrenched and well provided with field guns, "pom-poms," and Maxims. Having got to within two miles of Col. Hore's camp the relief column found it utterly impossible to force the enemy from their position owing to the smallness of the force, and for the same reason a wide turning movement could not be made. Indeed, the enemy themselves began to take the offensive, enveloping our forces from both flanks. Gen. Carrington ordered a retirement to be made. The situation might have become serious but for the steadiness of the troops and for the effective fire of our guns and "pom-poms." It became necessary to go back to Groot Marico for supplies. The enemy again made an attack on the flank along the road. The night at Groot Marico passed quietly. On the morning of the 6th firing was heard in the direction of Zeerust. It was discovered that the enemy were holding a nek at Kleinfontein. The whole force, with 60 waggons, reached Zeerust on the morning of the 7th. Our casualties were an officer and 11 men wounded and 17 missing. Nearly all the latter had since returned. The scouting and skirmishing performed during the march were, it is said, admirable, and the Bushmen showed great coolness in this their first fight.

Monday, Aug. 13.

Lord Roberts sent two despatches to the War Office during the day. In the first he stated that Lord Kitchener and Lord Methuen were still following De Wet. Last night the Boer commander blew up three of his waggons. Sixty British prisoners who had escaped from De Wet's camp, reported that Mr. Steyn was confined to the camp and kept under surveillance. Lord Methuen captured one of De Wet's guns yesterday, and shelled the main convoy effectively. From Maseru it was announced that a search made in the mountains had resulted in the capture of a large number of cattle and horses which the Boers were hiding. Our troops were using 2,000 of the Boer horses, which were said to be in excellent condition. To quote from the first despatch:—

"Smith-Dorrien reports that the 2nd Shropshire Light Infantry marched 43 miles in 32 hours, and the City Imperial Volunteers 30 miles in 17 hours, a few days ago in the hope of being able to prevent De Wet from crossing the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom railway. Buller occupied Ermelo on the 11th without opposition. His move northward is having good effect, as evidenced by Field Cornet Boshoff and 182 burghers of the Standerton commando having surrendered yesterday to Gen. Clery. The 4th Batn. Derby Regiment and the men of the Irish Yeomanry who were released by the Boers and sent to Natal have arrived here. The former will be joined by the 16 officers of the battalion who were found by Hunter at Bethlehem. Paget's brigade has also arrived here. He speaks in high terms of the gallantry in action of the 2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry and Munster Fusiliers. Both battalions looked very workmanlike as they marched past me this morning."

Tuesday, Aug. 14.

Lord Roberts telegraphed during the evening stating that the small force at Eland's River Station, under Lieut.-Col. Hore, which it was feared had been captured by the enemy, was holding out on the 10th inst. There had been 67 casualties, a lieutenant of the Queensland Mounted Infantry being the only officer killed. Sir Frederick Carrington had been ordered to Zeerust, and Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton, whose mounted troops were supposed to be less than 40 miles from Eland's River at the time Lord Roberts wrote, had been informed of the necessity of affording Col. Hore assistance as soon as possible. Lord Roberts added that there was no fresh news from Lord Methuen and Lord Kitchener, who were some distance from the telegraph line. Lord Roberts reported that Col. Helyar, Imperial Yeomanry, who had been missing since July 31, has been murdered by Boers, and that two men were awaiting court-martial in connection with the crime. Gen. Prinsloo, who recently surrendered with a large number of burghers, arrived at Cape Town to-day from Bethlehem. He expressed himself as heartily tired of the war and welcomed the prospects of peace. Mr. Kruger's conduct, he said, had disgusted the majority of the Boers.

Wednesday, Aug. 15.

The correspondent with Sir Redvers Buller's force, telegraphing from Twyfelaar during the evening, stated that Gen. Buller had reached that place after three days' march from Ermelo. His troops came into touch with Gen. Gordon's cavalry at Goedhoop, five miles to the north, yesterday, and established telegraphic communication. There had been little fighting since the force left Amersfoort. The main body of the enemy have retired eastward. A patrol, on entering Carolina yesterday, met with slight opposition. A Boer powder magazine containing ammunition was destroyed. To-day there was a slight skirmish on the right flank of the advance, in which we had three casualties. A Reuter telegram from Twyfelaar, sent off during the night, said that a force of 800 Boers, with six guns, was in the neighbourhood of Lake Chrissie, but was capable of doing very little damage. The opposition in the south-east corner of the Transvaal had been broken by the surrender of the Standerton commando.

A Bloemfontein correspondent telegraphed that De Wet was reported to have only 700 men under him, while Delarey holds the Rustenburg mountains with 5,000. The same correspondent stated that the C.I.V.'s, after repulsing an attack upon Frederickstad on Aug. 3, in which they lost two men killed and several wounded, were hard pressed by the enemy, and retired from that place to Banks.

Thursday, Aug. 16.

There was no news from Lord Roberts to-day. A Reuter despatch from Krugersdorp stated that De Wet had crossed the railway and was making north to join Delarey, who holds Rustenburg. His force was reported to be already beyond Ventersdorp. He was being hotly pursued.

A general court-martial was assembled at Pretoria to-day, Major-Gen. Marshall, R.A., being president, when Hans Cardua was charged with breaking his parole and plotting to kidnap Lord Roberts and his principal staff officers. The chief witness, Dutoit, gave circumstantial evidence against the prisoner, which went to show that prisoner went to him on July 4, and asked him to assist him in his plot, which was "to stagger Europe." He then developed his plans, by which at a given signal all the principal British officers in Pretoria were to be seized whilst he himself was to carry off Lord Roberts, and make a rush with him to Gen. Botha's camp, behind Beckett's Kopje, a few miles from the town. Lieut. Kruger, Imperial Transvaal Police, gave details of the contents of a note book shown him by prisoner. He handed to the court a copy of a cypher letter of Gen. Botha, which said, "Proceed with the work. Do not lose courage. I will not leave you in the lurch." Witness refused to be party to the scheme.

Friday, Aug. 17.

The Orange River Colony is now clear of the enemy, except a small force under Olivier in the neighbourhood of Helibron.

It is reported from Machadorp that Mr. Kruger expresses his intention of holding out, but that he has lost the confidence of most of his followers, on account of the many false representations that have been made.

We are requested by the War Office to state that the following articles will not be conveyed by transports to South Africa after the 24th inst.:—Bottles of spirits, wine, beer, mineral-waters, &c.; matches, fuses, &c.; packages of tobacco, cigars, and cigarettes consigned by firms for trade purposes, and not as free gifts; food supplies liable to rapid decomposition; newspapers directed but not stamped. Ordinary baggage, supplies for messes and canteens (when ordered by corps), and gifts not prohibited above, may be sent to the Embarking Staff Officer, Empress Dock, Southampton, for shipment. All such articles must be securely packed, be properly addressed, and have nature of contents clearly marked outside. Lord Roberts has intimated that no more warm clothing need be sent. Parcel Post is recommended for all articles suitable for that mode of conveyance.

Up to the hour of going to press there had been no further despatch from Lord Roberts.

A telegram from Reuter's correspondent at Pretoria, received during the afternoon, was to the effect that "Gen. De Wet has succeeded in getting away, although Lord Kitchener's force made the most strenuous efforts to overtake him. All the British waggons had double teams of picked animals, but De Wet's mobility has been too great for him to be overtaken. He was able to march by night while his pursuers were obliged to march only by day light."

Sir Redvers Buller remains, it is said, at Twyfelaar for a few days in order to replenish his supplies.

Total casualties since the beginning of the war up to the end of last week:—

	Officers.	N.C.O. & Men
Killed	272	2,549
Died of wounds	77	712
Missing and prisoners (excluding those who have been recovered or died in captivity)	55	2,768
Prisoners died in captivity	1	85
Died of disease	146	5,086
Accidental deaths	1	81
Sent home as invalids	1,151	26,123*
	1,703	37,354

Total Losses (exclusive of sick and wounded men now in British Hospitals in South Africa) 39,057

* Of these 150 have died, 607 have been discharged from the service as unfit, and 1,586 are in hospital.

THE question of recalling officers of the Indian Staff Corps on leave in England is under consideration, owing to the demands made for extra officers for regiments proceeding to China.

THE Queen has commanded that the 2nd Tower Hamlets Royal Engineers (Volunteers) shall in future be called the "East London Royal Engineers (Volunteers)." The corps is the strongest of the three Volunteer Engineer Corps of the metropolis.

THE India Office has undertaken to make all notifications and to attend to all inquiries on the subject of the troops, whether British or Indian, now operating in China. This arrangement will hold good for the present at any rate, as the expedition in the field is drawn mainly from India.

A CONTINGENT of Canadian troops invalided from South Africa arrived in London on Tuesday on their way to Liverpool to embark for Canada. The men, numbering about 100, belong to the Royal Canadian Regiment and Strathcona's Horse, and many of them took part in the operations leading up to the capture of Cronje at Paardeberg. Since their arrival in England from the front they have been recuperating at Shorncliffe. At Euston Station they received a cordial send-off. The men subsequently sailed from Liverpool on the steamer Lake Ontario, the Lord Mayor of Liverpool tendering them a cordial welcome on board the vessel.

ARMY.

Gen. Abingdon Augustus Bayly, Colonel Commandant Royal (late Bombay) Artillery, died at Interlaken, Switzerland, on the 11th inst., after five days' illness, aged 72. He joined the Army as 2nd Lieut. in the Bombay Artillery, Dec. 13, 1845; became Captain Aug. 27, 1858; Major July 5, 1872; Lieut.-Colonel Aug. 1, 1872; Colonel Aug. 1, 1877; Major-General May 12, 1882; Lieut.-General Dec. 11, 1888; and General May 25, 1895. He was appointed a Colonel-Commandant Dec. 19, 1897. He served in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present at the siege and capture of Mooltan (medal with clasp).

Major-Gen. Charles Harris Blunt, Colonel, retired list, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, died at Adderbury Manor, Banbury, on the 15th inst., aged 75. He was fourth son of the late Mr. E. W. Blunt, Kempshot Park, Hants. He joined the Bengal Artillery June 11, 1842; became Captain June 11, 1857; Major and Lieut.-Colonel March 24, 1858; and Lieut.-Colonel Nov. 22, 1865; and retired with the hon. rank of Major-General Aug. 19, 1867. He served in the Sutlej Campaign of 1846, including the battle of Sohraon (medal); in the Punjab campaign (medal); and in the Indian Mutiny 1857-59. In the latter he took part in the siege of Delhi, battle of Nuggufghur action of Agra, relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, action of Shumsabad, and capture of the fort and town, of Calpee (mentioned in despatches on every occasion, brevets of Major and Lieut.-Colonel, C.B., medal with clasp).

Major-Gen. Frederick John Ellis, Colonel, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at the Shieling, Hindhead, on the 5th inst., aged 72. He joined the Army Dec. 10, 1844; became Captain Dec. 26, 1858; Major Dec. 10, 1864; Lieut.-Colonel Dec. 10, 1870; Colonel Dec. 10, 1875; and retired with the hon. rank of Major-General Oct. 28, 1876.

Major-Gen. Charles Edward Oldershaw, Colonel, retired list, Royal Artillery, died at Folkestone on the 12th inst., aged 72 years. He joined the Army May 2, 1847; became Captain Oct. 29, 1854; Major Nov. 2, 1855; Lieut.-Colonel Jan. 26, 1866; Colonel July 20, 1876; and Major-General May 29, 1886. He served in the Crimean Campaign from January, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol, in the trenches with the siege train, and bombardment of April; was employed on special service in 1855-56 (medal with clasp, brevet of Major, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal).

Deputy Inspector-Gen. Daniel James O'Callaghan, retired list, Indian Medical Service, died at 38, Queen's Mansions, S.W., on the 12th inst., aged 84. After serving in the Navy the deceased officer joined the Indian Service in 1842. Whilst doing duty with the 49th Bengal Infantry he saw service in the Sutlej campaign, attached to the field hospital. During the Indian Mutiny he acted as Surgeon in medical charge of garrison artillery at the siege of Delhi, and was present at the storming and capture of the city (medal with clasp). He also saw service in the China war, 1860 (medal with clasp). He retired in 1872. He leaves two daughters—Lady Irving, wife of Sir Henry Irving, and Mrs. Morgan. For many years he was a resident in London, and was a well-known member of the Junior United Service Club, where he was much missed, when he was obliged by increasing infirmity not very long ago to give up his daily attendance in the morning-room, where he was wont to entertain a select circle of friends by his original and interesting conversation, and almost to the day of his death he retained a vivid recollection of the events and men of his Service career.

Col. Charles Welman Hayter Helyar, whose murder in South Africa is officially reported, was a Colonel on the retired list, lately commanding the 3rd Hussars. Born Aug. 13, 1844, he joined the 29th Regiment as Ensign, Feb. 2, 1864; became Lieut. Dec. 1, 1865; Captain Oct. 3, 1871; exchanged to the 3rd Hussars, July 2, 1879; became Major Oct. 15, 1881; Lieut.-Colonel April 15, 1891; and Colonel April 15, 1895. He was placed on half pay Oct. 26, 1895, and retired on retired pay, April 26, 1899. On the decision being arrived at to raise the Imperial Yeomanry Col. Helyar at once volunteered his services in any capacity, and was appointed on Jan. 20 last to the command of the 7th Batn. made up of the contingents from Devonshire, Dorsetshire, and Somersetshire. He was a great believer in the Yeomanry, with which force he served as Adjutant for five years.

Col. Gray Townsend Skipwith, retired list, Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, of Loversal Hall, Doncaster, died at Zurich on the 12th inst. Born Nov. 2, 1838, son of the late Fulwar Skipwith, Indian Civil Service, of Avonhouse, Tunbridge Wells, he joined the Bengal Engineers June 11, 1858; became Lieut.-Colonel Aug. 12, 1886; and Colonel Aug. 12, 1890. He retired on pension Jan. 6, 1893.

Col. George Hubert Parker, C.B., retired list, late Gordon Highlanders, died at Penrheol, St. Clear's, Carmarthenshire, on the 13th inst. Born April 17, 1834, he joined the Army Jan. 11, 1853; became Captain Sept. 18, 1857; Major Dec. 15, 1869; Lieut.-Colonel Oct. 28, 1876; and Colonel July 1, 1881. He served in the Afghan War of 1879-83 in command of the 92nd Highlanders, and was present in the engagement at Charasiab on Oct. 6, 1879 (mentioned in despatches), and pursuit in the operations round Kabul in December, 1879, including the storming of the Asmai Heights (mentioned in despatches), and the investment of Sherpore, and in the engagement at Charasiab on April 25, 1880 (mentioned in despatches). Accompanied Sir Frederick Roberts in the march from Kabul to Kandahar, and was present at the battle of Kandahar (mentioned in despatches, C.B., medal with three clasps, and bronze decoration). Also served in the Boer War 1881 in command of the 92nd Highlanders.

Major Alfred Richard Power, 1st Batn. King's Own Light Infantry, whose death is officially reported, died so long ago as June 8, of dysentery, at St. Michael's Home, Bloemfontein. Born Oct. 29, 1857, he joined the 22nd Regiment from the Militia on June 21, 1879, being transferred to the 51st Light Infantry a few days later. He served in the Afghan War 1879-80, taking part in the action of Nargashai (mentioned in despatches, medal). He obtained his Lieutenancy in July, 1881, and his company in January, 1886, and was engaged in the Burmese Expedition of 1886-89 (medal with two clasps). He became Major July 19, 1898.

Major John Wood Gordon, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at Winham, Chard, Somerset, on the 13th inst., after two years' illness, aged 45. Born July 21, 1855, he joined the 59th Regiment as Lieut. from the Militia, Nov. 20, 1875, and was transferred to the Bombay Staff Corps, May, 2, 1878; becoming Captain Nov. 20, 1886; and Major Nov. 20, 1895, after which he retired. He served in the Afghan 1880—march from Quetta to relief of Kandahar (medal).

Capt. Alfred M. Knowles, Imperial Yeomanry, was killed at Rietfontein on the 9th inst. He was a Captain in the Nottinghamshire Yeomanry, and went to South Africa with the rank of Lieut. in the Army on Feb. 3 last.

Lieut. Robert Thomas Carreg, Shropshire Light Infantry, died of cholera at Poona, on the 18th ult. Born July 28, 1868, eldest son of Mr. R. Carreg, J.P., D.L., of Carreg, Carnarvonshire, he joined the Army as 2nd Lieut., Shropshire Light Infantry, Feb. 25, 1893, and became Lieut. Feb. 3, 1898.

Lieut. Arthur Worsley Spottiswoode Pinhey, King's Shropshire Light Infantry, died at Poona, Bombay, of cholera, on the 30th ult. Born April 17, 1872, son of the late Capt. Forbes Pinhey, King's Own Light Infantry, he joined the Shropshire Light Infantry from the Militia as 2nd Lieut. June 2, 1894, and became Lieut. June 25, 1898.

Lieut. John Arthur Greer, West India Regiment, was killed in action in the fighting before Kumasi under Lieut.-Col. Burroughs. Born May 31, 1877, he joined the Army as 2nd Lieut. West India Regiment, Sept. 8, 1897, and became Lieut. March 28, 1898.

Mr. Thomas William Keith, late Accountant-General at the India Office, died on Sunday at his residence, 46, Ladbroke Grove, at the age of 72. Mr. Keith entered the old establishment at the East India House in 1845, and was appointed a junior clerk in the Treasury in 1848, and senior clerk in 1858. He became Accountant at the India Office in 1872, and was Accountant-General from 1879 to 1893, when he retired, being succeeded by Mr. A. R. Cave-Browne, who has himself just retired. He was highly respected, his tact and courtesy being proverbial.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF RESERVISTS.

A circular memorandum has been sent by the War Office to the general officers commanding districts at home which states that, as it will be necessary when the Reserves are demobilised and soldiers are again being passed to the Reserve or discharged, every effort should be made to enable men leaving the colours to resume or obtain civil employment, the Secretary for War has approved of arrangements which he hopes will prove of material assistance. The men returning to civil life are classed under four heads—those whose previous situations are to their own knowledge being kept open for them; those who were previously in employment but who do not know whether their former situations are being kept open; those who, either by their own efforts or the help of their relatives or friends, have secured promises of employment; and those who have no employment to go to. In respect to the third class no special action will be necessary; but in respect to the others modes of procedure are prescribed for the officers who will effect discharge or retransfer to the Reserve which should be helpful to the men concerned, and especially to those who on leaving the ranks have no immediate prospect of employment.

The Secretary for War relies on the military employment registries and local organisations which have been formed for the purpose of furthering the employment of ex-soldiers. He trusts that every possible endeavour will be made to arouse local sympathy in the matter, and suggests several means to assist in the attainment of the object. Among these are appeals and advertisements in the Press, the holding of local meetings with a view to seeking the help of the gentry and other influential persons, and enlisting the aid of mayors and leading manufacturers, tradesmen, and others, and by co-operating with the National Association for the Employment of Reserve and Discharged Soldiers; the Men's Help Society (Discharged Soldiers' Department); the Army and Navy Pensioners' Employment Society, the Corps of Commissionaires, &c. A list of employment registries, arranged according to counties, is being prepared by the War Office for issue to men on leaving the colours.

PROPOSALS are under consideration of the Government of India for materially increasing the strength of the service of the Indian Army Nursing Sisters with the British Nursing Sisters for British troops.

SOME of the heavy guns required to make up the siege battery which is being sent to China are being drawn from India instead of the whole of them being sent from South Africa, as was first arranged.

THE new hutments in the Aldershot District, situated near Ewshott, will be named "Ewshott Hut Barracks," and those near Frimley Green "Deepcut Hut Barracks."

INSTRUCTIONS have been given that convalescents from South Africa who have been not less than a month at home are, if passed medically fit, to be considered as eligible for inclusion in drafts going out to join their regiments.

INSTRUCTIONS have been received at Shorncliffe camp that huts are at once to be erected for the accommodation of the two Militia regiments now under canvas there with a view to the troops being retained on service during the winter. The huts have been sent in sections, and are to be erected with all despatch.

CAVALRY.

1st Life Guards.—Capt. Milner, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Norman on the 9th inst.

2nd Life Guards.—Lieut.-Col. Neeld has succeeded to a baronetcy by the death of his elder brother, Lieut.-Col. Sir Algernon Neeld, Wiltshire Yeomanry.

Royal Horse Guards (Blue).—Lieut.-Col. Lord Binning met with an accident while out grouse shooting on Heckspath Moors, near Greenlaw, Berwickshire, on Tuesday. One of the dogs knocked against a gun, accidentally discharging it, and the charge carried off a part of the calf of his lordship's leg. Lord Binning was taken to Mellerstain House after medical attention, and on inquiry yesterday we learnt that he was making good progress.

5th Dragoon Guards.—Lieut. Melvill, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst.

7th Dragoon Guards.—Major Follett has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

1st (Royal) Dragoons.—Capt. Burns has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lismore Castle on the 9th inst.

3rd Hussars.—2nd Lieut. Burnside sailed from Cape Town on the 9th inst. for England in the Orotava on appointment from the "C.I.V.'s," with which he has been doing excellent service.

4th Hussars.—We regret to learn by telegram from India that cholera has been attacking the regiment, and that 13 cases have proved fatal.

5th Lancers.—Capt. and Ridgmr. Payne, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst. Capt. and Qmr. Waterman has also been invalided, and sailed in the Lismore Castle on the 9th inst. Lieut. Fraser sailed the same time.

8th Hussars.—Capt. O'Brien has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

10th Hussars.—Capt. and Qmr. Poole has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

19th Hussars.—Major Aylmer has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lismore Castle on the 9th inst.

Stopford to W Battery, Woolwich; and H. C. Rochford-Boyd to AA Battery, Newbridge.

The officers' blue cloth patrol jacket has been abolished by order.

The command of the Regimental District Staff Woolwich, is about to become vacant, as Col. F. O. Barrington-Foote completes his five years on the 11th prox.

Major R. M. Kelly, R.A., who was A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Warren, left Cape Town on the 9th inst. in the Norman for England.

The Norfolk Artillery Militia moved on the 10th inst. from Sheerness to Great Yarmouth.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The newly formed 60th Company, having arrived at Aldershot from Chatham, has proceeded to Borton Camp, Woolmer, to assist in preparing the hut quarters which are to be erected there.

INFANTRY.

Grenadier Guards.—Major Davies, 3rd Batn., took up some time ago the duties of Military Commissioner of Police, Johannesburg.

Coldstream Guards.—Lieut. Lord Dunsany, 1st Batn., left Cape Town on the 9th inst. in the Orotava for England.

Royal Scots (1st).—Major Birkbeck, 1st Batn., is on passage home from the Cape in the Orotava, which sailed on the 9th inst.

King's Own Regiment (4th).—Capt. Parker has been transferred from the 1st Batn. at Aldershot to the 2nd Batn. in South Africa. Lieut. Lysons, 2nd Batn., has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Lismore Castle on the 9th inst. 2nd Lieuts. Mackay and Matson, 1st Batn., sailed from Cape Town on the 9th inst. in the Orotava to join on appointment. 2nd Lieut. Baines, 4th (Militia) Batn., also invalided, sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

Northumberland Fusiliers (5th).—Capt. Toppin is posted to the new 3rd Batn. on promotion.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—A correspondent writes to us from the Tower:—

"I should like as one who has resided in the City fortress for many years to endorse what you said last week as to the conduct of the 5th (Militia) Batn. Royal Fusiliers. The battalion has occupied quarters in the Tower for some time, and it has been a pleasure to be associated with it. I cannot speak too highly of the soldierlike conduct of the men, and I was glad, therefore, to find that the high character of all ranks of this Militia unit had been brought under notice. I only hope that the 7th Batn. may as well maintain the reputation of the City of London Regiment, a distinction all ranks of the Royal Fusiliers ought to be proud to bear."

King's Regiment (8th).—2nd Lieut. Finney, 3rd Batn., left Cape Town on the 9th inst. for England in the Orotava to join.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Lieut.-Col. Phillips, commanding the 2nd Batn., writes from Pretoria:—

"I shall be greatly obliged if you will transmit through your paper the news that numerous cases and bales have been received here, containing presents and comforts for the men of my regiment, such as Tam o'Shanter, socks, mitts, tobacco, cigarettes, pipes, writing cases, and other most useful articles. The kind donors of these do not know how much these presents are appreciated, and I trust they will accept through me the sincere thanks of the non-commissioned officers and men of the regiment under my command for the great trouble they must have had in collecting these presents. Not knowing the addresses of all the kind donors, I must ask you to publish this as the safest way of conveying to all our most sincere thanks."

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—Major Ward retains his appointment as an instructor at Sandhurst on promotion.

Bedfordshire Regiment (16th).—Major Hamilton 2nd Batn., is on passage home from the Cape in charge of invalids in the Templemore, which sailed on the 6th inst.

Leicestershire Regiment (17th).—Major Griffiths, 1st Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst.

Yorkshire Regiment (19th).—Capt. Somervell, 1st Batn., invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst.

Lancashire Fusiliers (20th).—Capt. Blunt, 2nd Batn., has left for South Africa in command of a signalling reinforcement made up of trained signallers from the 2nd and 3rd Dragoon Guards, 21st Lancers, 1st Grenadier Guards, 1st Royal Lancaster 1st Yorkshire Light Infantry, 2nd Highland Light Infantry, and the 4th Bats. of the King's Royal Rifles and Rifle Brigade. 2nd Lieut. North, 4th Batn., is on passage home from the Cape in the Orotava to join on appointment.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Lieut. Parry, 3rd (Militia) Batn., sailed from Cape Town in the Orotava on the 9th inst., invalided.

Gloucestershire Regiment (28th).—Capt. Venables left Bulford Camp, Salisbury, on Wednesday, after having been invalided from Ladysmith, in order to rejoin his battalion at the front. He embarked at Southampton in charge of a draft of 100 men of the 2nd Batn. Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

Worcestershire Regiment (29th).—Capt. Crawshaw is transferred to the new 3rd Batn. at Aldershot, on promotion.

East Lancashire Regiment (30th).—Major O'Brien is acting as President of the Military Tribunal at Johannesburg.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Capt. Stokoe is transferred to the 2nd Batn. (46th) in South Africa, on promotion.

Duke of Wellington's Regiment (33rd).—Capt. Taylor, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst.

Border Regiment (34th).—Major Gooch is posted to this battalion on promotion and restoration to the establishment; 2nd Lieut. Senior is on passage home from South Africa in the Orotava, which sailed on the 9th inst.

Hampshire Regiment (37th).—Capt. Boucher, invalided from the Cape, sailed in the Orotava on the 9th inst.

Essex Regiment (44th).—Lieut. and Qmr. Willis has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—Lieut. Frend has been invalided from the Cape, and sailed in the Templemore on the 6th inst.

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (52nd).—The command becomes vacant on the 2nd prox., when Col. Plowden is taken on to the Staff Establishment in India as an A.A.G.

East Lancashire Regiment (59th).—Major Twynham has been posted to the 1st Batn. (30th), on promotion, and has been ordered to proceed from India to South Africa to join.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—A telegram, dated Colombo, August 9, says: "The Orient, from Durban, with the 2nd Batn. King's Royal Rifles and 52 Boer prisoners, has arrived; all well." The Volunteer Company, which has since February been attached, under the late Capt. Warren and Lieut. Wyld, to the 2nd Batn. in Natal, and taken part in all the operations under Sir Redvers Buller since the fall of Ladysmith, has now been transferred to the 3rd Batn., on the former being moved to Ceylon to guard the Boer prisoners. A battalion order has been issued on the occasion by Major the Hon. E. J. Stuart-Wortley:—

"The Volunteer Company attached to this battalion having been ordered to proceed to join the 3rd Batn., the commanding officer wishes to place on record his appreciation of the excellent spirit which they have shown and of the good work they have performed with the 2nd Batn. In wishing them every good luck, he trusts that the comradeship and mutual interest which has arisen may continue in future, and he hopes that on the conclusion of the campaign they will convey to the regiments they represent the assurance of their comrades in the regular battalion that their assistance has been greatly appreciated and will always be welcomed."

Lieut.-Cols. Gore-Browne and Bewicke-Copley have exchanged battalions. Col. Gore-Browne now takes over command of the 2nd Batn. and Col. Bewicke-Copley of the 1st Batn.

York and Lancaster Regiment (65th).—Lieut. Wedgwood has been invalided from South Africa, and sailed on the 9th inst. in the Lismore Castle. 2nd Lieut. Ruel left Cape Town on the 9th inst. in the Orotava, invalided.

East Surrey Regiment (70th).—Capt. Barchard has been posted to the 1st Batn. (31st) in India on promotion.

Seaforth Highlanders (78th).—Major Mackenzie is acting as Military Commandant, Johannesburg, with the local rank of Col., Lieut. Daniell being his A.D.C., with local rank of Captain.

Cameron Highlanders (79th).—When letters left Johannesburg Major Cavaye had been appointed Customs Commissioner, Johannesburg. Capt. Craig-Brown has been transferred from the 2nd Batn. at Gibraltar to the 1st Batn. in South Africa on promotion.

Shropshire Light Infantry (85th).—"Major-Gen. Smith-Dorrien," Lord Roberts states in a despatch received on Monday from Pretoria, "reports highly of the regiment, which marched 43 miles in 32 hours last week in the hope of being able to prevent De Wet from crossing the Krugersdorp-Potchefstroom Railway." The regiment has done splendidly since its arrival at the Cape.

Royal Irish Fusiliers (87th).—Capt. Cracroft is transferred to the 2nd Batn. (89th) on promotion.

Gordon Highlanders (92nd).—An Aberdeen correspondent says that "Corpl. McKay, who has been awarded the Victoria Cross, was formerly a medical student at Trinity College, Dublin. He enlisted at Glasgow in 1894, proceeding to India and being present in the Chitral and Tirah campaigns. His gallantry under fire has always been conspicuous."

Royal West Kent Regiment (97th).—Lieut.-Col. Grove has been selected for promotion to the brevet rank of Colonel with effect from to-morrow, when his four years in command expires, and he enters upon his extended period of 12 months.

Royal Munster Fusiliers (101st).—Telegraphing from Pretoria on Monday, Lord Roberts said, "Major-Gen. Paget speaks in high terms of the gallantry in action of the Royal Munster Fusiliers."

Royal Dublin Fusiliers (102nd).—Capts. Venour and Todd have been invalided from the Cape, and sailed on the 9th inst. in the Lismore Castle.

King's Own Light Infantry (105th).—"Major-Gen. Paget," Lord Roberts said in a despatch from Pretoria on Monday, "speaks in high terms of the gallantry of the 2nd Yorkshire Light Infantry." Major Elles was D.A.A.G. Johannesburg when the mail left.

Royal Sussex Regiment (107th).—Capt. Davies remains with this battalion on promotion. Capt. Wroughton is transferred to the 1st Batn. (35th), in South Africa.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (108th).—Capt. Byrne is transferred on promotion to the 1st Batn. (27th) in South Africa.

Leinster Regiment (109th).—Capt. Evans-Lombe is posted to this battalion at Barbados on restoration to the establishment.

Rifle Brigade.—Capt. Wingfield-Digby is transferred on promotion from the 1st Batn. in South Africa to the 4th Batn. in Ireland.

West India Regiment.—Major Hill sailed from Cape Town on the 9th inst. for England in the Orotava. 2nd Lieuts. Norton, Biscoe, Nicholson, and Fraser sailed at the same time with a view of joining the 2nd Batn. on promotion from Lumsden's Horse.

Royal Army Medical Corps.—All leave out of India in the case of officers of the corps has been stopped, owing to the expedition to China. Extract from a letter of a medical officer, who accompanied the Indian contingent to Natal:—"The war has been an experience not only to the fighting branches, but also to the medical services; and it has been an education to the officers of the latter, both senior and junior, that will have an influence for good for many years to come." Major Dodd and Lieut. Phipps are on passage home from the Cape in the Lismore Castle, which sailed on the 9th inst. Major Downman and Lieut. Wroughton left Cape Town in the Orotava on the 9th inst. for England with invalids.

Army Pay Department.—Recent changes:—Col. Wade to retired pay, July 11; Lieut.-Col. Ward, chief paymaster, vice Wade; Majors Carden, staff paymaster, vice Ward; Maunsell to retired pay; Col. Wade, being on active service, is retained for the present on duty in South Africa; Lieut.-Col. W. C. J. F. Nott, on the retired list, is temporarily employed with the depot, R.F.A., at Woolwich; Capts. Thompson, Devonport to York; Boileau, Royal Warwickshire Regiment, on probation, Portsmouth; Capts. Collard, Hampshire Regiment (Oct. 12, 1899), and O. Ormsby, South Staffordshire Regiment (Nov. 4, 1899), to be paymasters. Deaths:—Major F. A. M. Arnold, late A.P.D., in London, July 3; Lieut.-Col. C. M. Dawes, A.P.D., at Ealing, June 6.

SUMMER vacation at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, terminated on Tuesday, when cadets left over from last term rejoined, and the new division entered. Among the latter was Prince Arthur of Connaught. With the juniors who joined this week and those left over from last term the strength of the college is about 320, or 40 below the usual strength.

MR. A. FORBES SIEVEKING furnishes a sequel to a remarkable story published in several papers respecting a Victoria Cross belonging to the late Col. Aitken, I.S.C., which was supposed to have been stolen in India, and in place of which Col. Aitken received a duplicate. The original Cross, with Col. Aitken's name on it, subsequently came to light, and was offered for sale by auction. Mr. Sieveking now states:—"My client, Mrs. Aitken, thinks the public may be interested in learning that she has been successful in getting the War Office to reclaim the V.C. bearing the name of her husband, the late Col. Aitken. On the 4th inst. she received a communication from the War Office that the original Victoria Cross, which was intended for the late Col. Aitken, is now in the possession of this department."

Reviews.

SIR JOSEPH FAYRER'S RECOLLECTIONS.

A life of singular interest, well filled with honourable and valuable work, has been that of Surg.-Gen. Sir Joseph Fayrer, Bart., whose Recollections of My Life (Blackwood and Sons) will rank high among volumes of recent biography. Not a chapter is without interest of a high order, and from not a page is wanting the ability to tell the story well. It is a simple and direct narrative of active experience, reproducing many scenes of vital interest in our modern history. The author's father was a commander in the Navy, who afterwards was a captain of various liners, and one of the pioneers of ocean steam navigation. Young Fayrer was designed to be an engineer, but it was distasteful to him, and he soon showed a taste for the sea. He was too old to enter the executive branch of the Navy, but he began his medical studies at the naval hospital, Bermuda, and continued them at Charing Cross and other medical schools. Having passed the College of Surgeons he was appointed to the Victory for Haslar Hospital, but very soon afterwards had special leave to accompany Lord Mount Edgcumbe to the Continent, and saw some terrible scenes of the revolution of 1848 at Palermo. "These southern people, when their passions are roused, and when once they have tasted blood, are demons incarnate, and the women become as bad as the men. Once in a square I came upon the body of a Neapolitan sbirro. I do not know how he had been killed, but a woman was tearing out his entrails and shouting some horrid imprecations as she did so, the rest joining in the orgy." Upon his return the future surgeon-general decided not to rejoin the Navy, and was appointed to the Ordnance Medical Department, and, upon its reduction, to an assistant-surgeoncy in Bengal. He soon rendered such excellent service in Burma, that he was appointed, in 1853, surgeon at the Lucknow Residency, a post which had been retained by the Governor-General for the most deserving, being the best medical appointment in his gift. At Lucknow Mr. Fayrer remained through the terrible days of the siege, and he has devoted several chapters to a narrative of events which is full of thrilling and surpassing interest. Much has been written about the defence of the Residency, and the story is now complete, for we have here not only a picture of the superb heroism and endurance of the garrison, but of much of the inner work of organisation and control. A chapter upon tiger shooting expeditions—for the author has always been a great sportsman—ends with the first presage of the coming storm—the circulation of the famous chupatties. "All my companions, except Gubbins, were victims of the Mutiny within the year. Thomason was murdered at Shahjehanpore, Gonne in the Mullapore district, Col. Fisher was killed by men of his own regiment, Bromhill was murdered at Seetapore, Lester was shot through the neck during the siege of Lucknow and died three days afterwards, Graydon was killed after the first relief of Lucknow." During the siege, Dr. Fayrer had a garrison at his house of eight gentlemen, 11 ladies, and seven children, and was himself constantly occupied in his duties. The news of Chinhat brought dismay to the people in Lucknow, but they redoubled their preparations and prepared to resist to the last, and the women gave a splendid example of endurance. A tremendous fire was opened upon the place, the Mutchi Bhowan was abandoned and blown up, the Residency was riddled with shot and shell, and Sir Henry Lawrence, who had been the soul of the organisation, was mortally wounded. Dr. Fayrer attended him and found the muscles and integuments of the hip lacerated, and the upper part of the thigh-bone comminuted, and he now describes the last moments of that famous administrator. Then we are told how the hard-pressed garrison resisted; how it met mine by counter-mine, sap by sap; how it suffered from the continuous fire of muskets, shells, and stinkpots; and how disease and famine came nearer. Once a 9lb. shrapnel burst in the very room where Mrs. Fayrer was lying ill, and the poor ladies who were driven out of the underground tyekhana, were driven back again by round shot. At length relief came, and "big, rough, bearded soldiers were seizing the little children, kissing them with tears running down their cheeks, and thanking God they had come in time to save them from the fate of those at Cawnpore." But all was not over, and Sir Joseph Fayrer describes what he saw up to the final relief of Lucknow. He then has much to say that is of extreme interest concerning his useful ten years' work at Calcutta, during which his professional reputation rose very high, and he describes his expedition to the north-west with the Duke of Edinburgh, with many sporting experiences, and his account of his visit to India in the suite of the Prince of Wales is excellent. The volume concludes with very interesting chapters on the author's life in London, full of reminiscences of well-known men and of interesting incidents, and it concludes with the honour of a baronetcy conferred on the accomplished author for his service during 20 years as president of the Medical Board at the India Office. Truly, an admirable autobiography.

SHORTER NOTICES.

The very great interest that has been aroused throughout the world by the Russo-Finnish Question has prompted an anonymous author to translate from the Swedish the Reply of the Finnish Estates to the Proposals of H.I.M. Nicholas II., Grand Duke of Finland, for a New Military Service Law in Finland (Eyre and Spottiswoode). It is a complete exposition of the constitutional objection of the Finns to the proposal to assimilate their military system to that of the Russian Empire, which they declare is in direct violation of the fundamental laws which are their guarantee. The volume includes 250 pages, and we would commend it to all interested in this important question. The explanation is complete, though, owing to the fact that the Emperor's proposition was regarded as unconstitutional, the Estates did not enter upon a consideration of its substance.

Narrative of Cruises in the Mediterranean, by William Black, L.R.C.S.E. (Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh). The author of these notes was surgeon on board the Euryalus and Chanticleer during the war of Greek independence, 1822-1826, and they are edited by his son, Mr. W. G. Black. It is a very simple record of experiences, though cast sometimes in a rather grandiloquent style, and is particularly interesting as showing what were the experiences of naval officers at that time. We wish Mr. Black had said more about life on board, and we could have spared many such passages as this:—"Unlike the calm blaze of noon in the country, there was nothing from without to break in on the moment; no noise of birds nor of living nature; no din of rural work nor rural throng; and the naturally restless energies of the seaman were as completely suspended as the motion of the barque in which he tried to carol away the listless hour of vacuity." It would have been interesting to catch the echo of that "carolling." However, a sea record of the time could not but be attractive, and the reader will find much to instruct and amuse him in the book.

Messrs. Gale and Polden, the well-known military publishers at Aldershot, have issued a second edition of Major-Gen. H. Hallam Parr's Further Training and Employment of Mounted Infantry and Yeomanry. The little book is of particular value in relation to the war in South Africa, instructive at every point, and everything it should be.

Messrs. Methuen's History of the Boer War, appearing serially, has now reached the eventful day of Dec. 15, in its 9th part. It is well written by F. H. E. Cunliffe, well illustrated, and admirably printed on the best paper, and we do not know where the general reader will find a better narrative.

Shooting: Game and Gun Room Notes, by "Blagdon" (Goswell and Harrison); well illustrated; is full of useful information for sportsmen, and makes a capital shillingsworth.

Messrs. Blackwood have added Paradise Lost, I.-IV., to their admirable series of English Classics.

Messrs. Wm. Clowes and Sons, Limited, have now in preparation the second edition of Major A. W. A. Pollock's Simple Lectures for Company Field Training. The work has been entirely revised with numerous additions, including an epitome of tactics, founded on the author's experiences in South Africa as Special Correspondent to the Times.

THE SCARCITY OF OFFICERS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I hear from South Africa that many of the regiments are sadly short of officers for duty. It seems a most extraordinary thing that the Horse Guards do not order those officers now in England on leave, many of whom are perfectly well in health, to rejoin their regiments at once. The men are sent back sharp; why not the officers? The service clubs are full just now of recovered warriors, who are, most of them, only too anxious to go back into the fighting line. The voyage back to the Cape would mean everything to many of the officers to whom I refer, and it is wrong to keep them idle in England.

August 13.

FAIR PLAY.

A WORD first on the proposal to abolish the Militia (Army) Reserve. It is, no doubt, disliked by Militia officers as taking away from the force—ever from 20,000 to 30,000 below its establishment—30,000 of its best men. The objection is quite natural; but the remedy lies, not in the abolition of this most valuable Army Reserve, but in the raising of an additional Militiaman for every one who joins it. This, I have always understood, was General Peel's intention. Now to this Militia officers could not, and would not, object, as the ranks of their regiments would then no longer be depleted. But what strikes me as truly comic in the idea of doing away with Militia (Army) Reserve is the fact that there is always difficulty, more or less, in getting sufficient Army recruits; and yet this proposal would, if carried, deprive the Army of the 30,000 good soldiers it now has in the Militia Reserve.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1900.

THE NAVAL RESERVE ACT, 1900.

THE purpose of the new Naval Reserve Bill, in so far as it is intended to make further provision for a reserve to the Navy, is one which cannot be called in question. The fact, too, that little comment has been made on the subject in the Press, may be taken as a sign of the confidence which is placed in the Admiralty. Yet it is surely necessary to look closely into the terms of a legal enactment which marks the establishment of a new principle in the system of manning the Fleet. In the memorandum issued with the Bill, its objects are summarised. We are told that it is to secure a new division of the Reserve, in which men who have served in the Navy as seamen, stokers, or marines may be enrolled after their first period of service, or in some special cases at an earlier period. Experience, it is alleged, shows that few men who have served in the Navy join the present Royal Naval Reserve, which consists mainly of seamen of the mercantile marine and fishermen. The scheme proposes to raise by degrees and maintain a Reserve force of 15,000 men, and to incorporate in this Reserve all qualified long-service pensioners, some of whom now compose the Seamen Pensioner Reserve. In the case of long-service pensioners of the classes referred to who enter the Navy after the passing of the Bill, service in the Reserve is to be a condition of the payment of their pension. It is proposed to pay the former a retainer of 6d. a day, and after the termination of their service in the Reserve a life pension of 8d. The latter will receive an increase to their pension of 5d. a day from the age of 50 until they receive the Greenwich age-pension. The regulations as to travelling expenses, gratuitous clothing, &c., which apply to the Royal Naval Reserve, will also be applicable to this division of it. The Bill is also meant to apply to persons employed as artisans or otherwise in any of the naval or civil establishments under the Admiralty, subject to a condition of service in the Reserve.

The Act, therefore, proposes to tap three separate sources for the purpose of increasing the Reserve. Those in the first category are pensioners, or bluejackets and marines who may become entitled to their pensions subject to a condition of service in this division of the Reserve, with, of course, those men who, being pensioners, have already enlisted in the Reserve. In the second category are apparently included all the bluejackets and marines who may become entitled to pensions after the passing of the Act, and who will be required, as a condition of receiving their pensions, to join the Reserve. In the third category are the artisans and others employed in Admiralty establishments, and who in future will apparently be bound, as a condition of their employment, to serve in the Reserve. The first point of doubtful value which occurs to us in connection with the scheme is that which we have referred to as a new principle in naval service. There are admittedly a certain proportion of men who, after their first period of service, now fixed at twelve years, leave the Navy and seek civil employment, but we believe it has also been shown that by far the larger proportion either re-engage at once or do so after a short period during which they have been enabled to find out the fallacious nature of their views of employment on shore. Now it seems, on the face of it, that the Admiralty, with a view to increasing the number of the Reserve, are about to enter into a competition with themselves for the services of these men. It is even contemplated by the phrase "in some special cases at an earlier period, at the discretion of the Admiralty" to take some men, to an unknown number, from the service before they have completed their twelve years' service and pass them into a reserve. If this is not the same system which has worked with such harmful results in the case of the Army, it is something analogous to it. The cadres of the active list are already taxed, and as some think, with ill results, for the purpose of increasing the coastguard. It has even been alleged that the coastguard has deteriorated as a consequence of this action. And if the result of the new Act is to induce what we may call immature and partially trained bluejackets and marines to leave the Service and pass into the Reserve, its advantages are certainly questionable.

On the other hand, where the Act enables the Admiralty to enrol those men who have already left the Service after their first period and found civil employment, it must have general approval. Also, it will be generally deemed a proper course to make service in the Reserve a condition of employment in the Admiralty establishments, and this should be the case without exception where the training of the man fits him for the duty. It was stated by Mr. Goschen that the Admiralty believe they will obtain 15,000 men by this measure, although they do not expect to enrol the whole of them at once. The working of the act will need to be closely watched, for as we have indicated, the terms may prove so attractive as to operate disadvantageously to the service. It is easy to see how the numbers of this division may be run up without giving any real addition to the strength of the effective Reserve. If by the experiment the Admiralty can reach the men who have left the Navy without pensions, and the Navy League has estimated that there are some twenty-five thousand men in the country under forty years of age who have thus drifted out of touch with the Service, then its success will be undoubted; but if, instead of this, it is found to be diminishing the proportion of those that re-engage for a second term of service, or is being used to draw men to the shore with less than twelve years' service, then the sooner the Act is repealed, or its terms revised, the better.

THE LOSS OF THE "FRAMÉE"

SIR EDMUND MONSON was right in saying that intelligence of the loss of the Framée would be received with sincere and friendly sympathy in England, and especially in the Royal Navy. Seamen run common dangers, and ever hasten to extend the ready hand of help to comrades in disaster or misfortune, and therefore we would tender full and hearty sympathy to the French Navy in the loss it has suffered through this deplorable catastrophe. The collision between the Brennus, which flies the flag of Vice-Admiral Fournier, and the Framée proves to have been even more disastrous than was at first supposed, and of the crew of fifty-six only fourteen men were saved. All the officers on board the vessel perished with her, these including Lieut.-Commander Mauduit du Plessis, who was in command, Sub-Lieut. Epailard, and the chief engineer. The Echo de Paris states that at the time of the catastrophe the Framée being abreast of the Brennus, Lieut. de Mauduit suddenly gave the order to bear 20 degrees to port and increase speed, but that his instructions were misunderstood. Almost immediately the destroyer crashed into the stem of the Brennus, and foundered in a few seconds. Admiral Fournier gives reasons for thinking there was a mistake at the helm, though he says the actual cause may remain for ever unexplained. The unfortunate destroyer was quite a new vessel, launched last year at Bordeaux, and is a sister of the Pique, Epée, and Yatagan. She displaced 319 tons, and was credited with a speed of 26 knots.

There appears to have been a good deal of misunderstanding in regard to the circumstances of this deplorable mishap, and the daily papers have certainly gone wrong. One report was that the squadron was at the time steaming "in column of six," but this expression describes nothing in any system of tactics, and the truth appears to be that the battleships were in single column line ahead, with the torpedo flotilla on the port head, the speed being 10 knots, and the position about 70 miles south of Cape St. Vincent.

It would appear that the Brennus wished to communicate with the unfortunate destroyer, and signalled her to approach, which she did at sixteen knots. Her commander then, according to one report, noting that she was getting too close to the flagship, "ordered the man at the wheel to put the helm twenty degrees to port." Evidently he did nothing of the kind, for this order would have caused the very disaster that is alleged to have occurred through a misunderstanding of his order. Apparently it is not known to the writers of the daily press that the words of command in the French Navy are quite different from our own. With us the order "Port!" refers to the helm, and the ship turns to starboard; with the French the command "Bâbord!" (port) refers to the ship herself, and this must evidently have been the order given by the gallant and unfortunate officer who, like his companions, behaved with true courage, and in the spirit of the self-sacrificing code of honour which prevails in the naval profession. We believe it is uncommon for French officers to direct the course of the helm; but if they should do so, the command would be "Bâbord la barre!" or "Tribord la barre!" It is extremely unlikely that any confusion can have arisen through this, and probably, as Admiral Fournier in his report indicates, the defective working of the helm may have been the true cause of the mishap.

From the disaster nothing new can be learned. It is one of those unfortunate accidents which, in all likelihood, no one could have foreseen. It shows once again that, through human fallibility, as in the case of the Victoria, or the failure of some mechanism, the lives of many may be sacrificed, and it illustrates one of the dangers of the naval profession. All is not lost in such a case, for the gallant officers have left an example which may serve as an inspiration to many. It may be, from the reports which have been published, that the sinking of the Framée will deserve to rank with those sublime examples of courage and calmness in disaster—the loss of the Birkenhead, and more recently of the German cruiser Itis in China. Probably there is no navy that does not glory in such examples.

Navv Notes.

An interesting and valuable correspondence is being published by the Times, in reference to our so-called "coast defences." It will be remembered that one of our contemporary's special correspondents stated, in connection with the reception of the fleet at Milford, that it does not seem to have occurred to those in charge of the harbour defence that a navigator cannot see his leading mark with a searchlight blazing into his eyes. Another correspondent reported that the Sultan was detained for nearly an hour at the entrance to Lough Swilly before the military authorities could make up their minds as to whether she was a friend or an enemy. Similarly, at Berehaven the Furious was fired into by those whose duty it was to give her protection. In connection with the last-named circumstance, Lieut.-Colonel Cotter, who was the "fortress commander" at Berehaven, explains that what happened was the result of "the strictly confidential regulations governing the entry of her Majesty's ships into defended ports," which would therefore appear to be in need of immediate revision. It is to be hoped that the late "fortress commanders" at Milford and Lough Swilly will similarly explain circumstances which point to a very real danger in war time. It is quite likely that these incidents will be utilised in a fresh demand for the Admiralty to take over from the War Office the defence of the ports. In reality they do not support such an application at all; what is actually wanted is that those entrusted with harbour defence should clearly understand what it is they have got to defend.

the harbour against, and that the primary requirement of a British admiral is that the entrance should be unobstructed, so far as his ships are concerned.

To-day the Mediterranean Squadron, organised in seven divisions, will leave Malta for its third summer cruise and an extended course of fleet exercises. The Ramillies, Royal Sovereign, Illustrious, Ocean, and Astræa, comprising the first division, with the Renown, Cæsar, Empress of India, Royal Oak, Venus, and Pyramus, of the second division, will proceed to Suda Bay. While at this place Sir John Fisher will present to Prince George of Greece the insignia of the Order of St. Michael and St. George recently conferred upon His Royal Highness by the Queen. On Wednesday next the first and second divisions proceed to Lemnos in continuance of the cruise among the islands. The Canopus, Vulcan, Dryad, Andromeda, Barham and Brisk comprising the third division; the Coquette, Conflict, Banshee, Dragon, Boxer, and Bruiser, of the fourth division; the Orwell, Cygnets, Foam, Griffon, Earnest, and Ardent, of the fifth division; with the Hazard, Hornet, Speedy, and six torpedo boats of the seventh will go to Kalamaki, in Greece, accompanied by the Tyne and Surprise. The whole squadron will rendezvous at sea about September 9, and go on to Salonika, to remain there till September 18. It will then cruise and exercise in the neighbourhood of Kava, returning to Salonika on October 19. This place will be left on October 29 for Phalerum, and the squadron will return to Malta in the early part of November.

On Monday last the Hogue was launched from the works of Vickers, Son, & Maxim, at Barrow, the christening ceremony being performed by Lady Muncaster. The Hogue is an armoured cruiser of the Cressy type, carrying as her heaviest guns two 9.2-in., mounted in armoured barbets, with a secondary battery of eight 6-in. and twelve 12-pr. quick-firers, besides machine guns. She is fitted with thirty Belleville boilers, and the estimated speed to be obtained is 21 knots. The Hogue is reported to be in a very forward condition, so that it may be hoped that her delivery at Devonport will not be long delayed. It is very desirable that these armoured cruisers should be pushed on as rapidly as possible, as they are a class of vessel much wanted in the sea-going fleet.

It is reported that the Admiralty have decided to constitute the coaling of the fleet a separate service as regards administration and estimates, &c. The report states that at Sheerness the general supervision will be vested in the captain of the port guardship, with a warrant officer to act under him in charge of coaling operations. At the other ports retired lieutenants, with retired warrant officers under them, are to be placed in charge of all the coal lighters there and the general superintendence of the supply of coal to ships. The new departure is of good promise, and similar arrangements might well be extended to Portland. For several years now a number of retired officers have been gaining experience during the manœuvres in connection with this matter of coaling, the importance of which is not to be gainsaid. It is just as well that the training which these officers have obtained should be utilised in the manner indicated by the report, and it should not fail to result not only in an increase of the facilities at the home ports, but also in a series of valuable suggestions which should lead to further improvement. We noticed some time since the purchase of improved lighters and other matters indicating that the Admiralty were alive to the necessity of accelerating the rate of coaling our warships, and we are glad to believe that this report shows that further steps are being taken in the desired direction.

The composition of the naval and colonial force which is being sent to China from the Australian colonies does not appear quite clearly from Mr. Goschen's recent statement in Parliament. It includes the gunboat Protector, with a crew of 112 officers and men from South Australia; 200 from Victoria, and 300 from New South Wales. The whole force is to be under the Naval Discipline Act, and at the disposal of the Naval Commander-in-Chief, for such service as he may determine. The Australian naval forces consist in all of about 600 officers and men, so that the men from Victoria and New South Wales are presumably troops. The patriotism and devotion of the colonies is again displayed by the prompt despatch of this little force. The loan of the gunboat is also a healthy sign of the times, indicating, perhaps, that Australia would not desire to insist upon her "pound of flesh" in the event of a naval war, by retaining a fleet in local waters which might, in the view of the Admiralty, be better employed elsewhere.

The new Royal yacht is undergoing her steam trials this week. She is to make three runs of forty-eight hours' duration, gradually increasing the horse power, if all goes well, and the usual run of eight hours' duration at full power. The sea-going qualities of the much criticised vessel will afterwards be tested in the Atlantic. Last week the yacht was heeled in the basin at Portsmouth, with satisfactory results, and she also completed her first trial of 5,000 horse-power for 48 hours satisfactorily. Her speed was 16½ knots, and her mean consumption of coal was 1.95 lbs. per i.h.p. per hour for all purposes. The professional officers present at the trial expressed themselves as highly pleased with the yacht's behaviour.

It is not clear from the telegrams from China whether a naval brigade accompanies the expeditionary force to Peking or no. The first telegrams from private sources stated that only the men of the Terrible had gone beyond Tien-tsin. Next we heard that the Terrible was at Wei-hai-Wei, and that once more, as happened in South Africa, Captain Scott's guns and carriages had gone to the front, while he and his men had gone to sea. Then there was an intimation from Austrian sources that after the battle of Pei-tang "the Naval Brigade returned to the ships," but it was not made certain if this applied to the foreign seamen or our own bluejackets. On Wednesday a telegram stated that a naval brigade of 600 men under Captain Callaghan, of the Endymion, had left Tien-tsin for Yang-tsun. This only complicates the matter, as there are at least two captains senior to him in the ships lying off Taku. Captain G. V. Juke of the Barfleur is also mentioned as in charge of the marines. General Gaselee in his report makes mention of marines as much exhausted with the heat, but we shall probably have to wait for letters before getting at the actual circumstances. During the last week full accounts have been received of the Taku engagement, while with regard to the relief of Admiral Seymour's force, it is stated that a 12-pounder from the Terrible arrived at Tien-tsin just in time to knock over the only Chinese gun which could have shelled the retreating column.

The unveiling of the Admiral Blake statue at Bridgwater, Admiral Blake's birthplace, is to take place on Thursday, October 4. Lord Brassey will perform the ceremony, which will be followed by a dinner at the Town Hall, to be attended, amongst others, by Sir Walter Besant, Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Mr. Conan Doyle, the Lord Mayor of Bristol, and several distinguished representatives of the Army and Navy.

On Wednesday an inquest was held at Portland into the circumstances attending the death of Edward Delmar Morgan, lieutenant of the Majestic, who killed himself by jumping from the mast of the ship. It appears that some days since Lieut. Morgan complained to Captain Egerton that some one on board was conspiring against him, but there were no grounds for the assertion. He was somewhat strange in his manner, and later had another interview with his captain, repeating the same statement. Instructions were given to have him watched, the surgeon on board being of opinion that the officer's mind was unhinged, and a marine was entrusted with that duty. In the morning at half-past seven the unfortunate officer left his cabin and went on deck. While the sentry was not watching him he climbed the mast of the ship, and before any steps could be taken to prevent him he threw himself to the deck, death being almost instantaneous. The jury returned a verdict of suicide during temporary insanity.

Rickets (Acting) to Duke of Wellington, for Glory (Aug. 14).

Assistant Engineers.—L. M. Hobbs to Hyacinth (undated). C. E. M. Roe to Arrogant (Aug. 14).

THE CHINA CRISIS.

Sunday, Aug. 12.

Gen. Chaffee informed the United States Government that the international commanders had decided previous to the capture of Yang-tsun to hold another conference there for the purpose of selecting a line of march on Peking.

The 4th Gurkhas and the 30th Bombay Infantry proceed to Shanghai at once from Hong Kong by the transports Canning and Duke of Portland respectively. The 2nd Bengal Infantry will follow on arrival.

The Russian General Staff have received the following despatch from Vice-Admiral Alexieff, from Nin-chwang, via Chifu, dated the 5th inst.:

"The Chinese town of Nin-chwang, on the Gulf of Liaotung, was captured by our troops on the 4th inst. The vessels Otwastchy and Gremiastchy co-operated in the capture of the place. The mining boat No. 206 and the Otwastchy bombarded the town, and the Gremiastchy the fort. The inhabitants are being disarmed, and a Russian administration introduced."

General Grodekoff sends the following despatch to the Minister of War, dated Khabarovka, the 9th inst.:

"Kharbin was captured by our detachment on the 3rd inst. On the 4th inst. a parade of the troops was held in celebration of the name day of the Empress Marie Feodorowna."

Count von Waldersee has been congratulated by the Emperor of Austria and the King of Italy on his appointment to the supreme command of the allied punitive force in Northern China. He will sail from Genoa on the 21st inst.

The Kölnische Zeitung learns that the German reinforcements for China will amount to four battalions, two batteries of artillery, two companies of pioneers, and one squadron of cavalry, or, altogether, something less than 5,000 men.

The East Asia Steamship Company of Copenhagen has concluded a contract with the Russian Government for the transport of 10,500 soldiers to China. The steamers will sail from St. Petersburg and Odessa. For the fulfilment of the above contract the company is chartering 14 Danish, British, German, French, and Austrian steamers.

Monday, Aug. 13.

A copy of the Imperial Chinese Edict appointing Li Hung Chang to negotiate peace with the Powers has been presented to Lord Salisbury.

Further details of the fighting at Pei-tang and Yang-tsun received. In the attack on Yang-tsun the British were in the centre, and they carried the first line of defence under a heavy rifle fire. At Pei-tang the Japanese lost 300 killed and wounded, and the British 24 wounded. The other contingents sustained no casualties. The Chinese losses are said to have been inconsiderable. The day after the battle of Yang-tsun—which took place on the 6th inst.—the German, Austrian, and Italian forces returned to Tien-tsin, while the other contingents pursued the Chinese.

Great Britain, the United States, and Japan have approved the appointment of Count von Waldersee as Commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces.

Outrages and disturbances are reported to-day from Swatau, Ta-tung, and Chung-King.

M. de Witte, the Russian Minister of Finance, has received a report regarding the capture of Kharbin by the Russian column. The Chinese have evacuated all their posts between San-sin and Kharbin and have fled. Reports are to hand regarding the serious attacks on Kharbin made by the Chinese on the 26th and 30th ult. The enemy, however, were driven back and three guns with ammunition were captured.

The French contingent for China left Marseilles yesterday amid scenes of great enthusiasm. President Loubet addressed the troops, and handed them their colours.

Tuesday, Aug. 14.

Gen. Chaffee in a report dated the 10th inst., says:—"Arrived Hoshiwu yesterday."—Ho-hsi-wu is half way between Tien-tsin and Peking, on the Pei-ho.

Lieut.-Gen. Linevitch reports to the Russian Minister of War, under date Aug. 8 and 9:

"By a mutual agreement of the chiefs of the expedition the troops under my command as senior officer, at daybreak on Aug. 6, began an attack on Pei-tang, a strongly fortified position, 12 versts from Tien-tsin, on the road to Peking. The position was strengthened by extensive floods, and the left flank was mined and provided with bomb proofs. The Chinese force amounted to about 26,000 men, under the command of the Viceroy Chung-To-Chu. At 10 o'clock in the morning the left flank of the position and two railway bridges were captured and occupied by the Russian troops, and at the same time the Japanese, British, and American troops, supported by the 3rd East Siberian Rifle Brigade, under Gen. Stoessel, turned the right flank and carried the position of Pei-tang, which commanded both sides of the river. Owing to their enforced rapid retreat, the Chinese were unable to destroy the bridge of boats. Russian, British, and Japanese infantry, cavalry, and artillery were despatched in pursuit of the fleeing enemy. Our casualties were six men. The Japanese lost over 200, and the British and Americans about 20. The Chinese loss was heavy. Thirteen guns, one of which was captured by the Cossacks, and the whole camp were taken."

In a previous despatch, dated Aug. 6, Lieut.-Gen. Linevitch says:—

"At four o'clock this morning the Russians, in conjunction with the Allied troops, continued their advance from Pei-tang, on Yang-tsun, along both banks of the river. After a march of 20 versts, in a temperature of over 100 deg., the fortifications and town of Yang-tsun were stormed and taken. Our advance guard, under the command of Colonel Modl, attacked the right flank of the enemy's position, and after a stubborn fight, which lasted three hours, made themselves masters of the position. They occupied the railway bridge, the station, and two bridges of boats across the river. The British, Japanese, and Americans co-operated on the enemy's front. Their losses are at present unknown. Our losses were two officers and 16 men wounded. The Chinese, who were about 20,000 strong, lost heavily. Our troops are bivouacking in Yang-tsun, and are in splendid health."

An unofficial telegram states that the French artillery played a brilliant part in the operations against Pei-tang, and that the whole French Expeditionary Force participated in the movement against Yang-tsun:—

"In spite of the troops being greatly fatigued, their dash and spirit were remarkable, and largely contributed to the capture of this important strategic point."

Wednesday, Aug. 15.

The following telegrams, dated Chefoo, Aug. 11, received on the 14th inst. by the Secretary of State for India from Sir A. Gaselee, commanding the China Expeditionary Force are published:—

"Tien-tsin, Aug. 5.—Japanese dislodged enemy, Pei-tang, this morning in gallant style with support of British and Americans. Former slight casualties, about 25. No casualties among British officers reported. Japanese losses much heavier, but unknown. Enemy in full retreat on left bank of the river, right bank believed impassable, owing to inundations."

"Have crossed River Pei-ho to left bank. Advance this morning to Yang-tsun."

"Marched from Pei-tang nine miles towards Yang-tsun. After ascertaining that enemy held railway embankment, we formed for attack with Americans on our right and a Russian battalion on extreme left. After rapid advance of nearly three miles, during which they were under hot shell and rifle fire, our troops carried first line of defence in fine style. We are now encamped on left bank Pei-ho, near railway bridge over Pei-ho. Casualties about 50 killed. No. 5075 Pte. T. Morgan, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, died of sunstroke. No. 5488 Pte. W. Huddleston, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, severely wounded; Lieut. Costello, 1st Sikhs, bullet wound knee. No other casualties among British officers. Further casualties will telegraph later."

Mr. Scott, the British Consul, has received a cipher message from Sir Claude Macdonald from Peking, dated Aug. 6. It says:—"Situation desperate. 10 days food remains. Unless relieved general massacre probable. Chinese offered escort Tien-tsin, but refused. Over 200 women and children in Legation."

The commandant of the German cruiser squadron in Chinese waters reports that the Gefion has been at Shanghai since the 14th ult. for the protection of German interests, and that the Iltis is on her way thither. The Schwalbe and See Adler have also been ordered to Shanghai.

It is reported from Canton that all the forts have been newly armed with guns. The strength of the garrisons is roughly 1,000 Manchus, 2,000 Tartars, and 15,000 Black Flags, armed with Mausers and Winchester, besides several thousand local levies. The Chinese are attempting to obtain the services of a foreigner to lay mines in the Bogue Channel.

The official Invalides Russe publishes the following appointments:—Lieut.-Gen. Linevitch, Commander of the Siberian Corps, to be Commander of the 1st Siberian Army Corps; Baron Kaulbars, Commander of the 2nd Cavalry Corps, to be Commander of the 2nd Siberian Army Corps; Major-Gen. Wasiliewski, to be Chief of the Staff of the 1st Siberian Army Corps, and Major-Gen. Kolenko to be Chief of the Staff of the 2nd Siberian Army Corps, and Col. Martos to be Chief of the Staff of the forces landed in China.

The transport Ujina has left Calcutta for China. The Fürst Bismarck arrived at Tsin-tau, Kiaouchiao Bay, yesterday. The Wittekind carrying the 1st Marine Batn., and the Frankfurt, carrying the 2nd Marine Batn., called at Tsin-tau yesterday, and proceeded at once for Taku. The Cologne Gazette announces that the embarkation of the new East Asian Army Brigade will commence upon Aug. 31, and will continue for eight days. Eight steamers of the North German Lloyd and some of the Hamburg-American Line have been chartered to convey 7,000 men.

Thursday, Aug. 16.

The Secretary of the Admiralty informs us that Rear-Admiral Bruce, telegraphing from Taku, reports that he received the following telegrams from the general at Ho-Shi-wa:—

"Aug. 10.—Troops distant from Peking about 27 miles, experienced but very little opposition. Position had been prepared by the enemy, but as the allies advanced they fled. The Tartar cavalry was charged by two squadrons of the Bengal Lancers, and many of the former were killed, and the standards of Gens. Mah and Sung were captured. The troops were much exhausted with the heat, but their health and spirits are otherwise excellent. Aug. 11.—The advance may be somewhat delayed as rain is falling."

The admiral second in command of the German cruiser squadron cables from Taku on Aug. 12 as follows:—

"Capt. Pohl, commanding the Hansa, left Tien-tsin on the evening of Aug. 9 with four officers and 107 men for Peking. Capt. Hacht, the first officer of the Hertha, followed on the afternoon of Aug. 10, with two officers and 150 men and provisions. Water supplies and a baggage train are following. On the morning of Aug. 10 160 Austrians left Tong-ka, following Capt. Pohl."

A telegram from Shanghai states that the troops from India, diverted to that place from Hong Kong, arrived on Tuesday, but have not yet been landed. The Viceroy now objects to their disembarkation. His attitude is attributed to influence exercised by the French and Russian Consuls. All the British subjects here are indignant. Admiral Seymour is awaiting instructions from the British Government.

The Russian warships Admiral Korniloff and Gremiastchy and the French warship Admiral Charnier have arrived.

A West River steamer from Wu-Chau reports having passed considerable numbers of Chinese troops proceeding up the West River. They are probably the Black Flags who were recently reported to be on the way to Peking. The Robin was at Wu-Chau.

There had been fresh anti-Christian disturbances in the neighbourhood of Swatau. The Mohawk was there.

The Argonaut and the Russian cruiser Admiral Nachimoff from Singapore, arrived at Hong Kong, and the Austro-Hungarian warship Kaiserin und Koenigin Maria Theresia at Chifu.

Friday, Aug. 17.

The allied troops are reported to have arrived on Wednesday in Peking. Chang-chia-wan and Tung-chaw, the last of the Chinese positions on the Peiho, were captured on the 12th inst. The fighting at the former place seems to have been severe, as the Chinese left 500 dead on the field. The casualties of the Allies were slight. Tung-chaw, which is eleven miles from Peking, was occupied by the Japanese without opposition. A large quantity of stores and arms was seized.

The following telegram has been received by the Secretary of State for India from Sir A. Gaselee, commanding the China Expeditionary Force:—

"Hoshiwu, Aug. 9.—In action of Aug. 5 brunt of fighting fell on 1st Sikhs and 24th Punjab Infantry, who advanced in extended formation and carried the position with a rush. Had it not been for this steady and rapid advance in the face of heavy rifle and shell fire, their losses would have been far heavier. As it was, most of the losses occurred in earlier stages of fight."

"Hoshiwu, Aug. 10.—Progress satisfactory. Enemy had prepared a position here, but fled on the approach of allies. Two squadrons Bengal Lancers got in among Tartar cavalry and killed many, capturing three standards of Gens. Mah and Sung. Men much exhausted by heat, especially our Marines. Many cases of sunstroke. Otherwise health and spirit of troops excellent. Supplies and transport sufficient for occasions."

"Matao, Aug. 11.—Arrived this morning here early, after most trying night march; troops of all nationalities suffering severely from heat; ten of our horses died yesterday from effect of sun. Enemy believed to be entrenched north of Chang-chia-wan. No further news of Legations."

Matao is about 24 miles from Peking and 13 from Hoshiwu, when Gen. Gaselee telegraphed yesterday.

The officer commanding the lines of communication in China telegraphs from Liukungtao, on the 14th inst.: "Gen. Gaselee has fought his third action successfully. He is probably now in Peking. Our casualties slight. The enemy is demoralised."

A despatch from Tien-tsin, dated the 14th inst., says:—"The allied forces have captured Chang-chia-wan with slight loss. The Chinese left 500 dead. The remainder fled, some to Tung-chow and some to Peking."

At a meeting of the Consuls at Shanghai on Wednesday no objection was raised to the landing of British troops by the other Consuls, but they declared that if the troops were landed their Governments would follow the same course. The British Consul objected, and threatened that the troops now ready to land would be withdrawn. It is rumoured that 25,000 Japanese troops have been ordered to Korea. It is stated that the Russian occupation of Niuchwang has incensed Japan. Great Britain's decision to land troops at Shanghai is ascribed thereto, and has Japan's support. Russia, France, and Germany oppose the landing of the troops, while the United States maintains a neutral attitude.

The French cruiser Friant and the French transport Cachar, with 1,100 troops on board, have arrived at Hong Kong. The Italian steamer Nord America, with Russian troops for China, left Odessa, carrying 1,200 men. The Volunteer Fleet steamer Kherson, takes 1,400 men. The transport conveying the 9th Cavalry, which is a coloured regiment, has left San Francisco for Taku.

Navy Personal.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Frederick Richards had the honour of being received by Her Majesty at Osborne last Friday week on returning from the funeral of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Admiral of the Fleet the Earl of Clanwilliam is staying at Kissenegen.

Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Bart., Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, continues in that appointment until the end of next month. The statement that he will be advanced to the rank of admiral of the fleet is illusory. This could only be ensured by the voluntary retirement of either the Earl of Clanwilliam, Sir Algernon Lyons, or Sir Nowell Salmon, unless her Majesty were pleased to mark her appreciation of Sir Michael's distinguished career by specially promoting him prior to his compulsory retirement in March next.

Admiral Sir C. F. Hotham, who, it is now stated, will relieve Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour in the Portsmouth command, was recently in command at the Nore, and has been at the Admiralty.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fullerton's retention on the active flag list to enable him to continue in command of the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert appears to have been specially provided for on May 15 last. We referred thereto in our issue of the 26th idem. He is now available until 1905 as an active flag officer.

Rear-Admiral Rodney Lloyd, who obtains his step by Vice-Admiral Sir John Fullerton becoming supernumerary to the establishment of his rank, secures promotion at the age of fifty-nine, and is thereby able to remain on the active list six years from the present period. His recent good services at Malta undoubtedly assure him another opportunity of hoisting his flag.

Rear-Admiral H. L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, left Wellington, N.Z., on Sunday last for the naval headquarters, Sydney, N.S.W.

Rear-Admiral A. K. Wilson, V.C., Controller of the Navy, accompanied the First Lord of the Admiralty at his inspection of the Elswick Ordnance Works and shipbuilding yard on Tuesday last.

Commodore E. H. Meggs-Davis's appointment as nominated member of the Legislative Council of Jamaica has been approved by her Majesty.

Commodore E. S. Poë, commanding the Training Squadron, arrived at Portsmouth from Lerwick on Monday, his month's cruise to northern ports having been abandoned. The St. George, bearing his broad pendant, will now be refitted.

Commodore Francis Powell, of Hong Kong Naval Establishment, obtains the good service pension vacant by the promotion of Captain R. W. Craigie.

Commodore R. L. Groome left Monte Video for Rio de Janeiro and the northern portion of his command on Tuesday last.

Captain Robert Craigie, of the Cambridge, becomes a flag officer by the promotion of Rear-Admiral Rodney Lloyd, at a comparatively early age. Only two other rear-admirals at present on the active list, A. W. Fanshawe and L. A. Beaumont, were junior to him in age when they attained that rank. As he can now remain fourteen years longer on the active list the much-coveted step of admiral of the fleet may probably fall to him.

Captain F. E. E. Brock, having exchanged command of the Highflyer for that of the Eclipse at the Mauritius, parted company from the flag of the Commander-in-Chief on the 4th inst. for England, to pay off the latter vessel.

Captain H. A. Warren's departure in the Vindictive for the Mediterranean to replace the Isis, detached to China, should have taken place on the conclusion of the recent manœuvres, but has been delayed by the defects of that cruiser necessitating her return to Chatham.

Captain Richard H. Peirse, of the Barracouta, who was recently re-appointed to that vessel on promotion, is to proceed to the Naval Yard in Simon's Bay to pay her off for recommissioning by officers and men who will be sent out in the Scylla. Since the commencement of the war in South Africa Captain Peirse has been continuously employed on the Sierra Leone division of the Cape and West African station, and endured a considerable portion of two rainy seasons in the neighbourhood of what was termed in the slave trade period, "The White Man's Grave."

Captain G. H. Cherry, of the Argonaut, arrived at Hong Kong on Monday last. He left Plymouth on July 4, and, therefore, has taken forty days to make the passage. It was intended that this vessel should relieve the Undaunted, but the latter will remain during the present complications in China.

Captain F. O. Pike, of the Minerva, arrived at the Nore on Monday last, and proceeded to Chatham for that cruiser to be docked and refitted.

Captain C. H. Cochran, of the Pegasus, paid off that vessel at Chatham yesterday, and transferred his officers and ships' company to the Sappho, commissioned to-day by Capt. Cecil Burney.

Captain R. C. Sparkes has been appointed to the Forté to take the place of Captain E. P. Jones invalided, and will join her at Sierra Leone, for which port she left Simon's Bay on Thursday last.

Captain Ernest J. Fleet proceeds to Esquimalt to recommission the Thetis on the Pacific station.

Captain John Casement commissions the Amphion at Devonport on the 20th prox. to replace the Leander on the Pacific station, the latter having been more than three years from England.

Commander P. Vaughan-Lewis, of the Hazard, who distinguished himself during the Cretan troubles, is to return home with that vessel on being relieved by Lieut.-Commander H. Williamson, late of the Columbine, who commissions the Speedwell on the 20th prox. for the Mediterranean.

Commander H. J. D. Laxton commissions the Nymhe at Portsmouth on the 4th prox. to replace the Swallow on the South-East Coast of America, the latter vessel having been upwards of three years abroad.

Commander H. C. Martin and Lieut. A. Cary-Elwes have been granted Greenwich Hospital pensions for lieutenants, on augmentation of the number for this award. The latter officer is the only one on the pension list who was not allowed to assume the rank of commander on retirement.

Commander R. H. Travers, late of the Victorious, relieves Captain F. R. W. Morgan, of the Tartar, on promotion.

Commander J. de M. Hutchison, late of the Arrogant, has relieved Captain E. G. Shortland, of the Lion, recently promoted while in command of that training ship.

Lieut.-Commander J. C. Watson, of the Lizard arrived at Hong Kong on the 8th inst. The three vessels detached from the Australian command have now reached the Far East, and will be replaced in the Antipodes by commissioning the Tauranga and Karrakatta, now in reserve at Sydney, N.S.W., with crews from home, and the Archer is to be commissioned at Chatham on the 30th inst.

Staff-Captain A. J. Neville, of Pembroke Dockyard, whose illness we referred to last week, died, we regret to say, on Tuesday last at that establishment.

Lieut. W. H. Cowan, on special service in South Africa, has been granted permission to accept and wear the Order of the Medjidieh 4th Class conferred on him by the Khedive for his services in Egypt with the Nile flotilla under Major-General Lord Kitchener.

Captain Francis Hixson, Commandant of the New South Wales Naval Forces, and Commander E. R. Connor, of the Naval Brigade, proceed with the contingent from that colony for China. Both officers previously served in the Royal Navy. Captain Hixson was a Master (1860) in the Australian Survey and a follower of one of our great naval scientists, the late Admiral Sir Henry Denham, under whom he served in the memorable voyages of the Herald. In 1863 he resigned his commission to join the Marine Board at Sydney, N.S.W. He wears the Royal Humane Society's medal. Commander Connor was a navigating lieutenant of 1872, and retired from ill-health in 1880, after nine years' hard work in surveying the coasts of our island-continent. He joined the Sydney Naval Brigade in 1885. These officers are respectively sixty-five and fifty-five years of age.

Six fleet engineers have been promoted inspectors of machinery on augmentation of the list of that rank. Selection for this advancement appears to have been observed more than seniority. At the same time some of the officers omitted did not seek promotion. The senior of those who obtain their step, Mr. J. Pitt, is in the Royal yacht, Mr. C. Rudd is engineer assistant at the Admiralty, and Messrs. S. J. Robins, R. Mayston, and G. A. Haddy are the chief engineers of Hong Kong, Devonport, and Gibraltar dockyards, where the hard work they have to surmount is justly rewarded by raising them to inspectorial rank.

Inspector-General of Hospitals George MacLean, who was one of the officers of his rank who suffered by the unusual selection of a junior of the inspectorial grade for appointment to the principal naval hospital, has now voluntarily retired. A gold medallist and one holding a doctor's degree in medicine, with large and varied experience in his profession, should not have been overlooked.

Major-General Mackay Heriot, R.M.L.I. (retired), commanding the Plymouth Brigade of Infantry Volunteers that has been under canvas at Hay Tor for a month past, breaks up his camp to-day.

Major G. G. Aston's (R.M.A.) appointment as D.A.A.G. on the lines of communication in South Africa is confirmed.

Captain H. E. Blumberg, R.M.L.I., relieves Captain F. W. Luard, R.M.L.I., as adjutant of the Portsmouth Division, the latter officer's term in that appointment having expired.

Lieut. H. W. Miles, R.M.L.I., relieves Lieut. A. W. Gillies, of the Royal Sovereign, on the transfer of the latter officer to the Indian Staff Corps.

Lieut. A. J. Morse, R.M.L.I., assistant to Professor of Fortification, Royal Naval College, obtains his company by the death in action at Tientsin of Captain H. T. B. Lloyd, R.M.L.I. Tien-tsin of Captain Morse is nearly four years older, and has two years more service than the last subaltern officer, Captain R. O. Paterson, promoted in the Artillery Division.

PRIZE DAY IN THE "BRITANNIA."

Admiral the Right Hon. Lord Charles T. M. D. Scott, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, on Wednesday, distributed the prizes awarded at the final examination on board the Britannia. The Commander-in-Chief was accompanied on the platform by Capt. M. P. O'Callaghan, C.B., in command of the Britannia, Mr. G. B. Mason, R.N., senior naval instructor, and Commander Travers.

Mr. G. B. Mason observed that it was a matter for congratulation that of the 66 cadets who went up all satisfied the examiners. The report stated that the marks obtained in navigation, both practical and theoretical, continue very good, and the average of those in mathematics generally is quite up to the recent standard. The same may be said of those obtained in French. The results of the examination generally he regarded as satisfactory, and expressed a hope that those leaving would work both to retain the knowledge they had acquired and to prepare themselves for the examination which awaits them at Greenwich.

Commander Travers presented the report of the seamanship examiners, who stated that the general result of the examination was very satisfactory. Thirty-seven cadets passed first class, 27 second class, and one was not classed. The examining officers were particularly pleased with the practical work done. This, said Commander Travers, was the result of the excellent work done in the Racer. They had had fine weather, which had enabled them to go out oftener, and the cadets had not suffered so much as usual from sickness. Consequently the cadets had been greatly impressed by what they had seen on board, and the result had been brought out at the examination. The signalling results were most creditable, and the general result showed that the cadets had been carefully and well taught, and had themselves taken great interest in their work.

The Commander-in-Chief expressed his pleasure at receiving such excellent reports. The account given of Mr. Bellairs was especially good. He was pleased to hear what the naval instructor had said about his adding industry to ability. Lots of boys might do better by being industrious. Industry added to ability would bring any boy to the head of the tree if he liked. There were 15 of them going to sea as midshipmen. They had made a first-rate start, and had every chance of getting on well in the service and reaching the highest rank they could hold. They had a better start than the others, especially if they had age on their side. The great thing they had to be careful about now that they had made a good start was to keep it. Those going to sea had responsibilities of command thrown upon them at an early age. They expected the men under them to obey, and it was necessary that they should do so when they were on duty. But they could never expect people to obey them if they did not themselves obey those over them. The secret of discipline was obedience. He did not mean blind obedience, but intelligent obedience; and if they kept that well in view they might depend upon it they would get on as he hoped they all would.

The Commander-in-Chief then distributed the prizes, after which Mrs. O'Callaghan pinned the badges on the arms of the new chief captains and captains as follows:—Chief captains, Mr. Smyth Piggott and Mr. Campbell; fourth term captains, Mr. Benning Mr. Phillimore, Mr. Morris and Mr. Harvey; third term captains, Mr. Cloete, Mr. Bruce Gardyne, Mr. Tuvey, Mr. Bissett, Mr. McHardy, Mr. Gibbs, Mr. Sturgess, and Mr. Boissier.

Capt. O'Callaghan thanked the Commander-in-Chief for giving away the prizes. He said that all the cadets must feel it a great honour to have the Admiral come there in that way. It always seemed to him that when, at the beginning of their career, the cadets saw an admiral before them, they must think of whether they would ever be able to occupy the same position. By industry and determination they could. He hoped the cadets would always remember what the Admiral had told them when they went to sea. They would constantly be put into boats and in charge of guns, which meant that they would be put in charge of men. They would find that a great change. He had often seen a big boat going away from a ship with a dozen men, or perhaps a launch with 30 men, in charge of a very small midshipman, and yet whatever that midshipman told them to do was done with the greatest loyalty by the crew. He thought it was the great sympathy that was engendered by the midshipmen growing up in the service with the men that helped them on in the service. As long as midshipmen went about their work well and were perfectly straight and loyal, they would find that they would get on very well indeed, and as they got on in the service they would approach the position now occupied by the Commander-in-Chief. The proceedings closed with cheers for the Admiral and the National Anthem.

The following is the prize list:—

It has been decided, under the War Office scheme of barrack extension, to build huts for a battalion of infantry 1,000 strong on the Brickfields at Devonport, and another block of similar quarters on the ground adjoining the barracks at Crownhill. Each block will comprise about 60 distinct buildings, including 32 for non-commissioned officers and men and four for officers, besides married quarters, recreation-rooms, canteens, &c. The new buildings at Crownhill and Devonport are to be completed by the first week in November.

PURSUANT to an Order of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice dated the 6th day of August 1900 made in an Action in the matter of the Estate of RICHARD
CRANCH deceased Wilson v. Child 1900 C No.
2394 whereby an enquiry was directed whether
DAVID THOMAS named in the Will of the said
Richard Cranch is living or dead and if dead when he died and who are his legal personal representatives the said David Thomas (if living) and his legal personal representative or next of kin (if he died since the 2nd February 1899) are by their Solicitors on or before the 26th day of October 1900 to come in and prove their claims at the Chambers of Mr. Justice Kekewich Royal Courts of Justice Strand London or in default thereof
they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said order.

The said David Thomas is believed to have been born at Gelligear, near Newport, Monmouthshire, and to have enlisted in the 23rd Welsh Fusilier
Guards between the years 1854 and 1865.

Tuesday, the 6th day of November, 1900, at 12 o'clock at noon, at the said Chambers, is appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon the claims.

Dated this 10th day of August, 1900.

W. O. HEWLETT,
Master of the Supreme Court.
WELLINGTON TAYLOR,
59, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London.
Plaintiff's Solicitor.

TO BE SOLD, with early possession, a Superior DETACHED RESIDENCE, with garden and commodious stabling, in the Parish of Farnborough, near the North Camp, Aldershot.
The property has a frontage of 102 feet to a good road, and a depth of about 250 feet. The house contains on the ground floor:—Entrance Hall, dining, drawing, and morning rooms, kitchen, and usual offices. On the first floor seven bedrooms, with bathroom and lavatory. On the second floor eight bedrooms. There are two conservatories. The stabling consists of two stalls and loose box with harness room, and three grooms' rooms. There is an excellent supply of hard and soft water. The drainage is believed to be perfect, and the whole of the premises are in good repair.—For price and particulars apply by letter to T. G. 67, East Street, Farnham.

OFFICERS' BAGGAGE, &c.

Officers are respectfully informed that Baggage, Luggage, and all kinds of Personal Property are stored at most moderate charges at the Report.

"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch.
No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1875. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery. and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.I.H., R.N.

THE COLT AUTOMATIC QUICK-FIRING MACHINE-GUN AND DUNDONALD GALLOPING GUN-CARRIAGE.

Colt Automatic Guns, taking the English Service ammunition of
'303 calibre, and mounted on DUNDONALD GALLOPING CAR-RIAGES, are now being largely used in South Africa, both by Imperial and Colonial troops.

The Dundonald Carriage carries 2,000 rounds of ammunition, loaded in belts ready for immediate use, and is protected by patent armour plate.
The Carriage can be taken into action by one man and horse, and can be unlim-bered and brought into action within the space of thirty seconds, the Colt Gun being then ready to pour out a stream of bullets at the rate of over 450 rounds per minute, or less if required.

The Dundonald Galloping Ammunition Cart is constructed to carry either 7,000 or 10,500 rounds, loaded in belts and ready for transfer to the Colt Guns at a moment's notice. This also can be galloped into action and unlimbered with the same speed as the Gun Carriage, and therefore forms a most valuable adjunct to the Colt Gun and Dundonald Carriage.

The Dundonald General Service Cart. Specially
adapted for South African Service. The lightest, strongest, most serviceable
Two-wheeled Cart made. Constructed with a Steel Frame and Hide Bottom.
Carries over 1,000 lbs. of Baggage, contains over 100 cubic feet covered space, weighs about 600 lbs.

MILITARY OPERATIONS IN THE TRANSVAAL.

THERE is satisfaction in knowing that the field of active operations in South Africa now lies north of the Vaal River. There is also much satisfaction in the knowledge that the fate of so many British detachments in this war has not been overtaken by Colonel Hore and his little garrison at Eland's River. The capture of that post, isolated as it was, and attacked by a very superior force with guns, was an event that even the greatest heroism could only have temporarily averted had relief not come, and the gallant stand made by the force, for many days under a heavy bombardment, does honour to Colonel Hore and to every man under his command. The relief was effected on the 16th inst. by Lord Kitchener, who, forcing the march of his column, raised the investment of the post, after the garrison had suffered, in killed and wounded, about fifty casualties. The defence of Eland's River deserves to rank with the most creditable incidents of the war.

The despatch from Lord Roberts which reached London on Wednesday evening puts an entirely different complexion on the situation so far as General De Wet is concerned. Lord Roberts states that on the previous day General Baden-Powell fought a protracted action with Grobler, whom he drove back, occupying Pienaar's River Station. At one point of the struggle the two advanced guards galloped into one another; and it was apparently at this juncture that the Rhodesian Regiment suffered twelve casualties, that gallant and popular leader Lieut.-Colonel Spreckley being unfortunately killed. The enemy, however, lost a good many men, and were hotly pursued in their retirement by Colonel Plumer and Colonel Hickman. What was the outcome of this chase is not yet known. Presumably, as the result of the British movements north of Pretoria, De Wet is at last down on his luck. It is believed by Lord Roberts that he has buried his guns, and is trying to make his way back to the Orange River Colony, with a retinue of some 300 followers, all that remain of the 2,000 who left Bethlehem with him, whilst Mr. Steyn is supposed to be travelling with a small body-guard to Machadodorp, in the hope of joining Mr. Kruger.

The line of military activity now extends over some 250 miles of country, between Malmani in the west, through Pretoria to Wonderfontein, on the Delagoa Bay Railway, in the east. Sir Frederick Carrington, holding the most westerly extremity, recently routed at Malmani a commando which, retreating to a fresh position at Buffelshoek, was again attacked and dislodged on the 16th inst. by Lord Errol, the New Zealanders distinguishing themselves greatly in the action. Carrington then returned with his force towards Zeerust. Ian Hamilton meanwhile, marching eastward, occupied Oliphant's Nek in the Megaliesberg on the 17th, capturing two Krupp guns, and Colonel Mahon, on the following day, was engaged on the Crocodile River south-west of Pretoria. Lord Roberts, with his headquarters and reserve force at Pretoria, holds a commanding position in the centre of the great strategic line, whence he can effectively direct operations in whatever quarter they may be carried on. The rapid forward movements from Bloemfontein to Pretoria have, without doubt, found ample justification in the dominating and unassailable position since held by the Commander-in-Chief in the capital of the Transvaal. Established there, at the rail-head of the main line from the south, he has steadily been acquiring a controlling power over the country from west to east by means of his constantly extending wings. Owing to the exigencies of the campaign, the Boers, it is true, reoccupied temporarily the strategic points of Zeerust and Rustenburg, and in the Bush-Veldt north of Pretoria they have found a fresh base of operations and source of supply, but before long, as Lord Roberts's augmenting forces sweep from west to east these advantages must disappear. Even now the operations are in actual progress that will shortly, it is to be hoped, have the result of rolling up the remaining Boer commandoes into the eastern mountains and bringing them to their last stand. On the 17th inst. General Paget's brigade, clearing the district beyond the northern outposts of the British at Pretoria, drove the Boer commando under Viljoen from Hornie's Nek. The enemy retreated further to the north, and Paget, after destroying the road through the Nek, to prevent a fresh advance of the Boers, occupied Waterval, fifteen miles out on the northern railway Baden-Powell having reached the same point on Sunday, and fought an action with Commandant Grobler's rearguard on Wednesday and rescued a hundred British prisoners and captured twenty-five Boers, important events may be looked for in this quarter.

Further to the east the Boers are reported to hold the country between Carolina and Machadodorp, near which place a force of 3,000 Burghers are believed to be in laager, and strongly entrenched, and a commando of 800 with six guns were reported recently to be near Lake Chrissie. On the 14th Strathcona's Horse occupied Carolina unopposed. Next day Sir Redvers Buller reached Twfelaar Farm, twenty miles south of Wonderfontein, where he was to replenish his supplies, and on the 16th he and General French were in touch. On Tuesday last Buller marched to Van Wyk's Vlei. The paucity of the Boer forces must account for the practical immunity from attack on his communications enjoyed by Buller during his northerly march. Pretoria has, since the 16th inst., when the trial of the conspirators against the liberty of Lord Roberts and the lives of his chief officers commenced, become the centre of additional interest. The case has been conducted with a fairness that has elicited, it is said, the praise of the leading Boer citizens of Pretoria. The death sentence, the only one which could in the circumstances follow a verdict of guilty, has very properly been confirmed. Those who have maintained that the leniency hitherto shown has been repaid by baseness, and has signally failed in its object, have received ample justification for their views in the new proclamation of Lord Roberts revoking the former one, and announcing that in future the intolerable acts against which it is directed will be visited with far greater severity. The end of the war is now the grand objective with us all, and it is essential to that end that all attempts to prolong hostilities by methods inadmissible in civilised warfare should be promptly and sternly repressed. Where the Boers will elect to make their last stand cannot be predicted, but there are indications pointing towards Barberton as the probable centre, rather than towards the Lydenburg district. The advantages conferred by a mountainous country are found equally in both, while at Barberton there is the additional advantage of having the Delagoa Bay Railway in rear as a channel of supply, and in the last resort as a means of escape for such of the Boer leaders as may decide on flight. It is pleasing to note the change which has come over military opinion on the Continent, where it is now admitted on all hands that Lord Roberts has displayed generalship of the highest order in the conduct of operations. The only fault that any can find with him is that he is too lenient in his treatment of offences against the usages of civilised warfare, and that as a consequence the campaign is unnecessarily protracted. This, however, is a fault which most of us will be able to make excuses for. There is evidence that the veteran Field-Marshal is beginning himself to recognise his mistake. If he only puts his foot down firmly and punishes acts of treachery as they would be punished in European warfare, the end of the South African War cannot be far off.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN.

LORD ROBERTS has generally let it be known when he is dissatisfied with any of his officers. But a special correspondent, accounting for the last "escapade" of the veteran "general en retraite," declares that the officers in command of the various columns which were directed to "bag" the master fox failed to execute the movements ordered by the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, and that they consequently allowed De Wet to slip through the toils. Lord Roberts recently gave his own views respecting the way in which the Boer strategist baffled his would-be captors, and suggested that it was by breaking up his small force into fragmentary bodies which stole away quasi invisibly from the position in which they were caught up, but it is not easy to understand how these bodies, each with some sort of laager material, waggons, carts, stores, &c., could pass through the surrounding forces. And what becomes of their guns? What, too, becomes of the theory that the Boers are dying to see the end of the war, and are only kept by sjambok and menace of their fellows to follow their leader? De Wet appears with 500 or 700 men and some guns in a certain place. Generals A., B., C., and D. are ordered to march upon the position from their various camps or posts, and to surround the enemy. They do so. De Wet performs his celebrated vanishing trick, and marches off "chaffing" a British general on his way here, snapping "unconsidered trifles" there, to some less frequented scene, and there he takes his stand with 3,000 or 4,000 men and so many guns! Where do the men come from? Why do they swarm to a leader who has merely escaped from his enemy? Where did he get the guns? In this last—the latest reported, we mean—it is asserted by the correspondent who makes the statement about the failure that the Chief of the Staff, Lord Kitchener, and the other generals—three at least—commanding concentrating corps, did not carry out the orders they had received from headquarters, but we have no reason to think Lord Roberts made any such charge, and there is no indication of any special neglect. Were they all at fault? Was there only one delinquent, or were there more? Any way, De Wet had another romp over the veldt; and one other correspondent gives as his solution of the vanishing tricks à la Maskelyne and Cooke of the "fliegende Hollanders" that the British officers in command of the pursuing forces make very slow marches—cover only short distances—and take long halts when they try to overtake this very remarkable leader of men, who could not do better at his business if he wrote "p.s.c." after his name, and came out at the top of his class at Woolwich or Sandhurst, and had studied the art of war all his life. But his business is a desperate one, and it cannot and it will not come to good for the cause of his country, of which he defends the independence skilfully and gallantly against overwhelming forces by the only means in his power.

INSTRUCTIONS have been given for all expedition to be used in getting ready the site on which huts are to be erected for a battalion of Militia at Mill Hill, Middlesex, the future dépôt centre of the Duke of Cambridge's Middlesex Regiment.

Army Notes.

The simple and sympathetic message sent to her Royal Marines at Peking by our Sovereign lady exactly expresses the feeling of the Empire. As at Cawnpore so at Peking, "the banner of England blew" until relief came to put an end to the horrors of the siege. Though the Chinese capital is not on British territory, the story of the defence made by the Legations is a page in our Imperial history as brilliant as any that tell of our expansion into a great Empire. It should be remembered, too, that the residence of the British Ambassador was the rallying point of Europe in Peking, and the splendid resistance made by the Legations against hordes of fanatics thirsting for their blood was largely due to the body-guard of Royal Marines sent up to the city a few days before the outbreak of hostilities. Indeed, throughout the crisis, England has acted in a manner worthy of the high place she holds in the civilisation of the West. Whether she will be able to play an equally effective part in the immediate future is a question. The problem is so vast, and the factors in it are so complicated, that, so far, no official utterance has indulged in anything but the vaguest generalities. That the rebellion fiction will have to be maintained is obvious, and, as it answered in Afghanistan, it will, no doubt, answer in China. How the integrity of the Empire is to be maintained, with Russia and Germany in a position to demand compensation on different lines from the other Powers, is not so clear. True, they both assert that they agree with the main principles of English policy, but "integrity" is a phrase which covers any diplomatic move from the "leasing" of a port to the absorption of a province. China is neither India nor Egypt, however, and the Power which reckons without the Chinese is bound to have a bitter awakening. Their engineers were only prevented by the Allies from flooding the country round Peking by a few hours. The fighting in the Imperial city has been bloody, and the Boxers appear to be as clever as the Boers in cutting communications. The Chinese Question has only just begun.

The story of the Eland's River garrison is, to say the least of it, peculiar. Sir Frederick Carrington, with 600 Colonials and six guns, advanced to Colonel Hore's relief from Zeerust, but failed to force a passage through the Boer lines, and was therefore obliged to retire. General Hamilton, who had his hands full at Rustenburg, trusted to an assumption which afterwards proved mistaken. Hearing heavy firing in the direction of Eland's River, he naturally concluded that Colonel Hore and his Bushmen and Rhodesians were being attacked by the Boers. When the firing ceased two days later he reported to Lord Roberts that the garrison at Eland's River had evidently been captured. This was curiously indefinite, and by no means complimentary to Colonel Hore, who was one of the heroes of Mafeking. It is surely time enough to talk about surrender when the fact is placed beyond dispute by evidence; but apparently surrender has become so frequent in the case of detached bodies of men on our side that it is quietly taken for granted that the worst has happened when a small force has been attacked. Unfortunately, the mistaken assumption in this case contributed in some degree to Lord Kitchener's failure in his pursuit of Christian de Wet. That the stand made by the Bushmen and Rhodesians was a gallant one is as obvious as the supposition that they had surrendered was premature. The significance of a disaster is not to be measured by the number of men lost, or its effect on the immediate neighbourhood, but by its influence on the whole theatre of the war. Does anyone suppose that Sanna's Post, Reddersburg, Honing Spruit, Lindley, and other surprises of a like kind, are regarded by the Boers as of no consequence? On the contrary, they have stiffened the neck of the enemy in the prolongation of the war. Colonel Hore has, therefore, scored a point in our favour by his plucky stand at Eland's River. That it failed to lead to an effective move against De Wet was due to the hasty assumption that he had surrendered. Colonel Hore deserves the utmost praise, and so do the officers and men who acted under his orders. If they had surrendered there might have been excuse for them; but they did not. They held their ground and scored what can only be regarded in the light of a signal victory.

Railroads, telegraphs, balloons, traction engines, heliographs—we have had these things all in use in this Boer war, e pur se muove. These weekly casualty lists prove the fact to painful demonstration, and drafts of officers and men must still be sent out to fill up gaps in the ranks of the great army engaged in South Africa. Lord John Russell once astonished the House of Commons by a Latin quotation at a time when that kind of classical amusement was going out of fashion in Parliament:—

"Balnea vinum Venus hæc nostram vitam faciunt, Sed Venus, vinum, balnea hæc nostram vitam corrumpunt."

Railroads, telegraphs, heliographs, balloons, traction engines, modern auxiliaries in war making, do not make war easier. The use of them is attended with disadvantages, as these campaigns in Natal, the Orange River Colony, and the Transvaal have demonstrated. Railways in a country of many rivers—with bridges, tunnels, and culverts along its course—can be rendered, very readily, useless for a time, just as telegraph wire can be cut, and the consequent interruption of communication, to which generals were habituated, may be most serious. Our Engineer officers and their sappers and miners have reduced the mischief to a minimum, but the danger may take place at any time. Lines of communication are for ever in the mind of the general in front, and when action is urgently needed long delays may be caused by a break in them—the work of a few minutes on a bridge or a tunnel; and combinations by telegraph to distant generals cannot be depended on. There are certainly situations described by correspondents from time to time in South Africa which need explanation if they are actual facts. We do not allude to the strange surrenders or captures of our men by the enemy, the mistakes by Regulars and Irregulars—even by Bushmen and wily Colonials—but to the inexplicable actions or inactions on the part of officers who are men of experience and tried ability. One general "comes in contact" with De Wet's rearguard—and does nothing! Another general "follows a long convoy believed to be De Wet's." Two generals, marching along the Pietersburg line, "come in contact" with commandos supporting De Wet, and sustained slight loss; both the generals being men of established reputation. Another general—one of the very best—is "hanging on De Wet's skirts with bulldog tenacity." Another general was "constantly threatening De Wet's right rear," and still another had joined in the sport; but the most astonishing proceeding on the part of the fox is his recent selection of safe ground for his halts, viz., the precincts of Pretoria. On last Monday we are told the enemy's outposts were six miles north-east of the so-called "Pyramids," which are three miles north of the Wonderboom—a favourite resort for Pretorians on pleasure bent, about three miles from the city. One correspondent, Mr. W. H. Blundell, is struck by—

"The enormous difficulty Lord Roberts must find in directing, not merely the general scope and plan, but apparently the details of each move on the board, from a distant point which is more often than not cut off from all communication with the various divisional commanders."

But surely Lord Roberts does not attempt to do anything of the kind. Mr. Blundell seems to think he does so, and compares the position of our generals to that of constabulary chasing a prisoner, who are obliged to wait for orders from Scotland Yard, if the fugitive takes a turn they did not count on, instead of pursuing him at once. On the whole, Lord Roberts must be credited with knowing the game best.

The more one reads of the details of the little campaign for the relief of Kumasi the more creditable does the work of Colonel Willcocks' expedition appear. There can be no doubt as to the seriousness of the situation which had been created. Colonel Willcocks had little time in which to make his arrangements. Everything depended upon a blow being struck promptly, and struck it was with a vigour which quite astonished the leaders of the rebellion, and so paved the way for the victorious march which ended so brilliantly. The campaign eclipses all our recent little wars for thrilling details. Major Morris, wounded seriously in storming a stockade, continued to direct the operations of his little force from a hammock, at intervals sinking into unconsciousness from pain and exhaustion, an exhibition of heroic endurance worthy of romance. Apparently the anxiety in this country for the beleaguered city was only too well founded. As week after week passed without relief, ammunition began to give out, and the horrors of hunger to be only too familiar. So dire were the straits to which the garrison were reduced, indeed, that five regimental ponies were killed for food, and, later on, native civilians were dying of starvation at the rate of thirty to forty a day. To remedy this desperate situation from within, the plan was adopted of a partial evacuation of the place. Fortunately it was successful, as it deserved to be, and the Empire escaped by sheer good luck from a terrible calamity. The retreat so boldly conceived, and so skilfully carried out, was the most remarkable in our recent history. The difficulties encountered were appalling. The rains were continuous, the little force had many wounded with it, and every member was weakened by hunger and constant fighting. Both the escape and the relief are a thrilling story, and, unhappily, they cost many precious lives. The bright features of the campaign are, however, many. The Yorubas have proved, in the most distressing circumstances, that they possess soldierly qualities, even exceeding those of the Hausas. The coast tribes remained loyal. Colonels Willcocks and Burroughs and Major Morris have exhibited leadership of a high order, and a calamity in Ashanti has been averted by a miracle.

The moment has now arrived when we ought to be told definitely what the intentions of the Government are as regards our future policy in Ashanti. Three times within the last thirty years a British expedition has had to be sent to Kumasi. The Colonial Office should now be asked to decide once for all whether Kumasi is to be held or not. It cannot be calculated to raise us in the estimation of the inhabitants of the West Coast when time after time we are required to put an expedition into the field to reconquer the Ashanti "capital." The lesson taught us in our dealings with the Ashantis is so obvious that it is difficult to understand how it can have been disregarded by those responsible for the affairs of our colonies. In the present instance there is no disguising that there has been crass stupidity displayed. It is all the more creditable, therefore, to the officers and men of Colonel Willcocks' and Burroughs' forces that they have gone forward in such a spirit of heroism to undo the mischief. To them has been entrusted the duty of restoring British prestige, and the splendid manner in which they have faced every difficulty, both of climate and of country, has earned for them, we are glad to find, the admiration of even the severest of foreign critics. As a French journal puts it, "Colonels Willcocks and Burroughs are men to be honoured for their almost reckless bravery in a campaign in which recklessness was the surest sign of capacity, as the adoption of the ordinary precautions of war would have ruined everything, and brought about the fall of Kumasi before the relieving force could have had time to arrive."

The correspondence, published in the Times, on the subject of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society and the Bisley Homes, seem to us to bear but one construction. The committee of the former society have, with the best possible intentions, of course, been guilty of a serious error of judgment, and it is due to Lord Pirbright, Sir Theodore Martin, the building trades, and others that this should be acknowledged. The case made out by Lord Pirbright and Sir Theodore Martin is so clear that it would have been better for the controllers of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society to have admitted their fault. No one who knows Major-General Trotter could suppose for a moment that he has been actuated by any but the very best motives. Nevertheless there has been misunderstanding, and that in all the circumstances is scarcely to be wondered at. Lord Pirbright, Sir Theodore Martin, and the generous subscribers to the building trades patriotic gift have been left in ignorance as to the procedure of a society of the aims of which they apparently knew nothing. They object to the action of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society, and they have a reasonable right to do so. It behoves therefore the committee of the society in question forthwith to put matters right. By failing to do so they would injure not only their own organisation, but other military charities also. This, we feel certain, they would not wish to do. We quite agree with the Times that the Help Society has work enough before it in developing its own excellent scheme for the benefit of our national defenders. The Bisley Homes can well be left to the care of a separate committee. There is nothing to be gained by creating false impressions, yet this is what has actually been done by the ill-advised enthusiasm of the Help Society, the objects of which are too commendable to be prejudiced by mistakes such as those which General Trotter has sought to defend. A kinder-hearted, a more conscientiously charitable, and a higher-minded man than General Trotter could not be found—that the whole Service knows. He has laboured for years to advance the best interests of the soldier, but in this matter he has permitted his zeal in a good cause to override his judgment as chairman of committee. The explanation of Mr. Collins in the Times of Wednesday is proof that business men prefer to have charities run on business lines, for Mr. Collins was careful to take steps to protect the fund raised by him at the performance at Drury Lane Theatre. After all that has happened, General Trotter will do well to accept the position as it stands. By failing to do so, he would intensify the mischief, and doubtless affect most seriously Service charities generally. Such a result should be guarded against. The public have not been quite satisfied with the administration of the Royal Patriotic Fund, and the report of Lord Justice Collins's Committee of Inquiry has more than justified their doubts. The moment is, therefore, inopportune for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society to adopt a high-handed policy.

No one can await the issue of the South African despatches more anxiously than we do, for we find it most difficult in the absence of these documents to follow the course of the campaign. At the same time, after all that has happened, we are disposed to think that the Government is right in the decision it has arrived at to withhold further reports until the close of the war. There is no disputing that some members of Parliament have adopted a course which is highly objectionable and calculated to produce endless mischief, so far as the discipline of the Army is concerned. The attacks on individual officers are most unfair. The military authorities are sensible of this, and the procedure they have recommended is in the circumstances quite justifiable. It has not been necessary to follow debates in the House of Commons very attentively to recognise the unfortunate position in which those are placed who are responsible for the characters of British officers in the field. Lord Wolseley, Sir Evelyn Wood, and other distinguished soldiers are evidently thought to be quite incapable of carrying out properly the duties of the high offices they hold on the Headquarter Staff of the Army. They are charged openly in Parliament with the most serious offences. Lord Wolseley and Sir Evelyn Wood, as Commander-in-Chief and Adjutant-General of the Forces, have earned their positions by long and distinguished service to the State, and every soldier will sympathise with them, we feel sure, in this period of difficulty.

The article in Monday's Times on "The Armament of India" has long ere this been cut out by every military attaché, and been carefully noted by every war office for reference. The "Indian Officer" who furnished it to the leading journal might have pointed to "the disarmament of India" at this moment in men as in matériel—the reduction of the British garrison and the despatch of native regiments to China. The best opinions are in favour of a larger normal establishment of British regiments in India; that is, to an increase of the Europeans there. The employment of native corps across the Kala Panee is viewed with dislike by experienced Indian officials, but the South African War left the Government no choice in the matter. On the whole, we are not disposed to regard the situation as very alarming. Bombay, Madras, Karachee, Rangoon—our only seaports with defensive works—are not likely to be attacked as long as our fleet is "in being." Even siege trains are not pressing requirements. For all that seaports should be, we think, put in a proper state of defence. Siege trains, which cannot be improvised all of a sudden, should surely be in store in the great arsenals for use wherever they may be needed for Imperial purposes, and the glaring defects earmarked by the "Indian Officer" remedied with all convenient speed—and that, possibly, will not be at once by any means.

The Spectator of the 18th inst. has a very sensible article on "Intelligence Departments." Briefly, the idea suggested is that there should be a central department, of which, during peace the military department should be a branch, whilst in time of war the entire organisation should combine in order to ensure that every atom of information should be gathered and furnished to the Horse Guards and Admiralty authorities. The argument upon which the proposal is founded is that "the Military Intelligence Department is conceived on much too small a scale and covers too narrow a field. Though a fairly wide definition is given to 'military intelligence,' the organisation is not large enough, nor is enough money spent to enable it to cover the whole ground." This statement is perfectly true, and it is only in accordance with everything that we are accustomed to hear and believe that, in the opinion of the Spectator, the Admiralty system is infinitely superior. Everyone knows that whilst the Admiralty is a well-managed concern which does credit to the country, the War Office is generally regarded as something quite different.

The case of the Militia subalterns under twenty years of age who are now serving with their regiments in South Africa is, generally speaking, a very hard one. Commissions in the Regular Army have been conferred upon various young gentlemen at home who had no military knowledge whatever, and who have been consequently of very little use to the battalions that they joined. Yet all this time qualified young officers of the Militia, who are already present at the seat of war, are considered ineligible for transfer to the Line. It would seem as if a far more just arrangement would have been to make the Militia the channel through which the emergency commissions should have been granted, and, as young officers from home were sent out to the Militia battalions, to transfer Militia subalterns to the Regular forces. In due course it would come to the turn of those thus sent out to the Militia to pass onwards; their places being taken by yet more recent arrivals from home. Obviously the Militia battalions in South Africa cannot be left short of subalterns, but this fact should not be permitted to over-ride the dictates of common justice. There are many Militia subalterns in South Africa at the present time who have served continuously in one way or another for nine months or more. Yet, except in the case of those who have reached the age of twenty, their services are ignored, and direct commissions have been given freely to others over their heads.

The beginning which is being made at Aldershot in the training of the Militia as mounted infantry is a most commendable development, and one which ought to produce its effect on the Service. For years, as we know, the War Office refused systematically to consider the Militia worthy of thought. "It was only the papers," the argument was, "that recognised any merit in the force, and what was newspaper opinion worth?" To Lord Lansdowne's very great credit, be it said, he has, [from his first entrance into office, tried to reverse that policy. Of course, it was a great shock to officialdom when it was found that a War Minister had arisen who could hold his own. But matters have mended considerably at the War Office and elsewhere, and now it is generally recognised what a valuable reserve to the Army the Militia might be made if only it were properly treated. The war in South Africa is likely to teach us many lessons, but the great lesson of all we have learnt by it is that we have forces of all kinds ready for any employment, however trying, provided our system is such as to enable them to come into line organised and equipped as they should be. There is no reason why Militiamen—many of whom are used to the management of horses—should not furnish a trained reserve of mounted infantrymen; indeed, there is every reason to believe that they soon would, if an opportunity is afforded them of going through the recognised course. We view this new departure with interest, feeling convinced that it is one of those steps in the right direction which have long been urgently called for in the interests of the "old constitutional force."

The events of the last twelve months have emphasised the importance of the work which has been done for some time past quietly and unostentatiously, but none the less effectively, by the Imperial Federation Defence Committee. The war in South Africa has given an immense impetus to the wave of Imperial patriotism which set in so strongly as the result of the Jubilee celebrations throughout the Empire in 1897. The league is undoubtedly doing good work in bringing before the Government and the colonies proposals for the development of our system of defence. It is fortunately free from all taint of politics. The emergency in South Africa has brought to light, as the committee say, a resolve on the part of the colonies to co-operate in the maintenance and defence of the Empire, and that resolve ought to be encouraged, for what the colonies have done once they will do again. Such a combination of strength cannot fail to produce its effect. Such an effective demonstration of the military resources of the Empire has never before been witnessed, and it affords an absolute proof of the possibility of that organisation for common defence the need of which has for years been pressed upon the attention of British citizens. A strong feeling exists that the close of the war in South Africa ought to be followed by an Imperial conference for the carrying out of the scheme ventilated by Lord Rosebery for "putting the Empire on a business footing." With the view of promoting this end, the Imperial Federation Defence Committee has drawn up a series of suggestions, which have been submitted to the Government. The proposals may be summarised thus:—(a) The establishment of a permanent Imperial council of representatives of the United Kingdom and the self-governing colonies; (b) the council to administer an Imperial fund; (c) the maintenance by that fund of the Royal Navy and of a general service Army drawn from all parts of the Empire.

It may be remembered that at the congress of the Chamber of Commerce of the Empire held in London several resolutions were brought forward by Colonial Chambers, having for their object the convening of a Defence Conference. Among others the following was carried unanimously, thus showing how deep rooted the feelings of colonists are:—

"That in the opinion of this congress, the bonds of the British Empire would be materially strengthened, and the union of the various parts of Her Majesty's dominions greatly consolidated, by the Colonies contributing towards the naval and military defence of the Empire, and that the president be requested to appoint a deputation to wait upon the prime minister of the United Kingdom and represent to him the desirability of convening a conference of representatives appointed by the Government of the Mother Country, its colonies and dependencies, to consider the subject."

On this resolution we are assured it is the intention of the Government to act next year, if possible. Meanwhile, it is felt that associations like that to whose work we refer are rendering a great service and deserve every encouragement. The one point in their favour is that they are supported by both political parties, and are absolutely free from fads. Their object is one with which every sailor and soldier must be in sympathy, and it is gratifying to learn that they are receiving the warmest support from the senior officers of both Services, who are able to appreciate the immense benefits which will result from the success of their endeavours to place the long talked of federation of Empire on a sound and practical footing.

There has been considerable outcry with reference to the fact that men of the Colonial contingents who had been wounded or fallen sick in South Africa had been brought to this country and "dumped down" in London or elsewhere in a convalescent state with practically no money in their pockets, and naturally in most cases with no friends to go to. The outcry was perhaps justified by the want of thought of the War Office officials, though there was certainly no lack of sympathy there when the case was represented to them, and matters have now been very much improved. The somewhat similar case of the officers of Colonial contingents arriving wounded or sick in this country from South Africa has also been dealt with by the War Office, and such officers will be granted a daily allowance during the period of their detention in this country. Field officers will for the first seven days receive 15s. a day, for the next seven days 10s. a day, and afterwards 5s. a day. Captains or subalterns will for the first seven days receive 12s. 6d. a day, for the next seven days 7s. 6d. a day, and afterwards 5s. a day. These allowances will be issued by the Chief Paymaster, Home District, at the same time as the officers' pay.

We have heard of an interesting incident in connection with the battle of Pieter's Hill on February 27 last. On that day the 2nd Batn. East Surrey Regiment was lent by the 2nd Brigade, to which it belongs, to the 4th Brigade, then commanded by Colonel Norcott. The 4th Brigade, it will be remembered, captured the left of the three Boer positions, and in the assault the East Surrey had the honour of being placed on the right of the first line of the brigade, the 1st Batn. Rifle Brigade being on the left. Each battalion put two entire companies in their firing line, so that the four companies, which advanced with beautiful regularity, showed an imposing front. The advance of the firing line was very rapid, but a corporal of the East Surrey, named Brady, a very swift runner, who had won many prizes in the battalion athletic meetings showed conspicuously in front. Every officer and man in the four companies was going his best pace, but no one could get within twenty yards of Brady until the Boer position was reached. The corporal's name was brought to notice by his commanding officer and by Colonel Norcott, but other eyes had watched him with appreciation. A native named Umxinwa, headman of the Umtwalume mission station, begged the Natal Government Secretary for Native Affairs to forward the sum of £3 "to the non-commissioned officer who led the East Surrey Regiment at Pieter's Hill." It is needless to say that all ranks of the regiment were much pleased by this very unexpected compliment to one of their number, and we think the incident deserves record, as it shows the native appreciation of courage in a striking manner.

INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

The cadetships offered at the recent examination for the Royal Military College, with a view to appointments in the Indian Staff Corps, have been allotted thus:—

INDIAN CADETS (10).—A. F. MacLean, P. C. Hampe-Vincent, M. Goldney, W. H. Barnett, C. O. Hay, M. Wylie, W. H. A. Lloyd, E. C. Irwin, R. Foster, J. P. Thompson.

HON. INDIAN CADET (1).—G. F. G. Fraser.

COMPETITORS (24).—C. H. K. Kirkwood, B. G. S. Clarke, P. Wood, R. J. MacBrayne, G. W. Cochran, F. E. W. Verming, G. C. Cooper, J. L. Higgin, A. H. Stuart-Menteth, G. A. G. Shepherd, C. H. Stockley, C. A. Brown, N. Ogle, G. P. Morris, E. O. Macleod, H. H. Batten, W. B. Baker, J. N. Durrant-Stewart, T. A. A. Wilson, B. E. Anderson, T. Milne, G. T. S. Clarke, E. N. Turner, F. A. L. de Gruchy.

COMPLAINTS having been made of misconduct of soldiers at railway stations while going on or returning from furlough, the attention of commanding officers has been directed to the Army Order on the subject, in accordance with which the furlough of any soldier reported by railway authorities for such misconduct is to be at once cancelled. All men going on furlough are to be warned of the consequences which will follow the receipt of any report against them.

THE HOSPITAL SCANDAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As the hospitals in South Africa have been run down so much, you may possibly allow me to say that I have been through the war, and was in hospital for two months, and have never been better treated in my life than I was then. A certain amount of suffering is inseparable from active service; it must be expected and cannot be overcome. I have recently received a letter from an officer who is in hospital at Bloemfontein. In it he says: "I think it is a shame the way they are running down the doctors, &c. I must say since I have been here I could not have been better treated, and everyone, officers and men, are treated just the same. Of course, there is no doubt that some months ago the hospitals were too crowded, but that is not the fault of the R.A.M.C. In March this hospital alone, which was sent out equipped for 500 patients, had between 1,800 and 2,000 in it at one time." The military hospitals cannot refuse to take patients in, whereas the private hospitals can, so that it is not fair to compare them. On the whole the matter appears to have been greatly exaggerated, perhaps for party purposes. Such an outbreak of enteric as has occurred was probably not anticipated, with the result that the hospitals were overcrowded for a time.

C. HOLMES WILSON, Captain, R.F.A.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have just read in the papers a letter from a civilian doctor, in which the officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps are spoken of in the most disparaging terms. The letter was shown to me by another patient here, who remarked, "Look here; there's a cur for you; read that letter and tell me what you think of it. I say it is disgraceful that such letters should be published." Having read the letter I said I would write to the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE and say what we all thought of this civilian doctor. I consider him a disgrace to his profession, and all my suffering comrades here say the same, and we ought to know. The kindness I received from all the officers of the R.A.M.C. during my long illness was most touching. I could scarcely have believed that officers would have been found to take the pains that they did to get their patients through. Day after day they came to my bedside with cheering words, and my comrades say it was always the same with them. I assure you the feeling here is one of intense annoyance that the kind doctors of the R.A.M.C. should have their characters taken away when they have to my knowledge done all that they could do for us. It may be to them a consolation and a comfort to know that those who owe so much to their careful attention are not among the miserable creatures who are bent upon blackening their characters in order to obtain an advertisement for themselves. I came home in a hospital ship in which I had an opportunity of hearing the opinions of many men, and all said the same—that the doctors had done their very best for them, and it was disgraceful to abuse them. The opinion here of the civilian doctor who has written to abuse the Army doctors is that he is some ill-conditioned man who would be in hot water anywhere. I write this letter because my comrades here all wish me to do so, as they feel it is due to the kind officers of the R.A.M.C. that it should be known that the British soldier is not such a mean-spirited cur as to forget the thoughtfulness, kindness, and attention of those who have done their best to tend him when he is laid low by wounds and sickness. Here and there there might be some soldiers who grumbled; but, as one of my comrades suggests, there are black sheep in every fold, and in the Army there are many men who would be better tied up to their mother's apron strings than fighting in South Africa.

A GRATEFUL PATIENT.

Netley Hospital, Aug. 22.

P.S.—I have read this letter to my comrades; they say they agree with every word of it, only they don't think it is quite strong enough.

"REX" ON OUR ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In an "Army Note," which appeared in your issue of last Saturday, you take exception to an article in the August number of the United Service Magazine, the "represensible character" of which you assume that "the Editor must have overlooked." May I venture to call your attention to the first paragraph in the "Notice to Correspondents," which is printed every month in the magazine? The paragraph referred to reads as follows:—"The Editor wishes it to be distinctly understood that he does not hold himself responsible for the opinions expressed by contributors." I need only add that "Rex" is an officer of rank and experience.

THE EDITOR OF THE U. S. M.

13, Charing Cross, Aug. 8.

THE officers commanding Royal Reserve infantry battalions have been ordered to report if all their men are now fully armed and equipped, and if not what items are still deficient.

Army Personal.

When informed of the Maharaja Sindia's offer of a hospital ship for the China force, the Queen at once telegraphed:—"I must ask your Highness to accept my warmest thanks for your splendid gift of a hospital ship, which has touched me deeply."

The Queen paid visits to the convalescents from South Africa at East Cowes on Tuesday and on Wednesday. All the men being treated there visited Osborne grounds, and were conducted over a portion of the Palace; afterwards they were entertained to tea in the servants' hall. The men were very delighted with their visit and thoroughly appreciated the Queen's thoughtfulness.

Lord Wolseley presented the prizes at the first annual Salisbury Plain Rifle Meeting on Wednesday.

His lordship said he attached the greatest importance to shooting, and it was meetings of that description that encouraged men to shoot. It was satisfactory to learn how well the men had shot, especially the young soldiers. It was also gratifying to know that the entries were so large, as it showed the interest taken in shooting by the Militia, a most splendid force, which, after all, was the mainstay of the nation and the backbone of the British Army. The two things which went to the making of a soldier were obedience and marksmanship. If they had discipline, and if the soldier could shoot well, he thought they might take him out, place him in front of any enemy in the world, and feel sure he would do well.

After witnessing some field operations on Thursday, Lord Wolseley addressed a few words to the officers. He said he was very pleased with the work done. The mistakes had been few. It was the first field day attempted by the troops on the plain, and it was apparent, from the way in which the various companies were handled, that the most essential thing, namely, company training, had been properly taught, and company officers had instructed their men with marked success.

The Mayor of Portsmouth has written offering, on behalf of the town, a sword of honour to Lord Roberts, who is a freeman of Portsmouth.

On hearing of the brilliant charge of the 1st Bengal Lancers in China, Lord Roberts telegraphed to General Sir Power Palmer at Simla, conveying the congratulation of the army in South Africa to their gallant Indian comrades. The charge is referred to in more recent telegrams as quite a feat of arms. One correspondent says:—"What makes the performance of this excellent regiment—of which, by the bye, the Duke of York is chief—so noteworthy is the fact that the horse is the sowar's first care, and thus at the end of the charge every animal was fit. Very different this to the methods adopted by some cavalry generals of knocking all their horses to pieces, and never being satisfied until regiments are thus rendered ineffective. The 1st Bengal Lancers were admirably led, and to the confidence of all ranks in the capacity of their gallant chief the credit of their splendid achievement is principally due. And that it was a brilliant performance the foreigners all admit."

The Duke of Connaught does not purpose taking up his residence at the Curragh this season. There is to be no large concentration of troops at the camp, and the command is in capable hands, Major-General Upton Prior being unceasing in his efforts to advance the efficiency of the units under his control.

Lord Romer and his colleagues of the Royal Commission on the South African hospital scandal arrived at Cape Town on Tuesday. They at once set about to obtain fresh evidence.

There will only be one enforced retirement next month from the list of General officers. General Sir Robert C. Stewart, Madras Cavalry, will pass to the Unemployed Supernumerary List on September 30.

An appointment as Colonel-Commandant R.A. is vacant by the death of General A. A. Bayly, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery.

General Sir Evelyn Wood on Tuesday visited Aldershot and witnessed classes going through courses of instruction at the Cranbrook Gymnasium. An exhibition of some new exercises was given before the Adjutant-General, who was accompanied by Colonel G. M. Fox, Officiating Inspector of Gymnasias.

The Secretary of State for India has telegraphed to Lieut.-General Sir Alfred Gaselee stating that Her Majesty's Government heartily congratulate him on the success of the operations for the relief of the Legations at Peking, and requesting him to communicate to the officers and men under his command, their high appreciation of the skill, courage, and endurance shown during the daring advance of the Allied forces, which had been brought to such a successful issue.

Lieut.-General A. R. Badoock having completed his term of appointment as Quartermaster-General, Lieut.-General Sir Alfred Gaselee, commanding the British Forces in China, obtains the permanent appointment, General Gaselee having officiated during the absence of General Badoock in England for the last two years.

The will bearing date September 27, 1894, with three codicils, of Major-General Sir Charles Walters D'Oyly, of Newlands, Charlton Marshall, Dorset, ninth baronet, has been valued at £52,298 gross, including personalty of the net value of £48,979.

Major-General R. T. Thynne, C.B., will retain command of the North-Eastern District (York) until the end of the year, when he will have held the appointment for six years and three months. He will be succeeded most probably by a general officer now employed in South Africa.

Major-General L. V. Swaine, C.B., C.M.G., has had conferred upon him by the German Emperor the Order of the Crown of the 1st Class.

Major-General G. Cox attains the limit of age on Friday next, and will be placed on the retired list.

Major-General Sir Reginald Wingate will not return to Egypt as early as was at first arranged. He has been recommended by his doctors to apply for an extension of leave, and will now remain in England until November.

The Citizen, of Ottawa states that through the unfortunate miscarriage of a telegram Major-General O'Grady Haly arrived from Montreal unexpectedly, and an official reception which had been planned did not come off. The general has already made a good impression in the Dominion, to which he is no stranger, having spent a considerable time in Halifax on the staff of his father when the latter was with the forces at that place. The Citizen remarks that General Haly enters upon his duties at a time when the military affairs of the country are in the ascendant, and when the outlook for the forces has never been more brilliant. Our contemporary expresses the opinion that the general is eminently qualified for the important duties he has been chosen to perform, and expects that he will make a careful and exhaustive investigation of the conditions before inaugurating any extensive changes or reforms.

Brigadier-General H. Pilon, C.B., R.A., Colonel W. T. Shone, C.B., D.S.O., R.E., Major J. G. Day, R.E., and Captain T. L. Coxhead, D.S.O., R.A., have been selected to join the headquarters staff in China.

No colonel on the active list (British) comes under the terms of the Royal Warrant next month, so that there will be no enforced retirement.

Colonel B. T. Mahon, D.S.O., from junior Major, 8th Hussars, has been appointed to the command of the 12th Lancers, vacant by the death of Lord Airie. This promotion may be regarded as an acknowledgment of Colonel Mahon's services in effecting the relief of Mafeking. Colonel Mahon was born April 3, 1862; joined the Army from the Militia, January 27, 1883; became Major October 19, 1897; and Brevet-Colonel March 14, 1900. He first saw war service in the Dongola Expedition, 1886.

Colonel J. M. Grierson, M.V.O., R.A., lately Military Attaché at Berlin, and Brevet-Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Powell, I.S.C., officiating D.A.A.G. Intelligence Department, Horse Guards, have been selected for service on the staff of Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee in China. Colonel Grierson was Military Attaché at Berlin from March, 1896, until the beginning of this year, when he proceeded on active service to South Africa. He served in the Egyptian War 1882, Soudan Expedition 1885, and Hazara Expedition 1888. Colonel Powell, originally in the Royal Marines, is a linguist of some repute. He served in the Waziristan Expedition 1894-95, and in the North-West Frontier War 1897-98.

Colonel F. W. Rhodes, D.S.O., half-pay, Royal Dragoons, has arrived home from South Africa.

Colonel E. W. Cresswell, R.E., Military Works Department, Meerut, has applied to retire from the Service.

Colonel F. J. Graves completes five years in command of the 83rd Regimental District, Belfast, on September 21; but, in consideration of the success which has attended his exertions as a recruiting officer and the high standard of efficiency to which the four Militia battalions of the Royal Irish Rifles have been brought by him, he has been recommended for an extension.

Colonel J. G. Sparkes completes his term of command of the 45th Regimental District, Derby, on Tuesday next, but will retain his appointment until the end of the year, when he will be succeeded by Colonel J. W. T. Hume, now commanding a Militia brigade at Salisbury.

Colonel E. R. Courtenay, half-pay, late of the 11th Hussars, has been selected for the command of the Regimental District, Lincoln, vice Colonel T. E. Verner, commanding a brigade at Aldershot, with the rank of Major-General.

Colonel E. H. FitzHerbert, half-pay, late of the King's Own Regiment, has been appointed to the command of the 7th-57th Regimental District, Hounslow, vice Colonel G. F. Guyon, commanding a brigade at Aldershot, with the rank of Major-General.

Colonel J. G. Wilson, A.S.C., D.A.A.G., Cork District, is en route to South Africa in command of drafts in the Aurania, which left Queenstown on the 17th inst.

Colonel C. A. Maunsell, R.A.M.C., P.M.O., Mhow District, attains the limit of age on the 24th prox.

Colonel A. G. F. Browne, 4th Gurkhas, has been appointed Colonel on the Staff, Sealkote.

Letters of administration to the estate of Colonel W. A. Home Hare, retired list, R.E., of 128, Cromwell Road, S.W., who died on April 29, have been granted to his brother, Colonel Richard

Three colonels of the Indian Staff Corps attain the limit of age next month, and will pass to the Unemployed Supernumerary List—Colonels J. E. Sandeman on September 3, G. W. Rogers, D.S.O., on September 11, and E. B. Bishop on September 28.

Colonel N. F. Chamberlain, I.S.C., who has been Private Secretary to Lord Roberts since the end of December last, has arrived home from South Africa on appointment as Inspector-General of the Irish Constabulary.

Colonel Deane, C.B., who went out to the Cape in connection with the Imperial Yeomanry work, in which his services were eminently useful, has gone on by permission to Eupatoria.

A Distinguished Service Reward for a Colonel is vacant by the death of Colonel Cluny Macpherson.

The command of the Highland Volunteer Infantry Brigade, Inverness, has also become vacant by the death of Colonel Cluny Macpherson, who has held the appointment since April, 1890. In filling the appointment it is earnestly to be hoped that there may be no repetition of the scandal by which a major in a metropolitan Volunteer regiment was recently appointed a colonel to command a brigade. A department which makes such appointments can only blame itself if it loses public confidence.

Lieut.-Colonel J. C. L. Campbell, C.R.E., a Cairo correspondent writes in a private letter, has gone to Khartoum for the purpose of inspecting the new barracks for British troops which are being constructed there under the direction of Major Lawrie, R.E. It will be remembered that a vote of £85,000 for these barracks was passed in the House of Commons recently, when Mr. Wyndham, in making the motion, said that the barracks would be useful not only in preserving the health of the troops, but would have important political effects in dissipating the belief which exists in the Sudan that we have not come there to stay. The accommodation is to be for one battalion and the quarters will be ready for occupation during the next cool season. They are well situated and every effort is to be made to make them thoroughly up to date.

Two Lieut.-Colonels complete their terms of command next month, viz.: 1st Batn. North Staffordshire Regiment, Lieut.-Colonel T. Currie, C.B., on September 14; and 1st Batn. Queen's Regiment, Colonel J. S. Collins on September 29.

Lieut.-Colonel V. Dawson, who has raised the 3rd Batn. Coldstream Guards, will be the first officer commanding the new regiment of Irish Guards, of which Lieut.-Colonel R. J. Cooper commands the 1st Batn.

Lieut.-Col. (Major) J. Dutton Hopton, Highland Light Infantry, now officiating as commandant of the School of Musketry, Hythe, has been appointed Chief Inspector of Small Arms.

Major W. M. M. Edwards, V.C., retired list, late Highland Light Infantry, and of the Corps of Gentlemen at Arms, has been appointed a Deputy Lieut. of the County of Norfolk.

Major W. G. L. Benyon, D.S.O., 1st Batn. 3rd Gurkhas, has been appointed Assistant Secretary in the Military Secretariat in India, vice Major C. H. Selwyn, proceeded on service to China.

Major A. St. H. Gibbons, 3rd Batn. East York. shire Regiment, the organiser of the Capeto Cairo Expedition, reached Omdurman on Monday in excellent health, having travelled a distance of 13,000 miles. Among the objects attained were the mapping of Marotseland, 200,000 miles in area; the accomplishment of the first steam navigation of the Middle Zambesi; and the tracing of the whole course of the river, the discovery of its source, and the determination of its watershed. Thence the route of the expedition was eastward and by way of the Great Lakes and the Nile.

Captain F. C. Quicke, 1st Dragoon Guards, who left England with Major Gibbons and did some excellent work, arrived in England recently, having retraced his steps to the Cape on hearing of the outbreak of war in South Africa.

Brevet-Major Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, King's Royal Rifles, who has been on special service in South Africa since October last, has been appointed an extra A.D.C. to Lord Roberts.

Captain D. V. Pirie, M.P., late 3rd Hussars, has written to the Aberdeen Liberal Association from East London, saying that there is still a great deal doing in the way of military work at the front, and little chance of coming home for the next two months. He would remain at his post as long as he could be of any use. He had had several attacks of fever, but was now better.

Captain J. A. FitzGibbon, R.G.A., has been selected for the adjutancy of the Glamorgan Artillery, vice Major E. F. Hall, who vacates on promotion.

Captain G. P. Tharp, Rifle Brigade, who was severely wounded at Ladysmith, returned to duty from hospital and was invalided home on leave, arrived benefited by the sea voyage in the Tagus, which arrived some days ago.

Captain A. C. Bell, 3rd Batn. Scots Guards, resumes duty as A.D.C. to Lord Minto in Canada. He vacated his appointment in order to proceed on active service to South Africa.

Captain Donald Stewart, formerly of the Gordon Highlanders, and son of the late Field-Marshal Sir Donald Stewart, British Resident at Kumasi, left Liverpool by the Elder Dempster liner Bornu on Wednesday, to resume his duties in the Ashanti capital. Captain Stewart is to be granted extended powers.

Captain J. T. Banning, Royal Munster Fusiliers, p.s.c., Instructor in Tactics, Military Administration and Law at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, was among the successful candidates at the recent examination for the LL.D. degree at the Royal University, Dublin. We believe that this is the first time that this degree has ever been gained by examination by an officer of the Army, though many distinguished officers have had the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws conferred on them by various universities in recognition of their services. Captain Banning graduated at the Royal University B.A. with honours in 1892 and LL.B. with honours and an exhibition in 1895. He has also obtained the LL.B. degree at London University, and was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1887. He was for six years D.A.A.G. for Instruction in Dublin, and is the author of several works on military subjects.

Captain G. D. Baillie-Hamilton, 7th Batn. Royal Fusiliers, has been selected for service with the Malay States Guides.

Captain C. A. Mitchell, 6th Batn. Rifle Brigade, has been selected for service with the West African Frontier Force.

Captain A. W. Chaldecott, 1st Punjab Cavalry, has been appointed interpreter to General Sir Power Palmer in India.

Captain J. S. Kemball, 29th Punjab Infantry, has been appointed orderly officer to the general officer commanding the 4th Brigade China Field Force.

Lieut. H. M. Seton, R.G.A., has been ordered to join the staff of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, as an instructor in electricity.

SINCE the beginning of the present year the Hon. Artillery Company has enrolled 392 recruits, of whom 163 have joined the Company's Artillery Division, and 229 the Infantry Battalion. A very large portion of the Artillery Division's officers and men are serving with the field battery of the C.I.V.'s in South Africa.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

The annual report of the Commissioners of the Patriotic Fund for the year 1899, dated July 27, 1900, contains the usual accounts of the various funds administered by them. It also contains the report of Mr. Finlaison, C.B., on the assets and liabilities of the Patriotic Fund (Russian War, 1854-56) as on Dec. 31, 1899, and the report of the committee of the Commissioners appointed on July 13, 1890, to consider how best to carry out the recommendations of the War Relief Funds Inquiry Committee presided over by Lord Justice Collins. This latter report, which is signed by Lord Davey, the chairman, has already been published.

The total capital of the various trusts administered by the Commission amounted on December 31, 1899, to £1,086,907; the year's receipts were £33,723, and the expenditure £45,976, of which £43,930 was due to payments to widows, orphans, and others, and £2,046 to management and distribution. The recipients of benefits numbered 2,925, of which 1,086 were connected with the Navy and 1,839 with the Army. The Commissioners have continued to employ part of the capital of the fund in providing for widows of Russian War service sailors, soldiers, and Marines married before March 30, 1856.

As regards the Transvaal War Fund the Commissioners say:—

"This has resulted in a sum of about £400,000 being placed at our disposal. Up to the present upwards of 1,600 families have been relieved and placed upon the fund. The roll of widows and other dependents claiming assistance is, however, being daily increased, and there is no saying what numbers may ultimately have to be provided for from the fund.

"At the outset it was decided to include as eligible for relief the widows, orphans, and other dependents of colonial as well as British forces, and numbers of these have already been placed upon the fund.

"We have also, upon the application of the Government of India, undertaken to grant allowances to widows and orphans of Indian native followers of our forces in South Africa dying while on service, estimated to involve a charge of probably £1,000 a year on the fund.

"Much misapprehension exists as to our methods of administration, but for the moment we refrain from endeavouring to correct such misapprehensions. Our earnest desire is to co-operate with all bodies, associations, or individuals working in the common cause of the widow and other dependents of our sailors and soldiers losing their lives in the service of their Queen and country."

PROMOTION R.A. AND R.E.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A question relative to the promotion of 2nd Lieuts. R.A. and R.E. was asked in the House in March last. It was repeated at the end of July, and the reply of Mr. Wyndham, the Under Secretary, was, "that the matter was still under consideration," where it still remains. When it can take the Secretary of State for War, Lord Lansdowne, six months to consider whether a recognised grievance is to be redressed, without arriving at any conclusion, when a "Yes" or "No" would settle the matter, can we feel surprise at the utter confusion reigning at the War Office.

Carlton Club.

SPECTATOR.

COL. GILDEA, C.B., chairman of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association, appeals to those who are unable to get away from London at this time of the year to offer their services in the interests of the association, as many of those who have been working for it, many of them exclusively, are anxious to take much-needed rest and change. Col. Gildea will be glad to receive any communications in this respect at the offices of the Association, 23, Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster.

MUSKETRY AT KILWORTH.—A Militia Brigade Rifle Meeting was held at Kilworth Camp, Cork, on 7th and 8th inst., and proved a great success, all ranks, from the Brigadier-General downwards, taking the keenest interest in the shooting, it being the first time that a Militia Brigade had ever had such a meeting during embodiment. The interest of the meeting centred round the General's Cup, no less than 15 teams entering for this event, which was most keenly contested, and eventually won by the 3rd Batn. Wiltshire Regiment, who kept up the good reputation this battalion has maintained for shooting as well as for other branches of duty and sport by being the largest prize winners of the meeting. The 3rd Batn. Oxford Light Infantry also did well, running a good second in the number of prizes they secured. Among the officers, 2nd Lieut. Brakspear, 3rd Oxford, is especially deserving of mention for his consistently good rifle shooting, and amongst the non-commissioned officers, the fine performance of Sergt. Glenfield, 17th Lancers, in the Revolver Competition is worthy of notice. His score of 70 at a Bisley revolver target at 25 yards would take a lot of beating anywhere. The Ladies' Competition excited great interest, eight competitors entering, the Fermoy contingent being eventually victorious in the person of Miss L. Martelli. The success of the meeting was largely due to the untiring energy and personal supervision of the hon. secretary, Capt. C. O. Shipley, 4th Batn. Shropshire Light Infantry.

Army Foreign.

The summer exercises of the troops in the St. Petersburg district have taken place this year at the camps of Krasnoe Selo, Oust Sjora, Pskov, Yamburg, and Oranienbaum, and the special cavalry and artillery meetings in the districts of Tsarskoe Selo, Longa, and Pskov. The Grand Duke Vladimir commands at Krasnoe Selo, and the Grand Duke Nicholas directed the cavalry exercises. In the first period of the exercises, which extended from May to July, the infantry were engaged in musketry, distance judging by eye, regimental drills, minor tactical exercises, and field fortification, the cavalry in similar training, with scouting and outpost duty and swimming, and the artillery in gunnery. At the same time the inspections of the troops took place. The second period of the training, in July, was principally devoted to tactical manoeuvres by day and night, executed by battalions and companies, and there was exercise with ball cartridge. The infantry and artillery exercised together, in order to make the former familiar with the guns, and to practise the two arms in marching together, while the cavalry were engaged in special exercises. In the third period of the exercises this month, great attention is devoted to the work of infantry and mounted infantry on a war footing, the companies being doubled, and the batteries being increased to eight guns. The infantry at Krasnoe Selo have therefore been formed in eight regiments, each comprising two ordinary regiments. Thus the Preobrajensky and Semenovskiy regiments of the guard constitute the first regiment, and the Ismailovskiy and Egorskiy regiments the second. The training consists of march manoeuvres for all the troops, and ends with an army corps manoeuvre, all the units being on a war footing.

An official return shows that the total number of young men forming the contingent available for incorporation in the French Army in 1889 was 206,648, of whom 68,281 were called out for one year, and 138,367 for two or three years. The distribution of the contingent was as follows:—Infantry 145,909; cavalry 18,360; artillery 28,360; engineers 5,026; transport service 3,256; barrack employment, &c., 5,794.

In the event of war General Duchesne would command the first French army (7th, 8th, 13th and 16th corps), General Lucas the second (5th, 9th, 12th and 17th corps), General Kessler the third (4th, 6th, 11th, 18th and 20th corps), and General de Négrier the fourth (1st, 2nd, 3rd and 10th corps), while General Zédé would have command of the Army of the Alps (14th and 15th corps). The letters of service are usually issued about January 15 by the Minister of War, who has arrived at his decision after conferring with the Cabinet, and the signature of the President of the Republic covers the commissions delivered.

Of the more prominent French generals General Pierron will reach the limit of age (sixty-five), on October 5, General Kessler on November 17, 1901, General Zédé on February 15, 1902, and General Duchesne on March 3, and General Zarlinden on November 3 in the same year.

A number of infantry officers in the garrisons who have been moved to Athens, and who consider that they have been passed over in the matter of promotion, have lately been holding meetings to protest against unfair treatment, as they call it. The Government has inflicted disciplinary penalties on the officers concerned, and this course is approved by public opinion. The papers are unanimous in condemning the conduct of the officers, which they say causes a painful feeling among all classes. The general feeling of the press is that it is the duty of the officers of the army to maintain discipline, and that those who fail to do so should be treated summarily, or the welfare of the whole service may suffer.

The Paris Figaro regards the action of De Wet with admiration, and at the same time pays high compliment to British chivalry. Time and again, it says, "the British have shown the magnanimous spirit by expressing admiration for a clever or victorious enemy, and they are now evincing the same high characteristic by their outspoken admiration for the strategy and courage displayed by De Wet. Only a great people can realise the good qualities of their enemies."

The United States War Office has its difficulties as well as our own. The New York papers are calling attention to what they refer to as the "disgraceful condition of the hospitals in the Philippines." It is asserted that the Medical Department has completely broken down, there being a lack of surgeons, nurses, and medical supplies. The hospital system is, in a word, said to be "deplorably inadequate." Private reports from Manila show that 3,700 men were in hospital recently, and large numbers were unable to find accommodation. Thousands were down with fever and other diseases, and were without doctors or medical comforts. Doctors and supplies are on their way, but it is held that those responsible for such serious maladministration ought to be called severely to account. Evidently in the Philippines matters have been much worse than even Mr. Burdett Coutts would have us believe they ever were in South Africa.

Major-General von Gross, at present in command of the 1st German Brigade in East Asia, has been appointed Chief of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee's staff, while Colonel Baron Gayl, who was head of the General Staff of the 9th Army Corps, is appointed Quartermaster-General. Major Baron von Marschall, Captain Wilberg, and Count Stolberg have also received positions on the Staff.

The French Army manoeuvres will begin on September 10 and end on September 21. Foreign officers will leave Paris on September 13 for Chartres, where they will be quartered during the whole of the manoeuvres. They will travel each day by train to the scene of the day's operations and will be provided with horses from the Superior Military Academy. The horses and the regiment of cuirassiers which will supply their escort will be stationed at Illiers. The foreign officers will receive all necessary information from the officer commanding the cuirassiers.

THE issue of chairs has been approved for use in the dining-rooms of military hospitals.

OFFICERS, non-commissioned officers, and men of Volunteer companies returning from South Africa are to be dealt with by officers commanding regimental districts, to whom they are to report themselves on arrival. Those of the C.I.V. will report to the Depot Commandant, Guildhall, London, E.C.

Major-Gen. the Hon. H. F. Eaton, as treasurer of the Naval and Military Bazaar held at Olympia, has handed a cheque for £9,000 to the Princess Christian Convalescent Homes branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society.

It has been notified from South Africa that large numbers of invalid soldiers have been sent home for change of air, who will, in all probability, require no medical treatment on arrival. The invalids on board ships returning from South Africa will therefore be divided into two classes:—(a) Those requiring treatment in hospital; (b) those fit for duty, or, if not so fit, yet sufficiently convalescent to proceed on sick furlough and in no need of hospital treatment on disembarkation. Special directions are given as to dealing with these two classes.

ALL the current work connected with the Imperial Yeomanry has been taken over by the War Office. A small central office will for the present be maintained at Cleveland House, St. James's Square, to wind up the accounts connected with the various departments, but all letters and inquiries connected with casualties, the whereabouts of individual companies, and matters of that description should now be addressed to the Under-Secretary of State, Winchester House, War Office, St. James's Square. Personal inquiries also must be made at the same address.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN MEDAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I think that in all fairness the new South African medal should be extended to the survivors of the old Transvaal War, 1880-1. Magnificent courage was displayed by the besieged garrisons, the towns and forts were successfully defended; the privations and hardships endured were quite equal to what has been borne in this war. The fighting was as severe, if not more so, as the percentage of killed and died from wounds shows, i.e., 50 per cent. Of course, the war not being successful, nothing was known by the general public concerning the splendid bravery and courage shown by our men generally, and by the besieged soldiers particularly. There was the one exception, Majuba Hill. Now that the slate has been cleaned, I think in all justice the men of the old war should with their comrades of the new be included in the medal role. I would ask you to use your influence towards this object.

OLD SOLDIER.

WAR FUNDS.

The Mansion House War Fund reached on Tuesday the amount of £1,001,000. The fund was opened on Oct. 21 by the late Lord Mayor (Sir John Voce Moore), at whose close of office a fortnight later about £150,000 had been subscribed. From the commencement of the mayoralty of his successor, Sir Alfred Newton, till now about £850,000 has been contributed. The first £100,000 was raised by Nov. 3, £250,000 by Nov. 21, £500,000 by Jan. 8, and £750,000 by March 12. Large contributions have been received from the colonies, and many provincial cities and towns have swelled the total, but, as the recent conference convened by the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House on the subject of the organisation of war relief funds showed, large sums have been contributed in other ways and quarters, notably the funds started by the Daily Telegraph and the Daily Mail, which touched sources from which the Lord Mayor's Fund could have expected no support, and which would otherwise have been lost to the sufferers. Great cities and towns in the provinces still retain their own funds. On the other hand, none of the large sums realised at the National or the Naval and Military bazaars have passed through the Mansion House, the committees devoting them at their discretion to cognate purposes connected with the war.

The collection of a million for a Mansion House Fund is unprecedented, the largest previous sum being in 1897, when £550,000 was raised for the Indian Famine Fund. Of the war fund the allocation has been thus:—Widows and orphans, £426,000; sick and wounded at the front, £95,000; disabled soldiers and sailors, £106,000; soldiers' and sailors' families, £186,000; and the Lord Mayor's discretionary account (to be applied to the above or cognate purposes), £186,000.

The Birmingham Daily Mail Reservists' Fund has this week exceeded £40,000, more than half of which has been contributed by weekly subscriptions from the working classes. One of the earliest subscribers was Lord Roberts, who interested himself in the organisation of the fund. By the end of August about £28,000 will have been paid out, the average weekly disbursement being over £800. Nearly 3,000 cases are being relieved weekly.

The Manchester, Salford, and District South African War Fund report shows at the end of last week that the number of persons who had been relieved by the fund was 3,735. The total receipts had been £69,573 and the total expenditure £35,244, leaving a balance of £34,329. About £900 is being distributed weekly.

ALL Militia Reservists who have been called up from the Reserve and have been appointed to the Regular Forces will, on their return to the United Kingdom, be reposted to Militia units. Those who have not been transferred out of their own corps will be posted to their original Militia units. Those who have been transferred out of their own corps may have the option of being transferred back to their own corps and of being posted to their original Militia units, or of being posted to a Militia unit of their own new corps.

GRATUITY AFTER THE WAR.—It appears, says the Morning Post, after all, the gratuity to be given to the troops at the termination of the war in South Africa is not to be £10 per man all round. On the contrary, though the £2,250,000 taken in the supplementary estimate for this purpose works out at about £10 per man, the gratuity will be of differing amounts according to grade in the Service, the lowest class having a minimum of £5, from which it follows that the gratuity payable to warrant officers and some non-commissioned officers will be considerably higher than £10 if the whole amount voted is to be expended. In this matter it is understood that the whole of the colonial troops and Militia now serving in South Africa will be treated on the same footing as the troops of the Regular Army.

WAR SUMMARY.

Saturday, Aug. 18.

Lord Roberts had not communicated with the War Office—or rather, nothing was issued to the Press—for two days, but just after midnight the text was issued of a message received from Pretoria during the evening. In it the Commander-in-Chief stated that Sir A. Hunter's engagement on the 15th was a bigger affair than he had been led to suppose, as there were 44 casualties, including 2nd Lieut. Gibson, who has died of his wounds. Of this engagement no mention had been previously made. Lord Roberts added that he feared De Wet had managed to elude his pursuers, explaining that in all probability he did so by breaking up his force into small bodies. Lord Roberts went on to say:—"On the 15th inst. Lord Kitchener was pressing on to Col. Hore's assistance, while Carrington was also advancing, Lord Erroll's Yeomanry having been engaged with the enemy."

A telegram received from Lord Roberts during the morning announced that Col. Hore's force at Eland's River was relieved on Thursday by Lord Kitchener. It was found that the casualties among the beleaguered garrison consisted of five men killed outright, whilst seven died of their wounds, 11 were severely wounded, and 27 slightly. Lord Kitchener's force suffered only one casualty, Lieut.-Col. de Lisle, Durham Light Infantry, severely wounded hand and arm.

Lord Roberts to-day issued a proclamation directing that severe measures shall be taken against those Boers who are found to be guilty of treasonable conduct.

Gen. De Wet, trekking north, suddenly appeared at Commando Poort, near Pretoria, and sent a demand to Lieut.-Gen. Baden-Powell to surrender. Gen. Baden-Powell derisively asked what terms he offered. De Wet's object was to ascertain whether the pass was held. Being satisfied on that point, he marched in the direction of Crocodile River. Col. Mahon's force came in touch with his column north of Mozikhatze Nek.

The trial of Lieut. Cordua, in connection with the plot to seize Lord Roberts, was continued to-day, the chief witness being the man Gano, who was called by the prosecution for the purpose of denying certain allegations which had been made against him. Gano, who stated that he was of Spanish extraction, denied that he had originated the plot, declaring that he had only been employed as a member of the British secret police to make certain inquiries regarding it. He had never acted as a decoy for the prisoner. It was Cordua himself who suggested that they should go outside the British lines, promising him protection in the Boer lines, and an appointment on Gen. Botha's staff. Mr. Berrange addressed the court on behalf of the prisoner. He declared that the charge of conspiracy had broken down, and that all the prisoner had done was to act in the instigation of Gano, who had led accused into a trap. Cordua had broken his parole, but he was not guilty of the serious charges contained in the indictment.

Sunday, Aug. 19.

Lord Roberts, in a telegram to the War Office, said Sir Frederick Carrington reported that the Boers with whom Lord Erroll was engaged were driven back from the strong positions they held at Buffelshoek last Thursday, one of their commanders being severely wounded. We lost three killed and nine wounded. The New Zealanders particularly distinguished themselves.

Lieut.-Gen. Baden-Powell being encamped at Waterval, Lord Roberts rode out to inspect his force, and there was a march past of the men, most of whom took part in the defence of Mafeking. The splendid appearance of men and horses drew warm words of praise from Lord Roberts.

Monday, Aug. 20.

In a telegram sent off from Pretoria during the morning Lord Roberts stated that Gen. Ian Hamilton's column occupied Oliphant's Nek in the Megaliesberg on Friday. He captured two Krupp guns and three waggons. His advance troops under Col. Mahon were engaged with the enemy on Sunday at Roode Koppes, on the west bank of the Crocodile River. He had only a few casualties, and captured two waggons and seven Boers. Gen. Rundle reported from Harrismith that 684 Boers had surrendered to him in that district up to Sunday.

Sir Frederick Carrington, who was pressing on with supplies for Lord Methuen, had an engagement to-day with the Lichtenburg commando near Ottoshoop, in which Capt. Arbuthnot, Royal Irish Regiment, was dangerously wounded.

Col. Sitwell, whilst out reconnoitring near Ventersburg, came across a body of the enemy and suffered several casualties; two men of the Royal Irish Rifles being taken prisoners, and Lieuts. Spedding and Davenport, 2nd Royal Irish Rifles; Lieut. Surtees, 3rd Batn. Durham Light Infantry; and Lieut. Watson, Derbyshire Regiment, one officer R.A.M.C., and 24 men Royal Irish Rifles, being reported missing.

Cordua's trial was resumed to-day by a moderate speech from the prosecution closing the case. After quoting a case in which the Melbourne judges had upheld the action of the police in trapping a delinquent into definitely committing himself, it was urged that the defence had failed to prove the Detective Gano's share in the plot, while it was clear that Cordua had approached others to seek their adherence. Neither Gano nor the police had originated the plot. The prosecution neither supported nor opposed the prisoner's plea for mercy, but hoped to lay the case fairly before the court without racial animus.

Tuesday, Aug. 21.

Sir Redvers Buller's march was resumed to-day to the north-east. Lieut.-Gen. French moved simultaneously. The cavalry and mounted infantry were engaged during the day with some of Gen. Botha's forces, but our mounted troops gradually pressed onward, driving the Boers before them.

Lord Roberts telegraphed to-day that Lieut.-Gen. Ian Hamilton, who had crossed the Crocodile River, was continuing his march in a north-easterly direction, whilst Lieut.-Gen. Baden-Powell and Major-Gen. Paget moved up the Petersburg railway between Haman's Kraal and Pifnaar's River Station. The combined forces of Gens. De Wet and Delarey were moving northward.

The court-martial on Cordua returned a verdict of guilty. Sentence deferred.

Wednesday, Aug. 22.

Lord Roberts telegraphed from Pretoria at 4.35 p.m. Sir Redvers Buller, he said, marched yesterday to Wanwyka Vlei, 15 miles due south of Belfast. There was evidently some fighting on the way, as "about 20 casualties" are reported.

Major-Gen. Paget, it is stated, had reported from Haman's Kraal that Lieut.-Gen. Baden-Powell was engaged with Commandant Grobler's rearguard all yesterday. Grobler was driven back on the east of the Pienaars River, and Baden-Powell occupied the railway station of that name last evening. During the night Baden-Powell's and the enemy's advance guards galloped into each other. The Rhodesian Regiment suffered severely, Lieut.-Col. Spreckley and four men being killed, and Lieut.-Col. and six men wounded. Capt. Kinsman, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, also severely wounded. Boers lost a good many killed and wounded. Their laager was at Cyferkuil, on the Plat River, and is being closely pursued by Plumer and Hickman.

Lord Roberts also sends news of Gen. De Wet:—

"It seems pretty certain," he says, "that De Wet finding it hopeless to make his way eastward with his guns and waggons, has recrossed the Megaliesberg with a few mounted men with the intention of returning to the Orange River Colony. He will arrive there in a very different condition from that in which he started from Bethlehem. Then he had six or eight guns and some two thousand men with him, and left Prinsloo with five or six thousand in Bethlehem Hills. Between four and five thousand of these are on their way to Ceylon. The guns have mostly been buried, and De Wet's personal following cannot amount to much more than three hundred. Steyn, with a small bodyguard, is stated to have crossed the Pienaars River on his way to join Kruger at Machadodorp. The above information, collected from various sources, is corroborated by a German prisoner who surrendered to Paget this morning."

We are further informed that:—

"A party of Boers yesterday blew up a portion of the railway at Koetzes Drift, about eight miles north of Newcastle, and damaged some rails 30 miles south of Newcastle. Carrington reports that his outposts were engaged with the enemy again yesterday near Ottoshoop. Lieut. Gilpin, Victorian Bushmen, was killed. Lieut. Fraser, Cameron Highlanders, taken prisoner by Boers on 2nd inst., escaped, and arrived here yesterday."

When Methuen advanced from the Vaal in pursuit of De Wet he left Lieut.-Col. Young husband and three sick and wounded men in a farm near Lindique under charge of Capt. Powell, R.A.M.C. They were sufficiently well on Tuesday to travel, and have been taken to Vereeniging.

Thursday, Aug. 3.

Sentence of death passed upon Cordua. Confirmed by Lord Roberts.

Friday, Aug. 24.

Matters for congratulation reported by Lord Roberts are contained in the following despatches posted at the War Office this afternoon:—

"Pretoria, Thursday.

"Baden-Powell, in his engagement with the enemy yesterday near Warmbaths, succeeded in rescuing about 100 British prisoners. He captured 25 Boers, including a German artillery officer, Capt. Van der Merwe, of the Staats Artillery, and Field-Cornet Zitzich, of Johannesburg.

Buller's casualties on Tuesday were as follow:— Killed: 2nd Gordon Highlanders, 7. Wounded: Royal Artillery—Capt. Ellershaw, severely, lost thigh; 18th Hussars—Lieut. C. Field, severely, back, not penetrating lung, and 20 men. Missing: 5 men.

"He reports that, while reconnoitring yesterday, Gen. Kitchener drove off a considerable force of Boers, who were holding a position in the Komati Valley. We had eight casualties.

"Paget reports that Capt. W. N. Bolton, 1st Wiltshire Regiment, was slightly wounded in shoulder on Tuesday. "Rundle reports that some Yeomanry patrols sent to Brandwater found buried 140,000 rounds of Sauer ammunition, twelve Krupp shells, and 200 lbs. of dynamite. Several Boers who were hiding were arrested."

"Pretoria, Thursday, 11.20 p.m.

"The columns which pursued De Wet made some wonderful marches. Colonel Mackinnon, commanding the City Imperial Volunteers, who has just arrived here with a wing of his battalion, telegraphs me that they marched 224 miles in fourteen days, one of which was a halt, an average of over 17 miles a day. The best record was 75 miles in four days. The men are looking very well and most workmanlike."

The special correspondent of the Standard says:—"Four scarves made by the Queen have been awarded to four privates of the Colonial Corps for distinguished bravery. The men are Thompson, of the Canadians; Dufraye, of the New South Wales contingent; Cotta, of the New Zealand; and Chadwick, of Roberts's Horse. Chadwick turns out to be an American, and one of the boat's crew who cut the cable at Santiago Harbour. Lord Roberts, however, after investigating the matter, has decided not to rob this brave man of the honour he has so worthily won."

Total casualties since the beginning of the war up to the end of last week:—

	Officers.	N.C.O. & Men
Killed	275	2,560
Died of wounds ...	78	724
Missing and prisoners (excluding those who have been recovered or died in captivity)	54	2,751
Prisoners died in captivity	1	85
Died of disease ...	147	5,130
Accidental deaths ...	1	86
Sent home as invalids...	1,151	26,128*
	1,707	37,459

Total Losses (exclusive of sick and wounded men now in British Hospitals in South Africa) ...

39,166

* Of these 151 have died, 639 have been discharged from the service as unfit, and 1,674 are in hospital.

ALL dismounted drafts proceeding to South Africa are in future to be equipped with double loop web bandoliers, in place of ammunition pouches. These bandoliers will hold 100 rounds of small arm ammunition, and should be offered at the rate of one per non-commissioned officer or man to be equipped.

STEPS are being taken for passing a full complement of Sepoys into the Reserves in the Bengal and Punjab campaigns, their places in the rank being filled with recruits. Military service was never more popular than it is at present, it is satisfactory to know, with the warlike races of India, and no difficulty is experienced in getting all the men required. A correspondent assures us that Army service is becoming yearly more popular in India in consequence of the kindness and consideration which the men receive at the hands of their officers.

VOLUNTEER TRANSPORT.—It has been notified that the Secretary of State for War has had under his consideration the question of allowing Volunteer battalions to employ steam in lieu of animal transport. Lord Lansdowne has no objection to Volunteer units employing steam transport, provided that all the first-line transport is horsed—i.e., transport which may have to go up to the front-line troops carrying small-arm ammunition, entrenching tools, and medical stores. The allowance admissible for steam transport will be regulated by the equivalent carrying capacity sanctioned for animal transport in each corps—that is, on the basis of one two-horse wagon carrying 30cwt. In order to exercise proper supervision over regimental transport, each commanding officer of an infantry battalion may appoint one of his officers to be transport officer to the battalion, and further instructions will be issued regarding the certificate which such officer should possess in order to qualify for the post.

Obituary.

NAVY.

Paymaster-in-Chief Arthur Price died at Ealing on the 17th inst., at the age of 78. He became an Assistant-Paymaster (then Passed Clerk) 1846; Paymaster 1850; and retired as Paymaster-in-Chief 1882, having never served as an accountant officer, but was continually employed in the naval secretariat. As a passed clerk he was Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief in China, on board the Hastings, 1847-50. In those days flag officers could nominate anyone as secretary. Executive officers and civilians were frequently appointed, and the selection was not confined, as in the present day, to the paymaster's branch. He afterwards served as Secretary at the Nore, 1851-57, at Plymouth 1858-61, and at Portsmouth 1866-69. From 1860-63 and 1869-82 he was specially employed at the Admiralty revising dockyard and other regulations for the administration of the civil establishments, and thus had the advantage of upwards of 31 years in succession at home. Although not of exceptional ability, he was a most reliable and well-informed officer, thereby securing the confidence and esteem of many distinguished admirals, independent of those under whom he served, and was a true representative of the old type of secretary, very few of whom he leaves behind him.

Capt. Richard Osborn Maclean Doig, Royal Marine Light Infantry, died at the hospital, Wei-hai-wei, on the 13th inst., of enteric fever, on his return from serving with Sir Edward Seymour's Naval Brigade in the China Field Force. Capt. Doig was the only child of Mrs. Doig, late of Bedford. Born April 15, 1872, he joined the Royal Marines as 2nd Lieut. Sept. 1, 1890; became Lieut. July 1, 1891; and Captain, April 1, 1898. He was borne on the books of the Endymion.

ARMY.

Major-Gen. John Moore Graham, Colonel, retired list, Indian Staff Corps, died at Lees Cottage, Walmer, the residence of his son-in-law, Lieut.-Col. Hungerford, on the 21st inst., aged 72. He joined the Army June 11, 1847; became Captain Feb. 18, 1861; Major June 11, 1867; Lieut.-Colonel June 11, 1873; Colonel June 11, 1878; and retired with the hon. rank of Major-General Aug. 31, 1879. He served during the Indian Mutiny of 1857-58 (medal), and received through the Secretary of State for India the most gracious approbation of Her Majesty for services performed during that period, and was also mentioned and thanked in Government orders and despatches; commanded the 5th Batn. Military Police in the expedition against the Lushai tribes in 1860-61; served in Bhootan with the force under Brig.-Gen. Tombs at the recapture of the Hill Forts of Dewangiri, in 1865 (medal with clasp); served as political officer with the force under Brig.-Gen. Stafford against the Duffa tribes in 1874-75.

Deputy Inspector-Gen. John Burton St. Croix Crosse, retired list, died at Leigh House, Surbiton, on the 21st inst., aged 84. He joined the Army as Assistant-Surgeon Oct. 9, 1840; became Surgeon June 16, 1848; Surgeon-Major Oct. 9, 1860; and retired with the hon. rank of Deputy Inspector-General March 9, 1866. He served with the 11th Hussars in the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, including the affair of Bulganac, battles of Alma, Balaclava, Inkerman, and Tchernaya, and siege and fall of Sebastopol (medal with four clasps, knight of the Legion of Honour, and Turkish medal). After retirement he was for many years surgeon to the Duke of York's School, Chelsea.

Col. Edward Henry Davidson Macpherson Cluny Macpherson, retired list, late of the 2nd Batn. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, died at Charlton Court, Cheltenham, on the 18th inst. Col. Macpherson, who was chief of the Clan Chattan, was born in 1836. He joined the Army as Ensign in the 93rd Highlanders, Nov. 3, 1854; became Captain May 13, 1859; Major July 5, 1872; Lieut.-Colonel Jan. 1, 1879; and Colonel Jan. 1, 1893. He commanded the 1st Regimental District Glencorse, 1885-90. He served with the 93rd Highlanders in the Crimea from July 14, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol (medal with clasp and Turkish medal); in the Indian campaign, 1857-59, including the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, battle of Cawnpore on Dec. 6, 1857, and pursuit to the Seraighat, action of Khudagunge, siege and fall of Lucknow, attack on the fort of Rooyah, actions at Allypunge and Bareilly, campaign of Oudh, &c. (medal with two clasps); and also in the Eusofzai campaign, 1863-64 (medal with clasp).

Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Edward Henry Legge, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms, and late of the Coldstream Guards, died at his residence, Holmwood Lodge, Dorking, on the 16th inst., aged 66. Col. Legge was the third son of the fourth Earl of Dartmouth. Born in 1834, he was educated at Eton and at Christ Church Oxford, and served for 20 years in the Coldstream Guards, from which he retired in 1875 to take up the secretaryship of the St. Stephen's Club, which he held until 1885, when he was appointed Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms to the House of Commons. He married in 1873 Cordelia, the third daughter of Mr. W. H. Molesworth. The funeral took place on Tuesday at South Holmwood Church. The coffin bore the inscription: "Edward Henry Legge, died August 16, aged 66." The chief mourners were: Mrs. Legge, the widow; Miss Lois Legge, daughter; Mr. Walter Legge, Mr. Douglas Legge, and Mr. Charles Legge, sons; the Bishop of Lichfield, Col. the Hon. Heneage Legge, and the Hon. and Rev. George Legge, brothers; Col. Henry C. Legge, Mr. Arthur Legge, and the Rev. Hugh Legge, nephews; and Mr. Barnardiston, brother-in-law. There also attended the Rev. Canon Wilberforce, chaplain to the House of Commons; Lord William Seymour, Lord Ashcombe, and Lord Radstock; Mr. Hargreaves Brown, M.P., and Mrs. Brown, General Sir Percy Feilding, Col. Helsham-Jones, Sir Edward Newdigate, and Sir C. Wilson. The service at the grave was conducted by Canon Wilberforce.

Capt. Arthur Kennedy Blair, Indian Staff Corps (36th Sikhs), died near Satara, of cholera, on the 29th ult. Born March 1, 1868, the son of Gen. C. R. Blair, 37, Green Park, Bath, he joined the East Lancashire Regiment as 2nd Lieut. April 24, 1889, becoming Lieut. May 23, 1891. He was appointed to the Indian Staff Corps July 8, 1891, and served in the operations on the North-West Frontier of India, 1897-98, including the defence of Gulistan, dangerously wounded (medal with three clasps).

Lieut. Viscount Encombe, 5th (Militia) Batn. Northumberland Fusiliers, died at 48, Belgrave Square, on the 18th inst. Born in May, 1870, the eldest son of the Earl of Eldon, he was educated at Oxford, and joined the Northumberland Fusiliers as 2nd Lieut. Dec. 25, 1895, becoming Lieut. May 19, 1897. He proceeded with his battalion to Malta early this year, and since April last had been acting as A.D.C. to Gen. Sir Francis Grenfell. He married in 1898 the Hon. Mary Turnor, daughter of Lord Lovat.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—One of the most astounding things connected with the present war in South Africa seems to me that whereas the Boer generals maintain their extraordinary powers of mobility, they are nevertheless able to keep their horses in "the pink of condition." This is stated to have been the condition of 2,000—if not more—of the horses recently captured from Gen. Prinsloo. Local advantages may have, of course, a great deal to do with this, but there must be something besides, in the way of the management and treatment of cavalry horses in the field, to account for a good deal. Out of the many lessons which the War Office—if it will—will learn during the present campaign, one of the most useful will be the subject of horse equipment and treatment. Our cavalry will never be of any real use in the field until nearly all the dead weight is taken off the horses' backs. The military authorities will do well to consider the question of pack horses and light carts, which are able to move over country as quickly as a cavalry regiment, in the equipment of the future. Five hundred men on horses, not overweighted, and properly cared for, would be of far greater use on active service than double the number mounted on half-starved and overweighted animals.

AN OLD STAFF OFFICER.

Southsea, Aug. 15.

THE Secretary for War has approved of Militia officers now serving with their battalions who intend to offer themselves as candidates for election to Parliament, or who wish to attend election meetings, being granted leave for such purposes.

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS, &c.—ALEX. MACDONALD and Co., Limited (late A. Macdonald, Field and Co.), Workers in Polished Granites to the Queen, undertake the erection of their work in any part of the country. The largest stock of granite monuments in the country may be seen at their London premises. For designs and prices, address as above, to the Aberdeen Granite Works, Aberdeen; or 373, Euston Road, London N.W.

ARMY EXAMINATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Is there any reason why the Civil Service Commissioners could not follow the example set by the authorities at the Universities in regard to their scholarships, and publish the places of education opposite to the names of the successful candidates in the Woolwich and Sandhurst examinations? In years gone by this used to be regularly done, but was suddenly dropped, and it certainly would be of extreme interest to parents who have boys intended for the Army, to see what the public schools do. In the recent Woolwich Entrance Examination one school, to my own knowledge, sent up 25 candidates, of whom no less than 24 were successful, a phenomenal record. Such facts should be available to the general public in the same way that the winners of scholarships at the universities have their schools placed after their names. Unless there is any valid reason against it, known only to the Commissioners, the public have a right to ask that this may be done in the future.

O. C.

THE Secretary of State for War has approved of officers on sick leave from South Africa, and who reside within a mile of any military hospital, being allowed free medical attendance from an Army medical officer or civil surgeon engaged for duty with the troops.

CAVALRY.

5th Dragoon Guards.—Gen. Clery (for Gen. Buller) telegraphed to the War Office from Greylingstad on Saturday last:—"Capt. Reynolds, 3rd Dragoon Guards, and 22 non-commissioned officers and men of the 5th Dragoon Guards, completely surprised by about 80 of the enemy's horse near to Dornkop, August 14. It is believed that enemy's loss is considerable. Capt. Reynolds slightly wounded; 4603 Pte. H. Brechley reported missing." It was a most creditable bit of work. Capt. Reynolds was recently promoted from the regiment to a troop in the 3rd Dragoon Guards.

10th Hussars.—Lieut. the Hon. W. Cadogan, who came home recently invalided, left England on Thursday, in the Victorian, for South Africa, to rejoin headquarters in the field.

17th Lancers.—Major the Hon. L. H. D. Fortescue, who was killed in action at Diamond Hill, Pretoria, on June 11 last, aged 42 years, son of the third Earl Fortescue, appointed as sole executrix of his will, which bears date Feb. 13, 1900, his widow, the Hon. Emily Elizabeth Fortescue, of Castle Hill, Filleigh, Devon. The testator appointed a sum of £10,000 out of the settled fund in favour of his brother, Viscount Ebrington, and he confirmed the settlement made on his marriage in July, 1895. He bequeathed the residue of his estate to his wife absolutely, subject to a sum of £2,000, the interest of which is to be paid to Mrs. Fortescue during her life, and subject thereto for his said brother. In the event of his said brother dying in the lifetime of Mrs. Fortescue, the said sums of £10,000 and £2,000 are to be held in trust for the person entitled to the Earldom of Fortescue. The estate has been valued at £12,429 gross, and at £12,218 net.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The additional pay of lieutenants serving with local battalions and companies abroad (except Sierra Leone) has been increased from 3s. 6d. to 5s. a day.

Strong drafts of R.H.A. and R.F.A. will embark for South Africa on Friday next.

Lieut.-Col. A. C. Bailward has been appointed to the command of the 47th Brigade Division R.F.A., Curragh.

Capt. F. Lyon, R.F.A., left England on Wednesday for the Gold Coast.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

It is notified in an Army Order that in future commissions in the corps will only be granted to cadets who have passed through either the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, or the Royal Military College, Kingston, Canada.

Brevet-Major H. H. Anstin, at Osborne, on Monday, was decorated by the Queen with the Distinguished Service Order in recognition of his services in the British East Africa Protectorate 1897-98.

INFANTRY.

Irish Guards.—The regiment will assemble for training at Caterham on Saturday next. Meantime Major Hamilton, who has been in command since his appointment from the Royal Fusiliers, has been busily occupied every day at the Horse Guards arranging details. Recruiting is going on satisfactorily, and in addition to the men transferred from the other Guards' regiments and Irish Militia regiments, about 200 candidates have offered themselves. A new regimental march has been composed, and will shortly be played in public by one of the other Guards' bands. Of the six 2nd Lieuts. posted to the regiment two are Scottish and four are Irish. All six are serving in South Africa. Lord Settrington is the son of the Earl of March and grandson of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, and Lord H. A. Montagu-Douglas-Scott is brother of the Duke of Buccleuch. Both are serving as extra aides-de-camp to Lord Roberts. The Earl of Kingston, a Mayo nobleman, is attached to the Connaught Rangers; 2nd Lieut. Bruce, with the H.L.I., is the son of Col. H. J. Bruce, late Coldstream Guards, and grandson of Sir H. H. Bruce, Downhill, county Derry. 2nd Lieut. Spencer Chichester is with the 6th Batn. Warwick Regiment. He is the eldest son of Lord Adolphus Spencer Chichester, Mayola Park, county Derry, and nephew of the Marquis of Donegall, while 2nd Lieut. McCalmont, with the 6th Batn. Warwick Regiment, is the son of Col. J. McCalmont, M.P., and nephew of Major-Gen. McCalmont, C.B., commanding the Cork District.

Royal Scots (1st).—Major Gould-Adams, C.B., C.M.G., Resident Commissioner, Bechuanaland Protectorate, has arrived home from the Cape. Pipe-Major McCallum, 2nd Batn., died lately at the Station Hospital, Poona, much regretted. He had been about a week in hospital suffering from dysentery, and had, it was thought, been making rapid progress towards convalescence. It was discovered, however, on the 31st ult., that the patient lying next to him was suffering from cholera. Sergeant McCalmum was at once removed to another ward, but during the day choleraic symptoms appeared, and early on the morning of the 1st inst. he passed away, deeply regretted by all ranks of the battalion.

Royal Fusiliers (7th).—The new 4th Batn. has now been completed to an establishment of eight companies, and is eligible for foreign service.

Norfolk Regiment (9th).—Lieut. Annesley, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for twelve months on medical certificate.

Somersetshire Light Infantry (13th).—Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Couchman, 1st Batn., on appointment as an officiating A.A.G. in India has been posted to the Deesa District; Lieut. Jones-Mortimer, 1st Batn., has been appointed A.D.C. to Gen. Sir Power Palmer in India.

West Yorkshire Regiment (14th).—Capt. Mansel-Jones, 2nd Batn., was at Osborne, on Monday, decorated with the Victoria Cross by the Queen in recognition of his distinguished gallantry in action on Feb. 27 last on the Tugela, Natal.

Royal Irish Regiment (18th).—Capt. Garraway has been appointed D.A.A.G. on the Indian establishment for five years.

Royal Welsh Fusiliers (23rd).—Capt. Webber, who was A.D.C. to Lieut.-Gen. Sir Leslie Rundle in South Africa before he was invalided to England, has left home in the Aurania to resume duty in the field, having recovered from the severe wound he received in action at Biddulphsburg.

South Wales Borderers (24th).—Major Trower, 1st Batn., who arrived home lately from India on leave, left Tilbury Docks on Thursday, in command of drafts for South Africa, in the Victorian.

King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th).—Capt. Wildman-Lushington has been an instructor at the Royal Military College, since February, 1893, but owing to the absence of so many officers on active service, he is to be allowed to retain his appointment until the end of the year.

Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (27th).—The will of the late Lieut.-Col. Thackeray, who was killed in action in the operations for the relief of Ladysmith on Feb. 23 last, has been proved by his widow, Mrs. Louisa Thackeray, of 12, St. Aubyn's, Hove, the sole executrix. The estate is valued at £6,894 8s. 7d. gross, and £2,608 1s. 9d. nett. Capt. Gelston, 3rd (Militia) Batn., left England on Wednesday for the West Coast of Africa to resume duty with the Lagos Constabulary.

Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry (32nd).—Lieut. Williams-Freeman has been granted leave from India to England for one year on urgent private affairs.

Dorsetshire Regiment (39th).—Major Godwin-Austen is en route to the Cape in command of a draft of 100 men to join the 2nd Batn. (54th). Capt. Ingham left England yesterday for South Africa, in command of drafts, in the Tagus.

Welsh Regiment (41st).—Sergt.-Major Lees arrived home from the Cape on Saturday, having been sent home in view of his promotion to a commission for distinguished conduct in the field on the occasion of the occupation of Bloemfontein. Just prior to the last bayonet charge of the gallant Welshmen Capt. Lomax was shot. Sergt.-Major Lees at once assumed command of the company, gave the order to fix bayonets, and by a magnificent rush carried the position. Capt. Lomax died of his wound, or this heroic non-commissioned officer would have been recommended for the Victoria Cross.

Essex Regiment (44th).—Lieut.-Col. Wood, who has been invalided home from South Africa, suffering from debility after fever, arrived at Southampton on the 18th inst.; 13 men of the regiment took passage on the same steamer, eight invalided from fever and five from wounds. Brevet-Lieut.-Col. Tudway, who was shot in the chest whilst in action with the mounted infantry, and was invalided to England, has returned to the front and resumed duty. Capt. Pamplin-Green, 3rd (Militia) Batn., left England on Wednesday for the Gold Coast, to resume duty with the local constabulary.

Sherwood Foresters (45th).—Mrs. Gosset, writing to us from 10, Roman Road, Bedford Park, Chiswick, states that she is still sending out comforts to the battalion. She adds:—

"My husband, in a letter dated July 12, acknowledges the receipt of many cases and parcels, and says: 'When sending any more, please remember it will be getting hot again in September. The following are always useful:—Socks, notepaper and envelopes, pocket-handkerchiefs, tobacco and pipes, sweets, shirts. Any drawn or vests will also come in handy for men who have no shirts or trousers.' I have already sent 75 cases and hope to be able to go on sending each week."

Oxfordshire Light Infantry (52nd).—Capt. Davies, who has been travelling in China, has been ordered to join the staff of Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. Gaselee on special service.

Border Regiment (55th).—Major Caulfield, D.S.O. has been granted leave from India to England for three months on urgent private affairs.

East Lancashire Regiment (59th).—Major Twynham, having been ordered to join the 1st Batn. (30th) in South Africa, on promotion, Capt. Stewart has succeeded him as Station Staff Officer, Jullundur.

King's Royal Rifles (60th).—The ladies of Pietermaritzburg have decided to place a stained-glass window, with a brass tablet beneath it, in the garrison church there, to the memory of Lieut. the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, V.C., son of Lord Roberts who was killed at Colenso.

Manchester Regiment (63rd).—Capt. Jackson and Silverthorne, and Lieuts. Selano and Watters, 5th (Militia) Batn., with 131 non-commissioned officers and men, are undergoing a course of instruction in mounted infantry duties at Aldershot.

Royal Berkshire Regiment (66th).—Major McClintock left England on Thursday, in the Victorian, with drafts for South Africa.

Durham Light Infantry (68th).—Lord Roberts telegraphing from Pretoria on the 17th inst., announcing the relief of Col. Hore's force at Eland's River by Lord Kitchener, remarked:—"The only casualty mentioned in Kitchener's force is that excellent mounted infantry officer, Lieut.-Col. De Lisle, severely wounded hand and arm."

Seaforth Highlanders (72nd).—2nd Lieut. Fraser, 3rd (Militia) Batn., succumbed to an attack of dysentery after a short illness, at the Citadel Hospital, Cairo, on the 7th inst. Deceased was scarcely 18 years of age. The funeral took place on the 8th inst. The cortege left the Citadel at 4.45, and arrived at the cemetery in Old Cairo punctually at 5.30. All the officers not on duty were present, representing every branch of the service of the British and the Egyptian Army. The Rev. A. S. Norfolk, assisted by the Rev. W. F. Archibald, conducted the service. This young officer only arrived in Egypt a fortnight before his death in apparently the best of health, was admitted to hospital on the 5th inst., and died on the evening of the 7th.

Gordon Highlanders (75th).—The Queen at Osborne on Monday conferred a V.C. on Lieut. and Qmr. Robertson, 3rd (Militia) Batn., for gallantry at the Battle of Elands-laagte. Lieut. Robertson arrived at the Royal residence in uniform, and was very graciously received by the Queen. He was severely wounded in action, but is rapidly recovering.

Leinster Regiment (100th).—Major (Capt.) Browne, second in command West Africa Regiment, left England on Wednesday for the Gold Coast, to take up duty under Lieut.-Col. Burroughs.

Rifle Brigade.—Col. Lee has been granted a five years' extension of the command of the 5th (Militia) Batn., a fact which is scarcely to be wondered at, having regard to the splendid condition to which the battalion has been brought during his term of command. Letters are continually reaching us from Chatham on the subject, one correspondent, an old staff officer, assuring us that "the battalion by its soldierly bearing and good conduct reflects the utmost credit on the whole of the Rifle Brigade." Equally good reports come to us from Shorncliffe, where the 7th (Militia) Batn. is, we are told, "earning the admiration of all by its excellent conduct and esprit de corps."

Army Service Corps.—The three new companies, the 48th, 49th, and 50th, were added to the establishment on Monday at Aldershot, Woolwich, and Dublin respectively. The corps is to be still further increased. It is notified at Aldershot that, in addition to three additional companies just formed, 31 more are to be raised as soon as possible. This will give the corps an effective strength of 81 companies, against 38 at the commencement of the war.

BOOKS ON CHINA.

China and the Present Crisis, by Joseph Walton, M.P. (Sampson, Low & Co.), appears to be a reprint of a commonplace book kept during the author's recent journeying in China, Japan, and Corea. It thus consists of a record of successive impressions, and of observations more or less profound. Undeniably the notes are interesting and many of them are very suggestive in regard to the existing conditions. Mr. Walton is a harsh critic of the present Government, which he accuses of extreme carelessness in regard to our position in China. Neither does the legation at Peking command his respect, and he has loud disapproval of our acquiescence in the usurpation of the Empress. His chief censures, however, are reserved for the Government for having shown fatuous inability to check the railway conquest of China by our rivals. After having conceded to Russia the exclusive right of making railways in Manchuria, we permit her, through the Russo-Chinese Bank, to make a railway invasion, by the Hankow line, of the Yang-tze region, which is supposed to be our sphere, although at the present moment Russia, France, Germany, and Japan, according to Mr. Walton, are more actively advancing their commercial and political interests than we in that part of China. "While a comparatively poor country like Russia is not hesitating to spend £100,000,000 on these projects, which will enable her finally to reap a rich harvest as regards both her commercial and political interests, what, I ask, is England doing? The British Government, so far, appears to have lost those qualities of enterprise, courage, and foresight which characterised our forefathers, and by which our world-wide British Empire has been built up. Not only have they refused, as a matter of high Imperial policy, to give any encouragement or guarantee to a railway from British Burma to the upper Yang-tze as a counterpoise to the Russian railways, but they have actually stopped the construction of the railway to Kunlon Ferry, in British Burma; and this at a time when France is vigorously pushing on with the construction of her railway from Tonkin through Yunnan to Szechuan, by which she will draw the trade of south-west China through French territories with the aid of protective tariffs, instead of our being able to carry on a free and unrestricted trade through British Burma." We have thought it well to reproduce these views, because they deserve attention, and the matters at issue are manifestly of vast importance. For the moment our work, as Mr. Walton agrees, must be to bring about a settlement, and then we must work for the integrity of China, and he strongly holds that Japan is our ally, since her interests are the same as our own, and she is prepared to uphold them. But stable government is the first necessity, and Mr. Walton seems to have had much faith in Li Kun Li and Chang Chih Tung, as enlightened and progressive statesmen. His book should have many readers.

China, the Long-Lived Empire, by Eliza Ruhamah Scidmore (Century Company), is a very different volume, full of suggestion also in its excellent description, and lighter in its touch. The writer has travelled much and seen a great deal, and she knows how to write, without attempting to deal with railways or concessions except quite incidentally. She is content to describe the aspect of things, and the result is a really delightful book, from which the general reader may learn a great deal. An excellent account of Tien-tsin before the trouble pictures its varied scenes and social gaieties, and we are then carried off to Shanhaikwan, where the great wall abuts on the sea, and there is a capital description of that vast structure, which Mrs. Scidmore did not find disappointing. Then she describes a journey, before the railway was completed, in a house-boat from Tien-tsin to Tungchow, and thence "an all-day jolt" to Peking in a Chinese cart. The capital is described in several brilliant chapters, wherein the changing scenes and the various characters of the place pass before us. Mrs. Scidmore was in many ways privileged, and she has made the most of her opportunities. Among other things she has much to say of the Chinese Court, and describes the rise of the Dowager Empress. She is severe upon the coup d'état, and the selection as heir of Pu Chun, "son of Prince Tuan, and grandson of the dowager's own deceased consort, the Emperor Hienfung, a boy of nine, whose father and tutors have been rabid anti-foreign conservatives of the most virulent unenlightened kind, leaders of the secret societies opposed to foreigners and Western progress." "The Great Bore of Hangchow" makes a capital chapter, and so does the writer's visit to a provincial yamen, which gives her the occasion of saying something about Chinese society and social life. An admirable description of the sights and scenes of Yang-tze and its gorges, closes a volume of much more than ordinary interest, which will not fail both to instruct and entertain. It is very well illustrated.

SHORT NOTICES.

The British Constitution as a Fighting Machine. By C. McL. McHardy (London: P. S. King and Co.) We strongly recommend this pamphlet to the notice of those who are interested in the subject of Army reform. The author may take an extreme view, perhaps, in some matters which he brings under review; but there is a great deal of sound common sense in what he says. Unlike many writers he does seem to have mastered the fundamental principles of administration. This renders his arguments intelligible. It is a great comfort when one finds a military writer who shows that he has grasped his subject. Mr. McHardy certainly has done that, and so his brochure is the more to be commended.

The Semaphore Alphabet, by Lieut. H. R. Hardinge, Hampshire Regiment (London: Forster Groom and Co.) Lieut. Hardinge is to be congratulated upon the success of his endeavours to bring home to those who are being trained as signallers the simplicity of the system. In the chart before us there is no attempt to introduce unnecessary instruction. The whole principles of "flag wagging" are put before the novice in a way which he cannot fail to grasp. We recommend the chart to notice, fulfilling, as it ought to do, a useful purpose in providing young soldiers with all details of the flag alphabet in a cheap form.

The Naval Word Book (Die Seemannssprache), von N. W. Thomas, M.A. (Kiel: Lipsius und Tischer), has just appeared in a second and enlarged edition. The author is an Englishman, long resident as a teacher of our language in the German naval port, and his volume, which we have already commended as excellent, has received much official support, large numbers of copies having been supplied to the German naval department, the naval academy and school at Kiel, the training ships, &c. It certainly deserves to be a success in this country also.

Englischer Militär-Dolmetscher (Berlin: Trowitzsch und Sohn) is an admirable grammar and reading-book of the English language for German military students. After laying down the groundwork it is specialised upon military subjects, and gives accounts of events in South Africa, &c., for translation.

Messrs. Blackwood have added to their "Classical Texts" Ovid: Metamorphoses (Selections), and to their "English Classics" the following:—Johnson: Lives of Milton and Addison; Cowper: Task and Minor Poems; Goldsmith: Select Poems; Scott: Lady of the Lake; and Macaulay: Life of Johnson. These are all in excellent form, carefully annotated by the best authorities, and in all ways most useful to students.

Silvertown and Neighbourhood (including East and West Ham), by Archer Philip Crouch (Thomas Burleigh), is an ideal little history of the place.

A Memorial of the Chess Tournament, arranged by the City of London Chess Club, 1900 (Longmans), includes the games played, and should be in the hands of all chess players.

ADMIRAL SEYMOUR'S DASH.

AT last we have something like a complete account of the gallant attempt which Admiral Seymour made to relieve the harassed Legations in Peking. A diary kept by Renter's Correspondent, who accompanied the column, several accounts by junior officers of the expedition, and finally, a private letter from the Admiral himself—which, like many other private letters in the present day, has been given to the Press by its recipient—all these tell the stirring story with more or less detail, and paint a vivid picture of the hardships and perils experienced by the column. The newspaper correspondent, who probably had more time to think about such things than his messmates, got very downhearted towards the end of the trying time. On the second day of the retreat, when almost every step had been disputed, he relates how a prisoner gave them the information that the allied forces at Tien-tsin were hard pressed, and he says, "it is very evident that we can hope for no help from that quarter. The great matter for anxiety is the ammunition supply, which, there is only too much reason to fear, is running very short. When it is finished I am much afraid the column is finished also." A midshipman, too, describes how, on June 20, "we had to fight our way all day; we even had our lunch under fire. On Thursday (21st), we were again under fire the whole day, until 10 p.m., when we had two hours' sleep." And then he describes how they were deceived by the Chinamen at the Hsiku Arsenal, from which fire was suddenly opened at fifty yards distance. "We all ran like rabbits for cover, another midshipman and myself jumping into a hole in the bank." Then came the capture of the forts at the point of the bayonet, and salvation. Admiral Seymour himself tells of the hard straits they were put to, "drinking Peiho water, which is like red pea soup, plus the most awful things thrown into it." And, again, "at one time we shot a horse and its rider in action in the morning and ate the former (not the latter) in the evening." Elsewhere we are told that during the retreat from the place where the train was abandoned with its stores and provisions to the arsenal "all we had to live on was a quarter of a pound of biscuit per man, and nine pounds of meat between sixty." The delight with which they must have hailed the five tons of rice found in the arsenal can be imagined, and it is not surprising to learn from another officer's letter that nearly all the force has since been down with dysentery or enteric from the effects of what they had eaten and drunk.

But though exposed to continued discomfort and danger, harassed day and night by the enemy in continually increasing numbers, and hampered by a large number of wounded, the behaviour of the allied troops of eight nationalities was worthy of the best traditions of any. One can conceive nothing more trying to tact and temper than the handling of such a force, especially in the circumstances depicted; yet from first to last there was never a breath of dissension; the foreign officers speak in most enthusiastic terms of the Admiral, and, as he says, "they were very nice to me, and, as it went on more and more, said 'A vos ordres,' and whatever you say we will do." Reuter's account is full of incidents illustrating the gallantry, pluck, and devotion of the men of the various nationalities without exception. The list of casualties tells the same tale. While, however, all held together, as was necessary to preserve a united front to the enemy, the Admiral points out how a certain grouping of the Allies took place. He says: "The Germans we admired the most, but for dash and go no one passed, or perhaps equalled, the Americans. The French had no particular rapprochement to any other nationality. The Germans and the Russians were inclined to hold together. The Americans with us always. The Japanese inclined to us, but the Russians were friendly to them. The Italians and Austrians were good fellows, but few in number." As a writer once remarked, there is a camaraderie bred of the sea, and surely it may be held to have found vivid expression here. These seamen, toiling along, under fire always, subjected to suffering of many kinds, menaced by barbarian foes, who were capable, as their conduct showed, of unspeakable atrocities, surely present a striking example to the nations they represent of unswerving valour, ready resource, and the best spirit of comradeship. Although it had not achieved success, the expedition had certainly deserved it. No wonder we are told that when the column returned to Tien-tsin it was received by the community in dead silence, but not the silence of indifference or censure. "There was hardly a spectator," writes the Special Correspondent of the Standard, "who would not have found his voice choked with emotion had he tried to cheer. It was the first experience of anything of the kind, and the contrast between the jaunty smartness of the column when it started for Peking, and the ghastly, bedraggled, footsore men who came back, was too marked to be pleasant. The force would have faced a harder struggle without flinching, and probably would have come through it with triumph; but in this case the severity of trial had lain in the unexpected. It had been forced into a situation for which it was unprepared, and, which its leaders had in no way anticipated: the result had been a hard-fought struggle for life."

How it came about that the anticipation of the commanders were unfulfilled is explained by the Japanese story furnished in a report to the Naval Department at Tokio. Herein is a complete reply to the reported criticism of the German Emperor. As the Vossische Zeitung says, "speeches delivered on festival occasions, or to troops about to sail, cannot be treated as if they had the importance of diplomatic documents," and we may be perfectly certain that, even if the Emperor had used the words attributed to him, they were not intended for public digestion. The notion that if the Admiral had utilised the experience gained as a midshipman forty years previously he would not have attempted the relief of Peking may have been good enough pabulum for the departing troops, but as from one man of experience to another it would have been simply twaddle. The man on the spot has proved himself, as might have been expected, the best judge. When the Admiral made his gallant attempt the condition of affairs in Peking was becoming daily more desperate. The only opposition which appeared likely was that of the Boxers, a practically unarmed and undisciplined rabble. Everything pointed to the success of a bold and determined display of force. As the Japanese commander says, up to the moment when the expedition started on June 10, there was no reason to doubt the friendly disposition of the Chinese authorities. When the Boxers tore up the sleepers of the railway the Viceroy of Chi-li furnished workmen and materials for the repair of the track. It was not until seven days later, when the column was within twenty-five miles of Peking, that the Government troops made a hostile demonstration. The point is made clear by this report that the attitude of open hostility on the part of the Chinese troops was directly connected with the bombardment of the Taku forts, which were stormed and captured at dawn on the 17th, and, of course, without the knowledge of the Admiral. This action of the allied commanders in the Gulf of Pechi-li could not have been anticipated when the column took its departure, and when, on the 18th, it was attacked by General Tung's foreign trained troops with modern arms, the Admiral at once appreciated the change of plan necessitated by the radical alteration which the situation had undergone. Then it was he decided to abandon the railway and to march back along the river, carrying the wounded in boats, and it was on the 19th that the return journey was commenced. When the knowledge of these facts comes to him, we cannot doubt that the German Emperor will see his way to repair the mistake he is said to have made. From Sir Edward Seymour no excuse for his brave and gallant action is necessary. The undertaking may have been impossible of achievement, but it was glorious. As the Admiral in his letter says, in words that will reach the hearts of his countrymen, "I am aware, was aware, of its risk; but to my mind no other course was open to me in view of the urgent appeals from Peking. I could not with honour have held back. I went myself as the best and only way to put all under one head. When the Imperial Chinese troops, in numbers unknown, took arms against us, the project became impossible, and retreat difficult. . . . Two or three times our prospects were very dark, and disaster seemed not improbable; yet I never regretted I had started, as I could not have respected myself if I had not done so." Failure came, it is true, but the failure was of a kind which marks in glowing colours some of the brightest pages in our history. It is not blame, but praise that the Admiral and his colleagues deserve for their plucky attempt to relieve the women and children in Peking, and their countrymen, whatever be their nationality, cannot but be proud of the conduct of all who participated in the expedition.

NAVAL MANŒUVRES.

A GOOD deal of disappointment is always expressed at the close of naval manœuvres, and this year has been no exception to the rule. Some look for the solution, or at least the illustration, of great strategic schemes, for which the period allotted is usually too short; others ask for tactical exercises, or at least for manœuvres that shall bring them about. It cannot be said that from either point of view the manœuvres of 1900 have been a success, though, of course, as a period of training, particularly valuable for the Reserve Squadron, they could not but be of very distinct use. The French do not seem any more contented than ourselves with the operations of the year. They united their two squadrons, but the result does not satisfy the critics. Captain Vignot remarks in the Marine Française that naval manœuvres are only logical as possessing a purpose of instruction, and that they should be the occasion of verifying the new principles, conceptions, and ideas put forth or tried during the year. They should also be a period of mobilisation, to test the material, and to ascertain to what extent a body of men newly embarked in strange ships can be depended upon, and, most important of all, they should give the opportunity of strategical and tactical exercises such as cannot be undertaken with ordinary squadrons.

He does not think that from any of these points of view the French manœuvres have been a success. There was no mobilisation, and not any strategical scheme, and he says there were no tactics, though here he seems not to be quite correct. M. de Lanessan perhaps exaggerated the importance of the meeting of the squadrons in saying that it would give them a common system of training, though doubtless it will tend in that direction. We learn that in the action of July 3 the two squadrons approached one another in line ahead, when, all at once, the Mediterranean Squadron began Admiral Fournier's much-discussed serpent movement, which has something in common with the late Admiral Tryon's "T.A." system, the ships following the Admiral and keeping excellent station without signals. The Northern Squadron would appear to have been disconcerted by this manœuvre, and one observer said that the ships could only be compared to a drove of frightened sheep. Here, at least, was tactical instruction such as was wanting from our manœuvres, and a weakness was revealed, which is likely to be remedied. Admiral Gervais is said to have been so much impressed by the manœuvre that he did not care to repeat it. The attack on Oran at an earlier period seems to have been somewhat of a spectacle, and the criticism is offered that, if the attack had been simulated from the direction of Gibraltar, with an engagement, and damaged ships seeking refuge at slow speed, the torpedo-boats would have had a chance, and something might have been learned as to the value of speed.

Great praise is given to Admiral Gervais as a gallant and capable officer, but Captain Vignot says he is not the originating spirit needed for a commander-in-chief. The chief complaint is that the engagements were at too great a range, whereas one school of officers looks for actions at short range. Perhaps Admiral Gervais had the danger of collision before his mind in the case of opposing squadrons; but the French critic remarks drily that it is folly to imagine that the enemy will only do what one is tempted to do one's self.

Navy Notes.

The increase of foreigners among the officers of our Mercantile Marine is quite as serious an evil as the increase of alien seamen. The extent of the mischief is rather forcibly depicted in a recent letter to a contemporary penned by an apprentice on board a sailing vessel. This vessel (not, of course, named) left England with a crew of thirty hands, of whom six only were British subjects, and four of these apprentices. The officers, from the master downwards, were all foreigners, and the correspondent avows that this is quite a common state of affairs in the company under which he is serving. He goes on to say that his company makes no attempt to employ as officers the apprentices trained in its ships. The case may be exceptionally bad, and we hope it is so; but everyone knows how increasingly difficult it has become of late years for mates and masters to secure employment. If our shipping companies, especially the smaller lines, are so bent upon saving a few pounds a month at the expense of British officers, how, in the future, are we to officer the Naval Reserve? Mr. Ritchie frequently deplores the increase of aliens in the merchant service, and contends that the Board of Trade is utterly powerless to remedy the evil. But it seems to us that the Board has it within its powers to bring pressure to bear upon the shipowners, whilst the Government can at least insist that mail steamers and steamers engaged for the transport of troops shall carry British crews.

In consequence of Lady Erskine's ill-health Admiral Sir James Erskine has been obliged to forego the advantage of hoisting his flag as Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth. This placed the Admiralty in the almost unprecedented position of having no officer of his rank on whom they could confer the command, whose service as Commander-in-Chief of a squadron met the requirements for the appointment, other than Admiral Sir Charles Hotham, who has already held one of the senior home commands. To have gone to the vice-admiral's list would have been inconvenient, as Sir Edward Seymour is too importantly employed in China to admit of recall, while the next officer with the requisite service is Sir William Kennedy, whose promotion to admiral will not, in the present state of the flag list, occur until 1902; and it would have been unusual to have had an officer in command at the principal naval port, junior in rank to that usually held by the Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth. There was, therefore, no alternative but to allow Sir Charles Hotham to again hoist his flag at home. It would be better if the method of advancing officers to admiral's rank were readjusted. The establishment is ten, only two of whom are provided at one time with home commands. By slightly reducing the list, and only promoting vice-admirals who have commanded squadrons abroad, there would be less chance of complication. While the previous command of a squadron is a sine quâ non for the Portsmouth and Plymouth commands, the same has not hitherto been a necessity for that at the Nore.

Admiral Sir Charles Hotham's appointment to relieve Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, alters the arrangement of the active flag list that should have obtained had Admiral Sir James Erskine accepted that command and retained it until October 1902, on attaining the rank of admiral of the fleet by the compulsory retirement of the Earl of Clanwilliam. With the present nominee the post will not again become vacant until August 1903, when Sir Charles should be promoted in the vacancy caused by Admiral of the Fleet Sir Algernon Lyons's retirement on attaining the age of seventy, unless the Admiralty have stipulated that he, Sir Charles, is not to remain at Portsmouth for the usual period, or until the latter eventuality occurs. The unusual procedure of conferring a home command on a second occasion on a flag officer has only occurred once during the past half century, in the case of the late Admiral of the Fleet the Hon. Sir Charles Elliot, who, after serving at the Nore 1870-73, was given the Devonport command for nearly two years, 1880-81, when he obtained promotion at the age of sixty-three, whereas Sir Charles Hotham will become admiral of the fleet shortly after he is sixty.

Captain Ernest Rason recently assumed, in a letter to the Times, that the increase in diseases of the respiratory organs with the personnel of our fleet is due to the vessels being constructed of steel and iron. A writer in one of the daily papers attributes it to starvation, as men-of-war's men get no food between 4 p.m. and 5 a.m., and asserts that the Admiralty cheat and rob them. This gentleman appears to ignore the fact of the men being granted a monetary allowance, usually termed "savings," for the unconsumed part of their rations. Were the present allowance of provisions altered and "savings" at the same time abolished, there would be an immense outcry. Several years back it was proposed to add an allowance of pickles, but the older hands contended that it would induce the younger men to eat more salt meat, and thereby lessen the amount of "savings." As a committee is now investigating the desirability of improving the present naval ration, it would be better if agitators remained quiet until the report of experts was published.

Mr. Winston Churchill received a very cordial reception at Plymouth last week, and made a very able and spirited speech on military organisation. But the point to which we would refer here was his reference to the British Navy—a brief reference, yet enough to show that Mr. Churchill is keenly alive to the vital importance of sea power to this country, and that he is not the man, although trained as a soldier, to pin his faith to military armaments. Mr. Churchill is a coming man who will assuredly be in Parliament ere long. He inherits a large share of his distinguished father's ability, and can speak as well as he writes—or even better. Hence it is good to find him using these words in reference to the safeguarding of our commerce and of our shores from foreign invasion: "And then, as the train ran on, I caught sight of the blue sea, and remembered that on those waters, obedient, swift, and terrible, rode the mighty Navy of England. There was the answer to the questions that had disturbed my mind." And yet, as we are sorry to note, Mr. Churchill proceeded to qualify his avowed belief in the security afforded from invasion by our Navy. He dwelt at some length upon the horrors of invasion, arguing with skill that foreigners who live themselves in constant military preparation against such disaster, are not content, as we are, to trust to commercial and moral considerations to avert it. Indeed, he seemed to imply that military preparation was, in effect, the real safeguard. Of course, it is not so, however needful it is that we should maintain a mobile army. This question of Home Defence is likely to be much before the public for some time to come, and may figure in electioneering speeches. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the country will contrive to understand that the Navy is, was, and always must be, our real defence against foreign invasion.

Mr. H. O. Arnold Forster, M.P., has been writing an able series of articles on the British Army, which have appeared for some weeks past in several newspapers. In the course of these articles, Mr. Forster considers the wider issue of Imperial Defence, touching upon the relations between the Army and Navy in the general scheme of National Defence, the functions of the Cabinet Committee of Defence, and other points. Mr. Arnold Forster considers, and we agree with him, that the defects in our system of Imperial Defence may be attributed very largely to the indifference, and even ignorance, of our Ministers in the Cabinet to the problem of defence. If we ever obtain a Cabinet Committee of Defence composed of men who have studied the subject, the true functions of such a body may be defined in the words of the late Sir Geoffrey Hornby. These words are well worth quoting: "It is for the politicians," he said, "to tell me if they want the Channel defended or not; that is their business. They tell me I am to defend the Channel, and I then say I shall require so many ships; that is my business. Then they have a right to say, 'That is too much, we cannot afford it, and we will give up the idea of defending the Channel.' That again is their business. But they have no right whatever to say, 'You do not require that number of ships or men,' for that is not their business at all." Mr. Arnold Forster contends that we have no scheme of defence which provides, as it should do, for the functions of the Army and the fleet.

An officer of wide experience writes:—"I am not one of those who say 'the Service is going to the dogs,' as people would then probably justly say, 'Oh! it is only a growl from the old Navy.' And I yield to none in my admiration of the British bluejacket, but the slackness of the 'manœuvre' (?) fleet would never have been allowed in my day. Fancy a ship twenty years ago under way with lower booms out, going out of harbour with 'washed clothes' hanging about on lines, blue and white clothes mixed indiscriminately, or with men at 10 o'clock at night with white cap covers on! These circumstances may be perfectly in order nowadays, but it looks bad from the point of view of one who was a senior lieutenant twenty years ago."

Miss Agnes Weston, the seaman's friend, is ever on the look-out to see that those she describes familiarly as "Jack and Joe" shall not come out second best. She writes to us suggesting that although vast sums of money have been raised for wives, orphans and mothers, and great energy has been expended in the administration of these funds, yet there may still be cases of distress in connection with the Naval Service which have been as yet unrelieved. She asks her Service friends to let her know of any such cases and she will do her best for them. With the kindly thought in keeping with her character she points out that while much has been done for the widows and mothers, but little has been done for the bluejacket or marine who has been sent home worn with sickness or invalidated from the Service. She is ready to supply clothing to such a man on leaving hospital for civil life, or to find the railway fare of mother or wife to enable her "to look once more into the face of dying son or husband, and to hear his last words." All this or more Miss Weston expresses her readiness to do for the men of the Navy or those dear to them, and all who know her know how she will put her heart into the doing it. What is wanted, then, is that real and deserving cases of distress should be brought under her notice. Relief will follow as sure as the sun shines.

Captain R. O. M. Doig, R.M.L.I., of the Endymion, has, we regret to say, died of enteric fever, thus adding another to the list of officers of his gallant corps who have lost their lives either by disease or in action since the complications arose in China in June last. A report was published in the daily papers on Monday last that Lieuts. H. G. B. Armstrong, R.M.L.I., of the Barfleur, and C. D. O. Harman, R.M.L.I., from Wei-hai-Wei, had fallen in the attack on Peking, but we are glad to say it was officially contradicted on the following day.

THE CHINA CRISIS.

Sunday, Aug. 19.

The latest message up to this day from the Ministers in Peking was dated the 10th inst. It stated that the Legations were closely blockaded on that date, but that food was sufficient for three weeks, and all were well.

Further details have been received of the fighting on the road to Peking. At Pei-tsang it was of a most obstinate character, the Chinese positions being well chosen and strongly defended. The chief feature of the battle was a magnificent charge of the Japanese cavalry, who captured a Chinese battery.

The following is an extract from a report received at Tokio of the advance of the allied troops on Peking:—

"The allied force left Tien-tsin on Aug. 4, and on Aug. 5 and 6 took Peitsang and Yang-Tsun respectively. Gen. Ma disappeared during the engagement, while another general of the former Tien-tsin garrison was killed. The advance columns were drawn up in the following order:—Japanese first, Russians second, British third, and Americans fourth. The French contingent had to remain at Yang-Tsun on account of its inadequate commissariat arrangements. The Germans, Austrians, and Italians had not started at this date. The Russians began to repair the line from Tien-tsin to Peking immediately after the fall of Tien-tsin, and the section to Yang-tsun will be completed by about Aug. 20. The Russians are also engaged in preparing the Taku-Shan-Hai-Kwan Railway. About 800 men of the Russian Railway Corps are expected to arrive at Tien-tsin from the Usuri district."

Gen. Frey, commanding the French troops, telegraphs:—

"On my return to Tien-tsin I offered the Germans, Austrians, and Italians, who are not at present represented in the international column, to facilitate the despatch of detachments to co-operate in the eventual capture of Peking. They all gratefully accepted."

The British transports with Indian troops which left Shanghai for the north were recalled by a torpedo-destroyer, and returned to Wusung. The British troops have since been landed in the settlement.

The following officers will join the headquarters staff of the Indian force in China:—Brig.-Gen. Pipon, Capt. Coxhead, R.A., and Col. Shone and Major J. G. Day, R.E. The transports Nurami, with the 16th Bengal Lancers, and Rewa, with the brigade supply column, have arrived at Hong-Kong. The former has proceeded to Taku. The transport Nairung has left Calcutta with troops from India to China. The German transports Wittekind and Frankfurt have left Kiauchau for Taku. Three German transports with 3,500 troops on board, and a French transport conveying 600 troops and 350 mules, entered the Suez Canal on Friday last, en route to Taku. Three German torpedo boats also arrived at Port Said.

Monday, Aug. 20.

The Secretary of the Admiralty informs us that the following telegram was received from Rear-Admiral Bruce on Saturday morning:—"Peking captured Aug. 15. Legations safe. Details follow."

The following telegram has also been received at the Admiralty from Rear-Admiral, China, dated Aug. 19, Chifu:—

"I have been informed on authority of Japanese, street fighting still continues in Peking, part of which is on fire. Yung Lu prevented Empress from leaving, and last stand now being made in inner city, which is surrounded by Allies and being bombarded."

Gen. Chaffee telegraphs from Chifu, Aug. 19:—"Peking, Aug. 15.—We entered Legations' grounds at five o'clock last evening with 14th and Light Battery. Eight wounded during day's fighting. Otherwise all well."

Admiral Remy telegraphs from Chifu, Aug. 19:—"Telegraph line to Peking interrupted. Inner city is being bombarded by Allies."

The following telegram has been received from the Japanese Gen. Yamaguchi, dated Peking, Wednesday, Aug. 15:—

"Early yesterday morning the allied forces attacked Peking on the eastern side, opening with artillery fire. The wall was obstinately held by the enemy. The Japanese and Russians were on the northern side of the Tunchau Canal and the British and Americans on the south side. That night the Japanese blew up the Choa-yang and Tonghi gates on the eastern side of the Tartar city, and so entered Peking. Meanwhile the British and Americans entered by the Tung-Pien gate in the Chinese city. Parties were at once detached from the two forces, and with the Legations as their objective, met close to them and established communication with the foreigners. All the Ministers and their staffs were found to be safe. The Japanese loss was over 100 killed and wounded, including three officers. The Chinese loss was over 400 killed. The losses of the Allies have not yet been ascertained."

Vice Admiral Alexieff telegraphs under date, Tien-tsin, Aug. 16, via Chifu, Aug. 17:—

"Our troops and those of the Allies entered Peking on the evening of Aug. 14, after a bombardment lasting one day, and after blowing up the gate in the eastern side of the wall."

The French have made arrangements to land and quarter 150 bluejackets in their concession at Shanghai.

Tuesday, Aug. 21.

The headquarters of the Allied forces were established in their respective Legations. The Imperial Palace still offered an obstinate resistance when the despatch was sent off. There was a conflict of evidence as to the whereabouts of the Dowager-Empress and the Emperor. Chinese official statements made it appear that they left the city a few days before its capture. The commanders of the Allied forces, on the other hand, seemed to believe that they were still in the Imperial Palace. There were growing indications that the Powers are agreed not to push their military operations further than is necessary to effect the punishment of those directly responsible for the disorders; to secure an indemnity for injury to the persons and property of their subjects; and to re-establish a stable Government.

The following transports arrived at Hong-Kong on Monday:—Nuttha, conveying the 2nd Coolie Corps, 64th Native Field Hospital; Ula, carrying the 3rd Bombay Cavalry and 67th Native Field Hospital and details; Olive, conveying the 41st Native General Hospital; and Upaua, carrying Bombay Cavalry and remainder of 67th Native Field Hospital. The Italian transports Singapore, Uva Mignetta, and the Italian cruiser Stromboli have also arrived. The departure of the transports is prevented by a typhoon. A thanksgiving service for the relief of Peking has been held in the cathedral. The transports Nerbudda, carrying the staff of the 3rd Brigade, and Sumatra, conveying a further part of the Indian contingent, have left Calcutta for China. The transport Sherman, having on board the 5th, 2nd, and 8th Infantry Bats., and 720 horses, has left San Francisco for Taku, via Nagasaki.

The following despatch has been received at Berlin from the Admiral second in command of the German Cruiser Squadron, dated Taku, Aug. 17:—

"Capt. von Pohl, the commander of the Hansa, has no fresh news. Major-Gen. Hoepffner telegraphs that telegraphic communication with the Russian leader has been restored and an adjutant sent to him. The detachment will presumably muster at Tien-tsin this evening and then make a forced march to Peking."

Chinese official reports announce that Li Ping Heng was wounded on the 10th inst. in the fighting with the Allies, and died on the 12th.

Wednesday, Aug. 22.

The following telegram from Rear-Admiral Bruce, dated Taku, Aug. 19, was received at the Admiralty:—"The Allies are reported to have entered the Sacred City of Peking on Aug. 17."

The United States Government received a communication from Mr. Conger at Peking, via Chifu, Aug. 20. The Minister says:—

"Saved. Relief arrived to-day; the Allied troops entered the city with little trouble. It is not yet known where the Imperial family is. Except the deaths already reported, all the Americans are alive and well. Desperate efforts were made last night to exterminate us."

Two French transports, conveying 1,470 troops, and a German hospital ship, with a staff of 240 persons, including physicians, nurses, and attendants, have passed Port Said en route to Taku. A battalion of Zouaves embarked at Algiers for Taku on board the transport Les Indes. Lieut.-Col. Marchand, who is at present attached to the 4th Regiment of Marine Infantry, is gazetted to-day to serve on the staff of the French Expeditionary Corps in China. The Korea has left Odessa for the Far East with 1,000 troops and 6,000 tons of cargo, including war stores.

Thursday, Aug. 23.

The Foreign Office issued last evening the appended despatch, the first received from Sir Claude MacDonald since the relief of Peking. The communication was not in cypher, and presumably, therefore, there is now free open communication:—

"Sir Claude MacDonald to the Marquess of Salisbury. (Received Aug. 21, 11 p.m., via Chefoo, Aug. 21, 6 p.m.)"

"Following are British casualties in garrison up to date of relief:—

"Killed.—Capt. Strouts, Ptes. Scadding and Phillips. Legation: David Oliphant and Warren. Missionary: Huberley James.

"Wounded.—Richardson, Morrison (Times correspondent), and 20 marines; all doing well.

"Rest of British in Legation all doing well."

The Secretary of the Admiralty informs us that the following telegram has been received from Rear-Admiral Bruce at Taku:—

"Aug. 20.—Following telegram has been received from the General Officer Commanding at Peking, Aug. 17:—

"Regret that owing to heavy road and forced march Naval Brigade was unable to participate in the entry yesterday. The way they have brought their guns by boat and road from Tien-tsin is an achievement of which they may be proud. Following are the casualties in British force during the siege of the Legations:—

"Killed.—Wei-hai-wei detachment, R.M.L.I., June 28: Pte. A. Scadding, Ply. 8683. June 29: Pte. C. W. Phillips, Chat. 9065.

"Died of Wounds.—Capt. Bernard M. Strouts, R.M.L.I., from Wei-hai-wei.

"Dangerously wounded.—June 25: Capt. L. S. T. Halliday, R.M.L.I., of Orlando; Pte. A. G. Sawyer, R.M.L.I., Po. 8526, of Orlando; Pte. A. T. Layton, R.M.L.I., Chat. 9640, from Wei-hai-wei.

"Seriously wounded.—Pte. W. J. Sparkes, R.M.L.I., Po. 9604, of Orlando; Pte. A. J. Tickner, R.M.L.I., Chat.

9672, from Wei-hai-wei; Cpl. W. Gregory, R.M.L.I., Ply. 6529, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. W. Roe, R.M.L.I., Po. 8935, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. J. W. Heap, R.M.L.I., Po. 8605, of Orlando; Pte. A. E. Westbrook, R.M.L.I., Po. 9113, of Orlando.

"Wounded and returned to duty.—Capt. Edmund Wray, R.M.L.I., from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. G. Goddard, R.M.L.I., Po. 9255, of Orlando; Pte. T. R. Allin, R.M.L.I., Ply. 8687, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. W. Horne, R.M.L.I., Po. 8816, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. K. King, R.M.L.I., Ply. 8333, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. S. W. Haden, R.M.L.I., Ply. 8630, from Wei-hai-wei; Pte. W. T. Woodward, R.M.L.I., Po. 8926, from Wei-hai-wei.

"Sick in hospital.—Pte. P. A. Rose, R.M.L.I., Po. 9290, of Orlando, of fever.

"Wounded are progressing very favourably except Pte. Sawyer."

"Some fighting reported about six miles south of Tien-tsin, Aug. 19."

The American and Russian flags were planted on the East Wall of Peking at eleven o'clock on Tuesday, Aug. 14. The Indian troops entered the British Legation at one o'clock, and the American at three. They met with a joyful reception from the emaciated tenants, who could not have held out much longer, as they had only three days' rations, and the Chinese had been attacking them furiously for two days. The Japanese began the battle before daylight, and were still fighting about the North Wall when the news was despatched. The Japanese casualties are unknown, but the Russians lost five killed and twelve wounded, and the British and Americans a few wounded. The plan of the allied commanders was to make a general attack the next day. The troops were arriving in camp, which had been pitched five miles to the east of the city, all night. They were much exhausted, and in this condition had to sleep in the corn-fields in pouring rain. The allied generals were alarmed by the sounds of a heavy attack on the Legation, and pushed forward independently, the British, American, and French troops on the left of the river, and the Russians and Japanese on the right. They started at two o'clock in the morning. The Japanese diverted the brunt of the resistance to the northern city, their artillery engaging the Chinese heavily. The British and Americans met with little resistance until they entered the city, where street fighting ensued. They finally entered the foreign settlement through the canal.

Friday, Aug. 24.

The following telegram was published by the Secretary of State for India from Sir A. Gaselee, commanding the China Expeditionary Force, dated Chifu, Aug. 21:—

"Peking, Aug. 15.

"At a conference on Aug. 12, it was agreed that the Allied Forces should concentrate within five miles of Peking on Aug. 14, and assault on Aug. 15. The attack, however, was begun in the early morning of the 14th, and our troops had to make a forced march of 15 miles, from Tung-chau, in great heat. We were on extreme left, and attacked south-east gate of Chinese City. There was practically no opposition at that point, as we were not expected there, and portions of the 7th Rajputs and 24th Punjab Infantry broke down gate and rushed in. Fusiliers and 1st Sikhs followed on, with some cavalry and guns.

"I then sent whatever cavalry were at hand and 24th Punjab Infantry to Temple of Heaven to secure our left flank and a camping ground, and with the other corps pushed on towards the Legations. At 3 p.m. we got on the canal opposite water gate, and were signalled to from the wall held by Legations. I, with some of my staff and about 70 men of the 7th Rajputs and 1st Sikhs, rushed across the almost dry moat and entered through water gate without any loss. We found all well in Legations. Sir Claude MacDonald at once showed me round position with a view to further action.

"Meanwhile our field artillery were brought up to fire at central gate of Tartar City, but a sortie by Americans and Russians of the garrison along the wall anticipated the bombardment, and the gate fell into our hands. Two field guns were then brought into Legation, and the rest sent back to Temple of Heaven.

"About 5 p.m. Americans under Gen. Chaffee entered Legation, and then moved on towards central gate of Tartar City for the night. By nightfall we had about 400 men in Legation. * during evening at Temple of Heaven were engaged and after inflicting heavy losses occupied south gate of Chinese City."

* Some words have apparently fallen out here.

Intelligence received from Peking, Aug. 16, via Chifu, Aug. 22, states that the Americans attacked the Imperial city and forced five gates on the 15th. A conference of generals was then held, and the troops were withdrawn, after leaving Capt. Reilly, commanding the 5th Battery, and 5 men killed and 18 men wounded. On the 16th the Peitang cathedral, in the north of the city, which was garrisoned by 30 French and 10 Italian bluejackets, and which had had no communication with the rest of the foreigners since the siege began, was relieved by the British, Japanese, and French.

The officers of the combined forces were clearing the Imperial city of the enemy and posting international sentries in the Palace building, to prevent looting and destruction, but; the Russian officer is stated to have represented to his colleagues that his country is at war with China. The whereabouts of the Empress-Dowager were as yet unknown. Fighting reported near Tien-tsin.

Navy Personal.

The following telegram has been addressed by Her Majesty the Queen to the Officer Commanding the Royal Marine Guard, Peking:—

"I thank God that you and those under your command are rescued from your perilous situation. With my people I have waited with the deepest anxiety for the good news of your safety and a happy termination to your heroic and prolonged defence. I grieve for the losses and sufferings experienced by the besieged. V.R.I."

The following telegram has been addressed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to Rear-Admiral Bruce:—

"Convey following message to Officer Commanding Marine Guard, Peking:—'Board of Admiralty send their heartfelt congratulations on your rescue. They have felt intense anxiety as to your safety. Your countrymen are proud of your heroic defence.'"

The following telegram has also been addressed by their Lordships to the Officer Commanding Naval Brigade of Relief Force:—

"We congratulate you on your share in the arduous operations which have resulted in relief of Legations and Guards at Peking."

Admiral Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Bart., A.D.C., Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, remains in command at that port until October 3.

Vice-Admiral Sir Harry Rawson, commanding the Channel Squadron, left Portland on Tuesday last, with the vessels under his orders that are not in dockyard hands, for Berehaven, where exercises and evolutions will be carried out for a period of five weeks.

Vice-Admiral Sir William Kennedy is to be, as we previously intimated, Admiral Sir N. Bowden-Smith's successor as Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, and will be able to retain the command until January, 1902, unless an unexpected vacancy occurs prior thereto. He will be compulsorily retired in March of the following year. His selection for the appointment is greatly appreciated by his numerous friends.

Vice-Admiral Sir F. G. D. Bedford, Commander-in-Chief of the North American and West Indian station, is not to be transferred to the Sheerness command. Barring the advantage of being at home, his present appointment is the more pleasurable of the two, and one that the late Sir Geoffrey Phipps-Hornby was anxious to obtain, but was told that his services were required at a more important post—the Mediterranean. Sir Frederick is to be at Bar Harbour on the 3rd prox. in the Crescent, accompanied by a portion of his squadron, and will be met by the Northern Division of the United States Navy.

Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Squadron, and Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, second in command, arrived at Crete on Monday last, and on the following day presented Prince George of Greece, High Commissioner, with the Grand Cross of the Bath, recently conferred on His Royal Highness by Her Majesty. Sir John will visit the Sultan of Turkey at Stamboul at the end of this month.

Rear-Admiral Charles C. Drury, Vice-President of the Ordnance Committee, attains the age of fifty-four on Monday next.

Rear-Admiral H. L. Pearson, Commander-in-Chief of the Australian station, returned to the naval headquarters at Sydney, N.S.W., from New Zealand on Saturday last. His flagship the Royal Arthur, is provided for in this year's estimates to be refitted and recommissioned at Sydney, but statements have appeared that our Australian brethren desire a more powerful and imposing vessel, and that the Blake, or a larger cruiser, would be substituted. At the present time there appears to be no intention of altering the arrangement. It is unfortunate that a paucity of battleships of the Renown type precludes the appropriation of one of that class to relieve the Royal Arthur.

Rear-Admiral Arthur R. Tinklar (retired), Governor of Birmingham Prison, relinquishes his post after twenty-three years' service in that department. He was originally appointed Governor of Worcester Prison while on the active list of captains. He joined the service as Naval Cadet 1848, became Sub-Lieut. 1855, Lieut. 1856, Commander 1867, Captain 1875, and retired 1882; and assumed the rank of retired Rear-Admiral 1890. He possesses the Crimean medal with clasp for Sebastopol, and the China medal with Canton clasp (1858-61).

Captain W. H. May, of the Excellent, whose period of service in command of the principal gunnery establishment expired on the 10th inst., remains without appointment, at the pleasure of the Admiralty, to admit of certain important duties being carried out under his personal supervision. On their completion he will probably be relieved by Captain Arthur Barrow, of the Prince George, whose long service as a gunnery officer and in the Naval Ordnance and Naval Intelligence Departments eminently fit him for administering such a highly important position.

Captain R. McAlpine, of the Cambrian, pays off that cruiser on the 2nd prox., and commissions the Hyacinth on the following day, to replace her in the Training Squadron.

Captain the Hon. Hedworth Lambton addressed a political meeting at Weymouth on Saturday last, and unsparingly condemned the present Government for their procedure in South Africa. He considered that the task the country had had to perform was greatly under-estimated. The guns supplied to the Army were unsuitable for military purposes, and ridiculous toys as regards range. The present party in power had shown a remarkable lack of foresight; their knowledge was imperfect, and, while hoping for the best, they never prepared for the worst. Therefore they no longer deserved the confidence of the nation.

Commander Ernest C. T. Troubridge relieved Captain H. C. B. Hulbert in command of the Pelorus at Devonport on Wednesday last, the Admiralty having decided that that class of cruiser shall in future be commanded by commanders. This vessel has a complement of 224, and it was usual for vessels carrying more than 200 men to bear a captain, but Admiralty methods change with time. The Heroine, with a complement of 164, was commissioned by a captain in 1882, although then rated a sloop, and it was nearly eight years before the Admiralty placed them under commanders.

Commander R. H. Travers left Southampton on Saturday last in the Union-Castle steamship Carisbrooke Castle for the Cape of Good Hope, to assume command of the Tartar, in place of Captain F. R. W. Morgan, recently promoted.

Commander A. T. Stuart's appointment as Staff Captain and Queen's Harbour-Master at Malta is the fifth dockyard post that has been given to executive officers, the others being at Hong Kong, Jamaica, and Devonport (two). As he is upwards of forty-five years of age, he can only remain there barely five years, and will receive £400 a year on retirement. The Admiralty thus save £50 a year by employing him instead of a staff captain of the old navigating branch.

Commander R. H. Wellings, Inspecting Officer of Wicklow Coastguard division, has been retired under the age clause.

Commander H. R. P. Floyd, of the Fearless, who was detached from the Mediterranean at the commencement of the war in South Africa, left the Cape of Good Hope on Monday last to rejoin the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir John Fisher.

Commander the Hon. William Grimston (retired), who died at Hampton in June last, left estate valued at £5,638.

Chaplain of the Fleet (retired) the Rev. J. Cox-Edwards has been appointed to the Crown living of Ecton, Northampton, of the annual value of £470.

Fleet-Paymaster Silas Waymouth (retired) who has been secretary of the Orient Steam Shipping Company for the past twenty years, has resigned that post. At the period of obtaining it (1880) optional retirement of officers of the accountant branch was suspended. To obviate losing such a desirable appointment he was retained on half-pay on the active list for the statutory period of five years, at the expiration of which period he was compulsorily retired. His services have been highly appreciated by the company.

Fleet-Paymaster C. W. Cole, who is also a talented artist, may be congratulated on his good fortune in being transferred from the Prince George to the portguard ship at Portsmouth. As an Assistant-Paymaster he served almost entirely at home. He became Paymaster in 1876, and since then has secured three home appointments, the last two of which, Chatham depot and Hastings Coastguard, were given in succession, and after a year in the Channel Squadron he now obtains a fourth post at home. Of foreign service he was for a short period in the Mediterranean, and from 1886-88 in China. His successor in the Prince George has spent the past seven years abroad, and now again goes to sea!

Staff-Paymaster J. H. G. Chapple, of the Royal Naval Barracks, Sheerness, has been nominated secretary by Admiral Sir Charles Hotham, the Commander-in-Chief-elect of the Portsmouth station. Mr. Chapple served in a similar capacity with Sir Charles in the Pacific 1890-93, and was Admiral Sir John Hopkins' secretary in the Mediterranean 1896-99.

THE BRITISH NAVAL BRIGADE.

The Admiralty has issued the following list of officers attached to the British Naval Brigade with the Peking Relief Force:—

Centurion.—Lieut. G. H. Borrett; Assist.-Paymr. C. J. E. Roller.
Barfleur.—Lieuts. W. B. S. Wrey and H. Du C. Luard; Rev. G. M. Tichborne; Surg. J. F. Hall; Midshipman V. F. Gibbs; Major E. V. Luke, R.M.; Lieut. H. G. B. Armstrong, R.M.
Terrible.—Lieut. J. E. Drummond; Midshipmen J. A. G. Troup, E. W. Leir, J. E. Reinold, G. B. Cargill, and Wright [? W. W. Hallwright]; Capt. G. J. H. Mullins, R.M.
Endymion.—Capt. G. A. Callaghan, Officer Commanding; Lieut. A. B. Hulbert; Midshipman H. J. S. Brownrigg; Lloyd [? Capt. R. O. M. Doig, R.M.]; Staff-Surg. J. L. Thomas; Midshipman G. O. Fanshawe.
Aurora.—Lieut. T. W. Kemp.
Fame.—Lieut. R. J. B. Keyes.
Phoenix.—Commander R. G. Fraser.
Wei-hai-Wei.—Capt. W. A. Harris, R.M.; Capt. J. W. Tristan, R.M.; Lieuts. C. L. Mayhew and C. D. O. Harmar, R.M.

Doubt has been expressed as to the accuracy of this list, but, if correct, only Midshipmen Brownrigg and Fanshawe, of the Endymion, were also with Sir Edward Seymour's relief party.

We have received from Messrs. A. Davis and Co., 10, Strand, and 159, Piccadilly, a catalogue of their military saddles and equipment. This firm has long been recognised by officers as one of the best in the kingdom, and—as the details before us show—prices are very reasonable, whilst material and workmanship are unequalled.

Navv Foreign.

The French have been giving thrilling accounts of the movements of Sir Edward Seymour, and the Journal outwards them all. It prints a speech of the admiral's which is Gallic at every word. He spoke, writes the correspondent, in a voice vibrating with emotion. "Marines," he said, "I am making a call on your devotion and your heroism for a supreme duty. You must start now, march through the enemy's lines, and cut your way at any price. You will reach Tien-tsin and you will tell them there that the column cannot advance, and that it must be saved at once. Go! You will leave the dead where they fall, and the wounded who cannot follow you will consider to be dead, and you will also leave them. If necessary, let all die except one, who can reach the desired destination. Good-bye, my brave fellows, good-bye." The effect of this memorable speech, we are told, was electric. The marines cheered, and literally charged out of the camp. They were not long gone, however, when the Europeans remaining behind heard terrific firing. The marines had to come back, all their officers having been killed! In about a quarter of an hour they had lost twenty-five of their number. All the men under Admiral Seymour, says the Journal, then gave themselves up for lost, but, after a night of overwhelming anxiety, "they were relieved by the Cossacks, who were received in the camp with the wildest joy." Such is a French account in which fact has no part, and fancy is all astray. "Such tricks hath fond imaginations," as Shakespeare says.

Additional particulars concerning the loss of the Framée are now available. It appears that the Foudre rejoined the squadron on the night of the disaster, and the admiral signalled to the Framée to convey a communication to her. Those in the unfortunate destroyer did not understand the signal, and the Hallebarde was hailed by the officer of the watch in the Brennus to take an order to her to approach and receive verbal instructions. She accordingly took station at about sixty yards on the port side of the Brennus abreast of the after bridge, though not within hailing distance; but the question was put by hand-flashing lamps, "Why did you not answer the signal?" According to the Echo de Paris, this signal was not very easily taken in by the Framée, and before it was completed it was noticed that the destroyer was approaching dangerously near. Those in the flagship then distinctly heard Lieut. Mauduit-Duplessix, commanding the Framée, give the order "Vingt degrés à gauche!" the word bâbord (port) not being used. The survivors of the Framée also recall this order, and it is asserted that it reached the port engine, but not a man at the starboard engine survives, and the helmsman also was lost. What happened is therefore obscure, though Admiral Fournier, and the board of inquiry with him, incline to the belief that the mistake occurred at the helm, and that nothing went wrong with the steering gear. The Brennus was turned ten and then twenty degrees to starboard, and Lieut. Mauduit-Duplessix was heard to give the order for full speed ahead (which was not attended to), but all was in vain. At the time of the disaster the sea was calm, the bright moonlight made it almost as clear as day, and all the ships were carrying their navigation lights.

Another misfortune has occurred to the French Navy in the foundering at Brest, on the night of August 16, of a pontoon, or hulk, which had been built in the Salou dock at a cost of £80,000, reproducing exactly, in regard to protection and internal arrangement, a section of the new coast-defence battleship Henri IV. The pontoon was intended for target practice with guns and torpedoes. It was taken out of the Salou dock on the night in question, preceded by the cruiser Catinat, but sank unaccountably three hours later, and it is feared that it cannot be floated entire.

The strikes abroad seem likely to have an unfortunate effect upon shipbuilding, and foreign constructors may soon be having the same experiences as ourselves. At Messrs. Blohm and Voss's yard at Hamburg 3,000 men had gone on strike at the beginning of last week, and it seems likely that the completion of the battleship Kaiser Karl der Grosse, which has been launched there, will be retarded in consequence. In France the strikes have an unfortunate character, and do not speak well for the patriotism of the strikers. The departure of the transport Melbourne with troops and stores for China was delayed several hours, and she could not leave until stokers had been brought from Toulon to Marseilles. A determined attempt was made to impede the departure of the Polynésien. Strikers in row boats hung on to the ship, and got in the way, shouting "Vive la Grève!" while ten of them got on board through the port-holes and threatened the stokers who would not join them. Something like a riot occurred, and numbers were arrested, while one policeman was stabbed seriously. Determined efforts were made to prevent the P. and O. liner discharging her cargo at Marseilles last Monday. By the strenuous efforts of the authorities the differences have since been accommodated, and the Marseilles strike is at an end.

The Russian cruiser Variag, built by Messrs. Cramp, has successfully undergone her trials. Although an accident interfered with the proposed continuous twelve-hour run, the speed developed during 7½ hours was so far in excess of the contract requirement that the Russian Board of Inspection agreed that the essential elements of the trial had been complied with. During the run from Boston the speed trial began off Nantucket Shoals. A continuous speed of 23.6 to 23.7 knots was developed for 7½ hours. Then an accident occurred to one of the high pressure cylinders, which compelled the shutting off of the engine affected. The remaining part of the contemplated trial was, therefore, abandoned. The Russian Board of Inspectors, however, took not only into consideration the speed developed in the first 7½ hours, but also the speed which the vessel displayed previously on the run off Boone Island, when she made 24.6 knots in a spurt, and decided that there could be no reasonable doubt of the ability of the vessel to maintain a speed considerably in excess of the contract requirement of 23 knots an hour. They indeed informed Mr. Charles H. Cramp that they considered the Variag to be "one of the great triumphs of naval construction."

The rapid increase of the material of the United States Navy is raising certain difficulties. Rear-Admiral Hichborn's report shows that seventy vessels are in hand or to be built, including seven battleships in course of construction, and five more for which tenders are to be asked; six completely-armoured cruisers of not less than 13,800 tons (sheathed) or 13,400 tons (un-sheathed), and twenty-two knots, to be laid down; four monitors, sixteen destroyers, and six submarine boats of the Holland class. But the increase of the personnel does not keep pace with the material development; and steps will soon have to be taken, for Annapolis does not provide a sufficiency of cadets. It is intended to keep a large force in commission, both for the benefit of the ships and to give sea training to the companies, but apparently not sufficient foresight has been exercised in regard to expanding the personnel. There are no men available, nor are likely to be, for the large number of torpedo craft now approaching completion, and the question is raised as to what is to be done with these, for at the present time the Government has no fresh water basin where the boats can be laid up in ordinary. These questions are occupying the serious attention of the Navy Department.

A writer in the Yacht, whose signature of P. de la Rouveraye is unfamiliar to us, devotes an article to the rôle of torpedo-boats in the Mediterranean in case of war with this country. He remarks that our policy would be to attract the French squadron from port and to bring it to action with large superiority of force on our side, or otherwise to blockade it at Toulon. The blockade of that port, says the new writer, would not be without danger for us, if torpedo-boats were stationed in advantageous positions from Port Vendres to Villefranche. We are told that the Western basin of the Mediterranean is a fine field for the action of French torpedo-boats, which they would command from Gibraltar to Malta. At the same time, too much must not be expected from torpedo-boats. They must not be sent on long cruises, but be used for direct attack within 150 miles of their base of operations. M. de la Rouveraye would have the boats united in flotillas or groups, and used with boldness and decision, and then, he says, when they had done their work, assisted by the submarines, the squadron might come out intact and complete the work. We do not doubt that this argument broadly outlines the policy that the French would set before themselves in case of hostilities in the Mediterranean.

HARBOUR DEFENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In your "Navy Notes" I observe a reference to certain incidents which occurred during the naval manoeuvres connected with our port defence system. A vessel desiring to enter one of her own ports had apparently to send on shore to request that the electric light might be turned off her, so that she might enter in safety. Another was detained outside while the military authorities deliberated whether she was a friend or an enemy. Such difficulties, certain to ensue in war under our system, were brought out in my brochure, "The Next Naval War," a few years ago, and I am not surprised to find they have been realised even in simulated hostilities. You rightly observe that "what is actually wanted is that those entrusted with harbour defence should clearly understand what it is they have got to defend the harbour against, and that the primary requirement of a British admiral is that the entrance should be unobstructed as far as his ships are concerned." But how is this to be obtained when forts, submarine mines, and searchlights are worked by men unacquainted with ships, and unable to discriminate between foreign war vessels and our own? A sailor would know at once whether the approaching vessel belonged to our own fleet or that of an enemy, and a brief inspection would decide whether she was to receive a friendly or hostile reception. It is not a question whether the matter should be in the hands of the War Office or the Admiralty, but of having the work done in the most efficient manner, and there can be no question that as against sea attack the defensive weapons should be in the hands of seamen. Why the War Office authorities allowed themselves to be saddled with this duty I could never make out, but it has resulted, as the late Mr. Stanhope once said, in 125,000 men of the Army being allotted to garrison duties, independent of local levies, who should be available for defending the Empire beyond our own shores—its first (and most important) duty. Millions have been spent in providing against an attack which, if we possess an adequate fleet, can never take place. The Admiralty was indifferent what was spent in this direction, provided it did not appear in the Navy Estimates. The naval authorities would not undertake the defence of Portsmouth, but were ready to guarantee that no enemy's fleet should approach within a few miles of it! Only when the War Office began sowing mines in every direction did the Navy remonstrate against their harbours being obstructed. But the system remains as a gigantic absurdity leading to a witty expression by someone that in time of war it will be more dangerous for British ships to enter their own harbours than to approach those of the enemy.

S. EARDLEY-WILMOT, Captain, R.N. (retired).

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

- FUSIL.—By Royal Warrant.
 JUSTICE.—We fail to see how you can well expect better terms.
 LIGHT INFANTRY.—By selection, certainly.
 DOUBTFUL.—A visit to the library of the Royal United Service Institution would soon put you right on the points you raise.
 LEX.—The ruling of the President was undoubtedly right.
 ONE WHO KNOWS.—Many thanks.
 L. J. P.—April 1, 1870.
 RED MARINE.—Why not apply direct.
 P. W. (Aldershot).—There are several openings.
 CHERUBIM.—At the close of the war in South Africa most probably.
 THREE STARS.—There is no such intention at present.
 LOOKER-ON.—Your letter is too personal.
 C. C.—There is no instance in our annals, that we know of, of a General-in-Chief in time of war being accompanied by his wife at headquarters in the field. The case in question is peculiar, but so are the circumstances. It cannot be said with strict accuracy that when the General is for Service reasons quartered in a town which was the seat of Government, and is still the capital of a State, he is "in the field," though he is directing warlike operations from it.

ACCORDING to the latest returns for 1899, 1816 officers of the Volunteers have qualified in tactics or artillery. This is an increase of 122 over the previous return.

THE next course of instruction at the School of Musketry, Hythe, will commence on Sept. 26, and continue until Oct. 18. The course is a special one for officers and permanent staff and other sergeants of the Yeomanry and Volunteers.

Mrs. MACKINNON, wife of Col. W. H. Mackinnon, commanding the C.I.V.'s, has paid into the account of the Naval and Military Bazaar at Olympia, a clear profit of £785 from the refreshment, dinner, and tea stall over which she presided.

ATTENTION is being specially directed to the clause in the Volunteer Regulations which provides that apprentices are not to be enrolled without the consent of their masters. The provisions of that paragraph are to be rigidly adhered to.

OWING to the difficulties in the way of subalterns of militia artillery obtaining a "P.S." certificate in time for the Army examination next month, general officers commanding districts are empowered to assemble local boards of examination, which will grant certificates that can be accepted in lieu of "P.S." certificates from artillery candidates at that examination.

THE Queen, through Sir Arthur Bigge, has congratulated the committee of the Scottish Regiments Gifts Fund on the success of its "generous and patriotic work" in sending out 20,000 quarter-pound tins of tobacco and a pipe with each parcel for the non-commissioned officers and men of Scottish Regiments in South Africa. The committee has received £670 in response to its appeal. As the fund is about to be closed, it is desired that any further contributions should be sent at once to Mr. W. A. Martin, at the Royal Scottish Corporation Hall, Crane Court, Fleet Street.

THE "Grand Prix" at the Paris Exhibition, which is the highest possible award, has been obtained by Messrs. John Dewar and Sons, of Perth and London; so once again they have defeated all competitors. Considering that at all great international exhibitions the juries are composed of the finest experts of the day, no better testimony could possibly have been paid as to the excellence of their brand. It will be remembered that in 1890 at the International Exhibition at Edinburgh they obtained not only the Diploma of Honour but the Gold Medal, and they have no hesitation in saying that during the intervening time their quality has been steadily improving.

tice dated the 6th day of August 1900 made in an Action in the matter of the Estate of RICHARD
CRANCH deceased Wilson v. Child 1900 C No.
2394 whereby an enquiry was directed whether
DAVID THOMAS named in the Will of the said
Richard Cranch is living or dead and if dead when he died and who are his legal personal representatives the said David Thomas (if living) and his legal personal representative or next of kin (if he died since the 2nd February 1899) are by their Solicitors on or before the 26th day of October 1900 to come in and prove their claims at the Chambers of Mr. Justice Kekewich Royal Courts of Justice Strand London or in default thereof
they will be peremptorily excluded from the benefit of the said order.

The said David Thomas is believed to have been born at Gelligear, near Newport, Monmouthshire,
and to have enlisted in the 23rd Welsh Fusilier
Guards between the years 1854 and 1865.

Tuesday, the 6th day of November, 1900, at 12 o'clock at noon, at the said Chambers, is appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon the claims.

PICKERING'S "KHAKI-BLANCO"

For cleaning and renovating "Khaki" Accoutrements, Helmets, Shoes, etc.

Everybody knows the merits of Pickering's Blanco for whitening all articles of Buckskin Leather, or White Canvas, and now Pickering's have met the want of the day by introducing "Khaki-Blanco," a similar preparation to Blanco, but of a "Khaki" colour; it is prepared in a most careful manner to ensure an Evenness of Colour, and contains nothing at all injurious to any "Khaki" article to which it may be applied. "Khaki" cleaned regularly with this article keeps a good colour and always looks like new.

White belts and other military equipment, buckskin and canvas shoes, etc., can be made khaki colour by the application of "Khaki-Blanco," and this will in nowise interfere with their being re-whitened with Blanco at any future time.

SOLD BY ALL THE USUAL DEALERS.

Report.
"I cannot speak too highly of the gold watch.
No 17,179 of your make, and which I purchased from you in January, 1876. It was my constant companion during the winter 1875-76 in the Arctic and accompanied me sledging. It was about the best, if not the very best, in the Discovery, and since my return home continues to perform equally satisfactorily."—M.D., D.L.H., B.N.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

RECENT news from the seat of war marks a higher degree of virility in the conduct of affairs as well as more decided progress in the military operations. Moreover, by a favourable turn of fortune and by good strategy De Wet has been apparently reduced to impotence, having been forced to return south stripped of guns and train, and accompanied by but few followers. The presence of Lord Roberts again at the head of the main operating force is a reassuring sign that the war, which for some time has degenerated into a series of worrying raids, elusive flights, and harassing pursuits, will now be pressed home to a finish. On the 24th ult., Lord Roberts was at Wonderfontein, twenty-four miles east of Middleburg, for some time the British advanced post. Pushing forward next day to Belfast, sixteen miles further east, he reconnoitred the enemy's defensive lines, which lay along the crests of a series of ridges about five miles to the south-east of Belfast and Dalmanutha. Here the Boers had evidently determined to make a vigorous stand. Sir Redvers Buller's column, advancing from the south-west, faced this position at Leeuwkloof, encountering considerable opposition. General Pole-Carew, marching by the railway, was on Buller's left, having occupied Belfast on the 24th ult. unopposed, and was in touch with the enemy's main position near Dalmanutha. General French, well in advance as usual, with the cavalry, was threatening the Boer left to the south and east of Machadodorp. During Sunday a protracted engagement was fought over a front of nearly thirty miles. Buller operated south-west of Dalmanutha, with General Lyttelton's division of infantry and two cavalry brigades. French, with two brigades of his cavalry, passing rapidly from the right front to the left of the British line, pushed to the north by the western side of Belfast, and in co-operation with the mounted infantry, attacked the enemy on their left flank, driving them to Groenvlei, on the road to Lydenburg, while Pole-Carew, with the Guards' Brigade and the 11th Division, advanced eastwards in support, and also became hotly engaged. The progress of our troops was stubbornly disputed, the enemy bringing into action three "Long Toms," with many lighter guns. The night of Sunday was passed by General Buller's troops in bivouac on the ground they had won. On Monday further satisfactory progress was made by this force, on which fell the brunt of the fighting, and Bergendal, a very strong position about two miles north-west of Dalmanutha, was assaulted and captured. The attack was led by the 1st Batn. Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, and the 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade, the latter suffering the heaviest loss. Lord Roberts describes the affair as "a fine performance," stating that "General Buller managed his troops very skilfully, and the combination of artillery and infantry fire was most effective." On the left front of the British line French gained ground as far as Swartz kopjes on the Lydenburg road, and prepared the way for the advance of Pole-Carew's Division on Tuesday. The news of General Buller's success came to hand on Tuesday. We were left throughout Thursday in suspense, for no telegrams were issued from the War Office.

The satisfaction caused by the unexpected collapse of De Wet in his attempt to swell the enemy's resisting power in the Transvaal, has been enhanced by the news that Olivier and his three sons have been captured, when attacking Winburg in the Orange River Colony on Sunday. The attack was repulsed with loss by General Bruce-Hamilton, who had the good fortune to make the "very important capture" above recorded. Coming so quickly after Lord Roberts's despatch of the 24th ult., reporting that a small force of Yeomanry under Lieut.-Colonel Ridley was attacked near Winburg by a commando of 1,000 men with guns, and only rescued from capture, despite a gallant defence, by the prompt despatch of reinforcements, this intelligence came most opportunely. Olivier's commando, deprived of its bold and energetic leader, will now probably break up and practically disappear. In the extreme west of the strategic line a junction has been effected between Lord Methuen and Sir F. Carrington at Zeerust, which is apparently once more in British possession. Baden-Powell and Paget, who have been operating in the dense bush veldt north of Pretoria—the former having pushed beyond Warm Baths, fifty miles out, unopposed by the enemy—have again been drawn in closer to the capital. Ian Hamilton has had a small success at Pienaar's River Station, in the same region, capturing some Boers with their transport and stock. The Boer general, Delarey, after covering De Wet's retreat with a scanty following by the bridle paths of the Megaliesberg Hills, is reported to have made his way eastwards, but the news is not confirmed.

Telegraphing on Thursday evening, Lord Roberts stated that the forces under his command had occupied Waterval Boven and Waterval Onder, and that Sir Redvers Buller, with some mounted men, was overlooking Nooitgedacht, which place was more or less deserted except by British prisoners, who were proceeding in a continuous stream westward up the line to join Lord Roberts' headquarters, the Boers having let them all go so that their actions might not be impeded. It is evident from this that the Boers are in desperate straits, Lord Roberts having seized the strategic centre of the Netherlands Railway, and completely separated all but a remnant of their territories from the sea. Thus as the outcome of a week's operations, conceived with masterly forethought, the whole situation in the Transvaal is in our hands. The blow struck by Sir Redvers Buller at Bergendal has, it is only too clear, completely demoralised the enemy for the moment. They may be able to rally to make another stand or two, but their power for effective operations is gone. Mr. Kruger and his followers are evidently determined to stick to the railway if they can, and so make good their escape by way of Delagoa Bay. When last heard of they were at Nelspruit well on the way to the Portuguese frontier, whilst what remains of the Boer Army of the Transvaal is making for Barberton, not to the fastnesses of the Lydenberg region, as it was thought would be the case. If the statements coming to hand from Lorenzo Marques are to be relied upon, the result of General Botha's defeat has assumed the proportions of a catastrophe. Boer fugitives are said to be hurrying to Delagoa Bay, whilst the last boxes of bar gold, Mr. Kruger's plunder, have been shipped in the German steamer Kronprinz. The vessel has left harbour loaded with bullion, under the care of Erasmus, recently a prominent member of the defunct Volksraad. The end, therefore, there is reason to hope, is fast nearing, and soon it will become the duty of the home Government to put the finishing touches on the work which Lord Roberts has accomplished.

CASUALTIES IN WAR.

WE have now been engaged for nearly ten months in a campaign against a singularly mobile and obstinate enemy, provided with the newest improvements in armament, and as a consequence have incurred losses in killed and wounded which amount in round numbers to 10 per cent. of the mean strength of the forces actually landed in the theatre of war. In ten hours' fighting at Gravelotte the victors lost almost exactly the same numbers out of about half the strength engaged, and, if we go back to the Seven Years' War and the battles of the Napoleonic epoch, we find many cases of treble the percentage of loss inflicted, and suffered in half the time. It is difficult for the unbiassed mind to reconcile these facts with the outcry against the unparalleled bloodshed and slaughter of war under modern conditions. Even if we analyse individual actions, with such information as to morning states as we at present possess, we find very few instances, if indeed any, in which the troops on the ground, taken as a whole, have suffered even 10 per cent. of loss; although, according to our critics of the daily press, the men do not know how to take cover, and, as regards the Regular Army, which has done most of the fighting, are led by the most incompetent regimental and general officers in the world's history. But if the avoidance of loss be taken as the highest standard of leadership, the figures above quoted would show a very high figure of merit indeed, and the correspondents cannot have it both ways. Personally, we consider that this question of avoiding losses has been given a significance far beyond its true value, and that, if it is to be elevated to the dignity of a dogma, it will presently become impossible to conduct a campaign to a successful issue at all, and the truly avoidable losses, viz., those incurred by exposure to hardships and privations, will outweigh the savings on the battlefield many times over, as, indeed, they are already beginning to do in the present instance.

There seems to be a mistaken view abroad that it hurts more to be killed with a crowd than as an individual. On that point it is difficult to produce direct evidence, but if anything can be adduced from the sufferings of the wounded, then it is certain that a crowd of men take their hurts in far better spirits than a single man wounded in some petty skirmish and knocked out of all his chances for the remainder of a campaign. This sentimental outcry about our losses arises from an entirely false development of humanitarian feeling absolutely opposed to the fundamental fact well known to all physicians and surgeons, viz., that "human suffering is not cumulative." The only thing that signifies to the State is the gross total of lives lost and cripples made during the continuance of the struggle; it is entirely immaterial to the nation at large whether it is Privates Jones and Brown who figure in the casualty returns or Privates Smith and Robinson, and the duration of the struggle can only be reduced in proportion to the skill of the leaders in getting the most out of the men entrusted to their care.

It is in this that the "genius" of a great general really asserts itself; not in the designing of elaborate manœuvres to turn a flank or to pierce the centre, but in so exactly measuring the quality of his men that the task he sets them never exceeds the cohesion which discipline has imparted to them, and that no portion of the work has to be done twice over, as in the case when reinforcements arrive too late, and find the troops they are to support already beaten. And the fault of putting in fresh troops too soon is almost equally to be deprecated, for that means exposing more men to the fire of the enemy than the conditions actually require. But to the troops themselves, under existing conditions, the form in which they are employed matters nothing—for it is only the individual risk which essentially matters—and against the wild unaimed fire of modern battlefields, where not one bullet in many thousands hits the individual for whom it was intended, it must be perfectly evident that no conceivable grouping of units can make the slightest difference. If you go out for a walk in the rain in the company of a friend, you will get just as wet if he walks on one side or the other, in front, or behind you.

All that signifies is the duration of exposure, which can only be modified by the skill of the leader in exactly calculating the fire power—it is necessary to put in to meet the immediate demands of the situation. All this was thoroughly understood in the old days, and as a consequence we hear nothing of tactical societies being formed to discuss how the losses in the coming campaigns were to be avoided. On the contrary, they were taught that the utmost they were capable of would be exacted from them, and as a consequence took a pride in meeting their general's demands. If in the near future we are called on to meet an enemy who opposes us with disciplined men in a dense firing line, with ten men to the yard available as reinforcements, we fear our South African tactics will involve us in disasters to which the worst of our recent reverses will appear as the mildest of punishments.

Army Notes.

There are many rumours as to the direction of the reforms which the Government propose to introduce for the improvement of our military system, but it is well that these reports should be accepted with caution, for, as yet, we understand, matters have not reached a stage to justify any statement as to the intentions of those upon whom the responsibility rests of submitting a practical scheme. Certain definite lines of policy have been laid down, but beyond that nothing can be known, for the moment is held to be inopportune for launching a complete programme of reform. That great changes are pending goes without saying. It is held, however, to be desirable that, before any actual steps are taken to bring new systems into operation, the Government should obtain the views of senior officers now exercising command in South Africa. At present these officers are fully employed in conducting the final operations for the conclusion of the campaign. The Committee of Defence has held meetings during the last few months at which the whole question has been discussed in the broadest sense, and it is fully recognised that the demands of the public for a bettering of our military position must be met in the spirit which they are made. At the same time it is held to be imperative that, whatever the proposals of the Government may ultimately be, they should be thought out carefully and not take the form of hasty legislation. A feeling prevails that Lord Wolseley is antagonistic to the Government. For such impression no foundation exists. Lord Wolseley on certain points of policy is not perhaps satisfied that all is as it should be, but he is too good a soldier, and certainly far too loyal a colleague, to throw difficulties in the way when the interests of the Army are concerned. He has been a most conscientious and high-minded Commander-in-Chief, and has devoted his best energies to the duties of his office. That all who have been associated with him readily acknowledge. His lordship holds strong views on many details of administration, and has not failed to make those views known, but, actuated as he has been by a feeling of duty, he has not ceased for a moment to assist the Minister for War in his one great object—the improvement of the condition of all arms and the general development of our system of defence. It is well that the public for the moment should await the outcome of events. The difficulties of the Government are great, for the conduct of the war has taxed the War Office enormously, and has prevented those in high authority there from devoting the time and attention that they in other circumstances might have done to the big question with which they have to deal. It is only fair that allowances should be made, for by failing to make those allowances the public would simply be paving the way for a failure, which all who are sensible of the wants of the nation would regret.

However comic the Chinese situation may appear at this distance from the theatre of events it is tragic enough to the people on the spot.
